Directed by Larry Weed, assistant director of bands and low brass instructor at the University, the group displayed great versatility by including in the program two semi-classical numbers, a "kiddie ballet", a medley from "My Fair Lady", and two Christmas medleys.

The program began with Nelhybel's "Trittico", Movement I, and the finale of "Death and Transfiguration" by Robert Strauss. "Kiddie Ballet" followed; it sounded at times ("Strolling the Baby Stroller") like the soundtrack from a 1942 musical, but the band made up for this slight flaw with a very entertaining "Cops and Robbers" complete with whistles, gunshots and sirens.

The high point of the evening was the "My Fair Lady" medley, done in a professional Broadway style. Sheets of Christmas song lyrics were distributed to the audience to allow them to take part in the program, between "Christmas March" by Goldman and Leroy Anderson's "A Christmas Festival".

December Moratorium Plans Center in Local Action

From the Jewish festival of Chanukah to Christmas Eve, anti-war leaders plan the December Moratorium as a series of low-key local activities in contrast to the massive demonstrations of October and November.

Planned counterdemonstrations included a City Hall rally Friday in New York and the distribution of "Tell it to Hanoi" pamphlets on campuses by the Young Americans for Freedom.

The Moratorium Committee planned an antiwar Chanukah festival for Thursday evening in New York's Times Square, to be followed by a candlelight march. The Jewish festival of lights ended at sundown Thursday.

Other antiwar activities including "caroling for peace" and wearing of black armbands were planned around the country for the weekend. More quiet protests were planned tentatively for Christmas eve.

In Washington, D.C., where police estimated 250,000 persons came together during the Nov. 15 mass protest, leaders scheduled rallies Friday at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

In San Francisco, second center of the November protest and scene of a rally that drew an estimated 85,000, the Moratorium committee planned Sunday as a "day devoted to the G.I.," with antiwar servicemen scheduled to speak at churches.

In Columbus, Ohio, the publicity chairman of the Moratorium committee, Ohio State University Associate Prof. Richard E. Stafford, resigned because he said the committee was being infiltrated by members of Students for a Democratic Society, who he said were advocating violence.

Other activities for Friday included these plans:

–The Denver American Friends Service Committee, a one-hour silent vigil near the state capitol;

–War protesters in Atlanta, distribution of 100,000 leaflets;

–St. Louis Doctors for Peace, a short march, while social workers and students picket and hand out pamphlets;

–Florissant Valley Community College, near St. Louis, a "peace careers day," with speakers to advise students of jobs outside the "military-industrial com - plex;"

–Seattle draft protestors, talking to shoppers at a downtown mall. "A march is superficial," said one organizer, "you don't have a chance to talk to anyone."

Saturday's plans included a candlelight walk in Bellings, Mont., a morning panel of anti-war Vietnam veterans in Detroit, and an evening songfest by the Las Vegas cast of the musical "Hair."

Antiwar servicemen planned a march Sunday near the Marine base at Camp Pendleton, Calif., although they have been denied a permit.

Senate Passes Tax Reform Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate passed the tax reform bill Thursday with a final burst of partisan oratory that saw Republicans and Democrats accusing each other of fiscal irresponsibility.

Approval came on a lopsided 69-22 vote with only two Democrats joining the minority in the highly charged political issue.

They were Sens. Richard B. Russell of Georgia and Spessard L. Holland of Florida who has announced his retirement and will not be running in next year's elections.

Minutes after the vote was completed, Sen. John J. Williams of Delaware, ranking GOP member of the Finance Committee, stunn the Senate by announcing he would not serve on the joint conference committee that will iron out more than 100 differences in the House and Senate bills.

The move by Williams, who had fought daily to hold back the billions in new revenue heaped on the bill during floor debate, was totally unexpected.

Sen. Jack Miller, R-Iowa, a fiscal conservative, was named to replace Williams.

Williams had repeatedly attacked the ballooning bill in the 13 days of debate and just before the vote he declared: "I will not be responsible for the action about to be taken in the Senate."

Williams, who is 65 and also has announced his retirement, said the national debt had increased more than $1 billion a month in the past year.

"The vote we are about to take will just build on that debt," he said.

Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., of the Finance Committee said, however, that "By the time they shape this bill up in conference, senators will be better satisfied than they are now."

Environmental Teach-in Stated in Near Future

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

The nation-wide Environmental Teach-In to be held April 22, 1970 will be co-ordinated locally by AQE (Action for Quality Environment), in the hopes of "encouraging students to take the initiative in organizing environmental teach-ins on campus and associated activities in the local community."

Activities, according to an AQE spokesman, will be "unlimited in scope, almost as unlimited as the problems facing us today in matters concerning the environment."

In preparation for the April 22 movement, the AQE will be sponsoring meetings, SU lobby tables, and will help form a weekly environmental section in the COLLEGIAN.

The activities for the big day will most likely center around local canvassing, teach-ins, rallies, demonstrations, and petition gathering. Plans were discussed for the symbolic burning of an automobile, the major cause of air pollution, but it was decided that the burning would contribute to the pollution of the air and the idea was dropped.

AQE will also be sponsoring in co-operation with the Collegian, a pollution photograph contest. Details will be available at a later date.

For instance, (1) a cargo-guard luggage compartment; (2) an extra set of fenders inside the fenders; (3) flush and dry rocker panels that help prevent rust and corrosion; (4) a quality built Body by Fisher; (5) Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer finish; (6) a firm, steady ride programmed by computer-selected springs; (7) six different engines and five transmissions available; (8) an available lighting group that even includes a monitor for your windshield washer fluid; (9) radios you can order, with antennas built right into the windshield and (10) the availability of a new, more compact radio/stereo tape system. America's little cars don't offer them. Nova does.
Nova also has a very appealing price. And a lot of loyal friends.
Wonder why.
Putting you first, keeps us first.

A Must Change

There has been a lot of expected controversy centering around the proposed inclusion of a Department of Black Studies into the curriculum here at UMass. Among the many obviously leading questions that whites here have asked concerning this proposal is, "What can one majoring in Black Studies do with such a major upon graduation?"

To this question I pose a similar one, "What can one majoring in European Studies do with such a major upon graduation?" The answers to both of these questions are, of course, numerous and, most of all, of equal depth.

It stands pretty much to reason that people are naturally a lot more interested in studying about the history, culture, behavior, art, etc., of their own particular race and nationality than in those of others. And yet, for hundreds of years, blacks have been going to college to find that all that is available to them is "foreign history", "foreign art", and etc, ad infinitum. Even what today is termed "American History" is foreign to black people since most of the American history books and professors exclude black people from their rightful place in the past as indeed they are in the present.

A Black Studies Department would put an immediate end to these direct, purposeful, and systematic years of racist exclusion. And, as to what a student majoring in this department could do with such an education! He would be equiped to teach same at the elemetary and secondary school level as well as with graduate work in college. He could go out to work in the black and, yes, the white community with a better understanding of what he is, what he (his people) have done, and what he can do. The whole psychology of a person knowing his background, tradition, and heritage can make all the difference in the world as far as that person's success in the world goes.

Probably above all else, the fact that the Department of Black Studies will turn out able and qualified teachers to teach black children the history, culture, and tradition that is their's is enough justification for the institution of such a department.

Today, black children are not taught, as some people believe, to hate themselves, what they are, and what they (their people) have been. On the contrary, they are taught absolutely nothing of or about themselves and their race. Their history textbooks and teachers almost completely exclude any mention of black people and their role either in this country's past or in their own country's (Africa) past. This systematic exclusion has necessarily given all black children a real hangup about themselves and their people for centuries. A Department of Black Studies will go 100% of the way in giving these children a chance to know themselves while saving them from the psychological hassle of "self awareness" that most go through now.

A Black Studies Department is an absolute necessity not only here on this campus, but on every other campus as well. It is past time that destruction was wrought on this antiquated and inhuman system that has crippled untold our children for so long. The lethal weapon here is the Black Studies Department, and the end result will be knowledge, security, and faith as opposed to ignorance, doubt, and confusion. A change is needed! A change has been proposed! And action, unity and support are in the end what will make what is now a proposal, a REALITY.

Short Circuit GE

General Electric has come to campus to recruit. As the nation's second largest defense contractor, GE, needless to say, profits greatly, the profits being the taxpayers money. Now the situation wouldn't be so bad if GE paid its workers sufficient wages to live on. It doesn't.

Neither does GE provide adequately for the safety of its employees: Of the 150,000 GE workers currently on strike against their boss, many have lost fingers or part of limbs or at least have lost time because of injuries sustained while on the job. Profits could be measured in fingers. There are thousands and thousands of industrial deaths and accidents each year, more than are killed or wounded in Vietnam, more than are injured or die in car accidents.

So GE has come to recruit. What right has anyone to prevent them from doing this? What right has anyone to forbid people to see the recruiter? Anyone has a right to see a recruiter, but by doing so, precisely because of GE's involvement in what most consider an immoral war and GE's treatment of workers, they might be abridging the rights of others, Vietnamese and others, to decent living and working conditions, and even survival! Because the recruiters are strikebreakers, by doing business with GE, even something indirect like taking a future job, you are denying someone's rights.

Industry has always put profits before humanity. How much a part of this attitude are you?

'I Am Tired and Sick'

Editor's note: The following is a letter to the Editor printed in the Miami Hurricane, the student newspaper of the University of Miami.

To The Editor:

"I am tired and sick of war. Its glory is all moonshine. It is only those who have never fired a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for blood, more vengeance, and more desolation. War is Hell."

My father, who was with Shoup of Tarawa, lost his life on another Island called Saipan. He never had a chance to come home and tell me of the blood, pain, and terror of war, because it engulfed him. I have only a Purple Heart Medal that he left to me, but he left us all the freedom to protest. He was twenty-six years old when he died fighting for freedom, and I am twenty-six years of age exercising that freedom now, so that he did not die in vain.

In 1964 I left college to enlist into the Marine Corps. In 1965 I signed a waiver allowing me, as a sole surviving son, to go into combat with my battalion. I received a Naval Commendation Medal with the Combat V. Device for heroic achievement. I also received a Purple Heart Medal for wounds that left me fifty percent disabled.

I faced the horror, felt the pain, lived in the filth, and now I appeal to you to bring my comrades home. Don't ask any more of us to be mutilated or to die. I am not asking for surrender, or asking you to dishonor America, but I am asking you to realize that when the price gets too high the field must be left.

Before anyone calls me a traitor, coward, commie, or worst of all, ask yourselves what would happen if we gave each infantryman presently in Vietnam the right to decide if he would stay or immediately leave for home.

Please do not be too quick to answer if you were never asked to lay your life on the line twenty-four hours a day.

Be careful of shouting a slogan back at me if you never watched a man die that you had to kill, or even worse, tried to find your friend's arm so that it can perhaps be sewed back on.

Don't answer me with a cliche until you have tried to hold a fellow Marine's intestine in so that he might live, or have tried in vain to stop a man's flow of blood from a hole that is larger than the battle dressing you have been issued.

I can hear my fallen friends cry from their graves that eighteen or twenty is not long enough.

"...I have been driven to the conclusion that a University is really under the control of a small and active group of trustees who have no standing in the world of education, who are reactionary and visionless in politics, and narrow and medieval in religion. Their conduct portrays a profound misconception of the true function of a university in the advancement of learning."

GE. A Concerned Employer?

If the 150,000 GE strikers were asked to raise both hands, a count would not show one and a half million fingers. Although the contract states that GE must provide all necessary safety devices, not too many days pass without punch presses throughout the GE plants taking their toll of fingers and hands. Frequent, too, are even more serious injuries.

The company applies the same rules of grievance procedure to disputes about personal safety as it does to grievances about pay or other conditions. The company rules provide that when a foreman assigns a worker to a job, he must do it. If the worker has a grievance, it is to be taken up after the job is done. If the company is found to be wrong, an adjustment will be made retroactively.

This may be fair in the case of pay, for instance, but how can two or three fingers be replaced retroactively?

For three months prior to the strike and many times since, the union asked the company to agree that in a case where an employe is ordered to do a job which, in his opinion, endangers life or limb, the worker should have the right to call the shop steward immediately to file a grievance and have the grievance heard before the foreman's order is to be carried out. To this most reasonable and minimum safety measure, GE has constantly said, "No!" GE is long on safety slogans but short on safety practices.

Reward for Mediocrity

(The following editorial was printed in Wednesday's DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE. The COLLEGIAN is reprinting the editorial as part of its policy of presenting all sides of the issues. The MDC, in an editorial last week endorsed the action of the Faculty Senate.)

The faculty of the University of Massachusetts has peered out of its academic ivory tower and has struck another blow for mediocrity.

In a vote the faculty senate has suggested that no freshman be flunked out of the University.

The men and women who teach 18,000 or more of our young said that the transition from high school and home is too much for some people, and, therefore, this should be taken into account and the first year of college be observed without fear of not being there for a second year.

Fortunately the action must go to the board of trustees for action before it becomes university policy. One can hope that the trustees will look at the matter with a little less naivete and a little more dispassion.

You don't have to crack the books, pass the exams, do the experiments, take any notes. No matter what you do, or more to the point, don't do the first year you are home free.

Just one more example of a growing trend in some institutions to reward mediocrity or incompetence.

From talks with university officials, it has been found that a freshman class of 4,000 or so represents selections from perhaps 8,000 applicants. Many of those rejected are good students who lost out to those who seem to be better.

One wonders how these men and women behind the walls of learning would like it if the same formula was used in other areas.

Can't you just imagine a UMass professor complaining to the telephone company about the new phone that was installed that sounds its dial tone only when it is hung up and for which you have to talk through the receiver and hear through the mouthpiece, and to get an 8 you dial 5.

"Well," might say the phone official, "that installer is new. He really can't do the job, but we figure he might just be getting acclimated to his new surroundings, so we aren't going to fault him on a few flaws in his work . . you understand don't you?"

When we start rewarding failure, then perhaps it's time we elected Eldridge Cleaver president.

Clarification

To the editor:

I should like to correct a misimpression which a recent article appearing in THE DAILY COLLEGIAN has created. I am referring to remarks alleged to have been made by me on the occasion of the recent SWAP conference at Lee, Massachusetts.

I was a member of a panel discussing student problems at the University and a question concerning the University's budget problems was posed. It was stated by another panel member that it would be desirable to work in behalf of any opponent attempting to defeat Senator James F. Burke of Brockton who, as Chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, had been responsible for recent University of Massachusetts budget cuts. That was not so, and I explained that the cuts were made by the House. As for working to defeat Senator Burke. I stated that such an effort would be futile, valueless and not logical. I further stated that it would be, in fact, impossible to defeat Senator Burke in my estimation.

The article to which I am referring, however, had stated that I said that students should work to defeat the Senator. This obviously is a complete distortion of what I said, and I would appreciate a retraction on that point.

My remarks were confined to members of the House and I believe that was quite fully explained in that article.

XMass Poem

Awake! Awake! It's Christmas morning!
Soft green eyes reflect a fire . . .
Let your nickle slug riddled brain rejoice!
The maggot larvii in your lung shall break bread and feast!
Hands clutched forever on gunbutt and grenade witness teeming bug enflankment.
Beetle stripped flesh fills earthen holes feeding life down there.
Wallet open in mud, picture out, wet, little girl never known.
Merry Christmas Daddy!!

Student on Danger List After Wednesday Crash

Two students were hospitalized and one is now on the danger list following a pedestrian accident which occurred at 9:17 p.m. Wednesday on North Pleasant St., south of Morrill Science Building.

The two who are hospitalized are freshman Ellen Carter, 18, of 489 Van Meter North and 1444 Massachusetts Ave., Lexington, who is reported in fair condition and Guy Napoli, 18, of Richelieu St., Springfield. A student at the Stockbridge School and a resident of 357 North Pleasant St. Napoli is on the danger list.

According to Amherst police the two students were struck during the very heavy rains by a car operated by Richard Fullerton, 23, of 356 Puffton Village, a senior at the university.

Police said that the students were crossing North Pleasant St. just south of the waiting station at an unlighted crossing. Fullerton tooted his horn and applied his brakes but because of the rains, struck the pedestrians.

Dr. Lewis T. Broschard, assistant staff physician at the University answered the call from the Amherst police and had the two injured students taken in the town ambulance to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

According to hospital spokesman Miss Carter is said to be in fair condition, suffering from internal injuries, lacerations of her right leg and abrasions over her entire face.

Napoli is on the danger list, suffering from compound fracture of the lower part of both legs, multiple abrasions of his body and other injuries, said hospital spokesmen.

All Daily Collegian staff members in all departments must obtain a copy of the proposed new constitution today. Copies are available in the Collegian office. There will be a staff meeting Monday night at 7:30 in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union to vote on the new constitution. There are some major changes proposed.

Unique Concert to be Given in Smith's Sage Hall

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. - A special concert to present the new harpsichord will be given Sunday (December 14) at Smith College. The performance will be at 8 p.m. in Sage Hall and is open to the public without charge. Lory Wallfisch of the Smith music department will play the harpsichord, accompanied by Smith flutist William Wittig, violinist Ernst Wallfisch, cellist John Sessions, and University of Massachusetts oboist Charles Lehrer. Several Smith student musicians will also perform.

The new instrument was built by William Dowd of Boston. The largest member of the family of keyboard instruments with plucked strings, the harpsichord was used from the sixteenth through the eighteenth centuries as both a solo instrument and an accompaniment in any size ensemble.

At the beginning of this century it became obvious that the sound of the harpsichord could not be duplicated or replaced by that of the piano. Since then, a revival has restored the harpsichord to its earlier popularity.

Opening the concert program will be J.S. Bach's Concerto in the Italian Style for Harpsichord, played by Mrs. Wallfisch. The form, content and sound-contrasts of this piece suggest the nature of a "real" concert.

Bach's Trio-Sonata for Flute, Violin and Continuo from the Musical Offering will follow. The composer based this work on a theme given to him by King Frederick "the Great" of Prussia and dedicated the piece to the king.

After intermission Mozart's Six Variations in G on Mio caro Adone, K.180, will be heard. The variations are based on the Mio caro Adone aria from Salieri's opera La fiera di Venezia.

The concert will close with the Concerto for Harpsichord and Five Instruments by De Falla. A work of chamber music with a predominantly harpsichord part, this is not a piece "in the old style" but rather a truly contemporary composition which alludes to older idioms.

Brennan Sees State and Mob Merge

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - One year after William J. Brennan III made a charge that some legislators were "too comfortable" with organized crime, he thinks "maybe a lot of good has come from it."

Brennan, son of the U.S. Supreme Court justice, was then assistant attorney general heading an investigation of crime at that time. But he was later removed from his anticrime duties amid a storm of controversy over them and now is in private law practice.

He declines to take credit for current investigations into alleged corruption in New Jersey, but thinks he did help produce some new state weapons in the war against crime.

"I'm happy we're moving on all fronts. I don't think the problem is as great any more because now we are mobilized to fight it" he said in an interview Thursday.

It was last Dec. 11 that the 35-year-old Brennan, then an assistant attorney general heading an investigation of organized crime, told a group of newsmen:

"It will come as no surprise to any of you, I am sure, that the state of New Jersey is infested with organized crime. Its operations go beyond hard criminal activities . . . to legitimate business.

"Too many local governments are responsive more to the mob than to the electorate. Unfortunately, some of our legislators enjoy far too warm a relationship with members of organized crime."

Smith Wins Acclaim In Theatre Festival

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. A Smith College improvisational adaptation of George Orwell's famous novel, "Animal Farm" has been entered in the Second American College Theatre Festival.

The Smith Department of Theatre and Speech production of the work, an adaptation of Orwell's novel of the 1940's satirizing revolutions, will be offered Friday through Tuesday (Dec. 12-16) in the Smith Center for the Performing Arts.

Presented in Washington, D.C., by the Smithsonian Institute and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the Festival is a joint production of the American National Theatre Association (ANTA) and the American Educational Theatre Association. It is sponsored by American Airlines.

Some 1960 schools are entered in the Festival. Official judges will travel to the various schools to see productions and choose a number of the best. The next stage of the competition, the Regional Festival, will involve the staging of these select productions at special campus or city theatres in each area of the country.

In February, the Festival's Central Committee will announce their selection of the 10 productions to go to Washington for performance at Ford's Theatre and the Theatre on the Mall in April and May.

STOP IN AND LISTEN to our KLH stereo systems — there's bound to be one that suits both your taste and your pocketbook.

MODEL 24
The acoustic output of the Model Twenty-Four is higher than that of many a $400 system. The entire frequency range of a symphony orchestra comes out essentially undistorted. And it's what goes on between the minimum and maximum frequencies that determines whether instruments sound like themselves.

MODEL 20
The acoustic output of the Model Twenty is not only half again that of the Twenty-Four, but of anybody else's $400 system. Thus, if you insist on listening to music at something approaching concert hall volumes from time to time, there is much to recommend it.

MODEL 16
This is a simple unadorned phonograph (possibly the best you ever heard) except in the back, where there are provisions for making tapes, monitorin them, and playing AM and FM broadcasts through its speakers if you so choose. It was designed for the stereo music lover who hates paying for unwanted extras.

Girl Gymnasts Have Tough One Meet Rugged Springfield

This coming Saturday the Girls' Gymnastic team will face their toughest opponent of the year - 1969 National Champions, Springfield College. The meet will be held at Springfield, starting at 8:00 p.m.

For the last two years Springfield has been the only opponent UMass girls have lost to. Both teams are up for the competition, which should prove to be a closely fought battle.

Last Saturday UMass girls scored an easy victory over Montchair YMCA and West Hartford. Linda Seikunas won the floor exercise event with a score of 8.23. Barbara Holt was second and Marina Rodriguez third. In vaulting the first place went to Linda again, who scored 8.6 this time. Barbara Holt came second and Vicky Reynolds from West Hartford captured the third place.

Marina Rodriguez won the balance beam with a score of 8.3. Barbara Holt came in second and Linda Seikunas third. Uneven bars were won by Barbara Holt, who scored 7.5. Susan MacLeod from Montclair Y was second and Vicky Reynolds from West Hartford third.

Frosh Host Strong So. Conn., Frosh Debute

By JOE PARNA
Staff Reporter

The UMass gymnastic team will host a strong Southern Connecticut State College squad Saturday, Dec. 13th, at 8:00 p.m., in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym. The Redmen, fresh from a 149-96 victory over Syracuse, will be out to avenge a 155-153 loss to the Southern Connecticut Owls last year.

According to reports, the Southern Connecticut squad is the strongest in the school's history. Last season the Owls won the New England Intercollegiate Championships and placed second in the N.C.A.A. College Division.

Probably the chief reason for the Owls recent success is Jim Amerine, who is considered one of the best all-around men in the country. Last year, Amerine was the N.C.A.A. College Division still rings Champion. He also finished second in the all-around event, missing first by less than one point. In the last two seasons, he has taken a total of three N.C.A.A. Gold Medals.

The Redmen should be close to full strength with the return of Dave Genest, John Calabria, and Tony Vacca. Genest and Calabria missed last week's meet against Syracuse, while Vacca saw only limited action. Only Scott Stover, who won the high bar event last week despite injuries, remains a questionable performer in the long horse vault.

The Redmen will be counting heavily on Joe Reed, Norm Vexler, and Co-Captain Steve Cary for strong performances. These gymnasts all placed in the top three in two or more events against Syracuse. The Redmen will also need strong performances from Co-Captain Mike Kasavana and Joe Godwin in floor exercise, Rick Riley on side horse, and Bob Henry in the long horse vault.

Also, the UMass freshman gymnastics team opens its season at 5:30 p.m. in Boyden, with a meet against the Southern Connecticut frosh. Freshman Coach Jerry Calkins who took over from former Coach Julius Gundersheim last week, explained that a prediction of the outcome of the meet would be difficult, since no advance information has been received about the Southern Connecticut squad.

The freshman squad consists of twelve members. These gymnasts and their events are: Jay Aronstein on rings; Phil Aubrey on rings, parallel bars, and floor exercises; Jim Battista in the all-around event; John Berner on high bar, long horse vault, and floor exercise; Mike Cusack on side horse; Bill Henry on high bar, parallel bars, and floor exercise; Alan Mancini on side horse and long horse vault; Steve Nelson on side horse; John Oliver on parallel bars and rings; Jeff Silverman on rings; and Captain Steve Scuderi in the all-around event.

Many of the freshman team members have had previous experience in gymnastics. Captain Steve Scuderi was the Massachusetts State Champion in the all-around event in high school last year. Many of the other members have competed at the high school level. With this nucleus of experience, freshman Coach Calkins and asst. Ben Ardizzone feel that the Little Redmen should provide stiff competition for the Soothern Connecticut squad.

Hoopsters Host UNH, Hockey has Vermont Weekend

UM Hopes to Regain Winning Ways at Home

By JOHN SULLIVAN Assistant Sports Editor

UMass will be looking to get back on the winning basketball track when they play host to the New Hampshire Wildcats Saturday night at 7:30 at the Cage. UNH, under new head coach Gerry Friel, is a revamped organization with a lot of sophomore performers and a bright outlook.

The freshmen hoopsters will play a 5:30 contest against downtown rival Amherst's frosh in the preliminary tilt at 5:30.

The Redmen are 2-1 after their 77-73 overtime loss to Rhode Island while their counterparts sport a 3-2 record which includes three opening wins over Bowdoin, Merrimack and Colby followed by two losses to Northeastern and tough UConn.

Friel, who starred in his playing days at Oswego State and who assisted Bob Cousy for three years at Boston College, has pumped enthusiasm into the UNH hoop program and heads a young squad which includes six sophomores, three of whom will start against UMass.

Both forward positions will be manned by sophs in the persons of 6'3 Dave Pemberton and 6'4 Tom Weir. As freshmen, they averaged 19.8 and 13.8 points respectively and, thus far this season, Pemberton has averaged over 20 points. Each is a good rebounder.

The Wildcat backcourt will feature high-scoring Paul Shepard, a 6'2 senior who tallied 424 pts. last winter for a 17.7 average, and sophomore Dwight Peters, a 6'1 hustler who averaged 13.2 as a frosh.

New Hampshire will be without the services of 6.5 Frank Davis, a rugged rebounder who was injured in pre-season, and two reserves, also on the injury list. Davis' 14.9 points-a-game will be missed.

UNH, under Friel, has shored up its defense and will be looking to break their current two-game losing skein. In their loss to Northeastern, the Wildcats blew a ten-point lead and, although they fell to UConn by 20 points, they trailed by only one at halftime and by two points with nine minutes to go, a fact which should serve as a fair omen of the Huskies' ability. UMass faces UConn Tuesday night at the Cage.

The Redmen have beaten New Hampshire 11 times in a row, and Jack Leaman-coached units are 6-0 against the Wildcats. Leaman will go with the same starting lineup he has employed in the first three affairs, captain Ray Ellerbrook, Dennis Chapman, Ken Mathias, Julius Erving and John Bettancourt.

Should Ellerbrook's first points come on a field bucket, he will have tied Ned Larkin, '59, for ninth place on the all-time Redman scoring list with 870 career points. The lefty senior is in tenth place with (simple arithmetic) 868 points. The next hurdle for him will be Charlie O' Rourke's 924, eighth place standing.

Two teams with the desire to get back on the victory trail plus another scoring advancement by Ellerbrook adds up to a pretty good night of basketball.

Icemen at Norwich, Middlebury for Tilts

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Senior Reporter

UMass hockey embarks on a two day road trip to the rustic backwoods of Vermont today for games with Middlebury, tonight, 8 p.m. and Norwich, tomorrow at 2 p.m. The Redmen will be seeking to bounce back from a disappointing 3-2 loss to UVM last Saturday.

For the Redmen, this will be a chance to show improvement in areas of play that have not been up to par to this point in the young season. This is especially true for the penalty killing phase of the game.

Four of the last five goals scored against UMass, including UVM's goal in overtime for the victory, have occurred with the Redmen shorthanded by at least one man. UMass coach Jack Canniff has tried several combinations thus far but none have been effective.

The Redmen will also try to regain the scoring touch which eluded them at UVM. They were unable to mount any sustained offense as the Catamount defensemen were very successful at clearing out UMass' forwards.

But, it is important to keep in mind that this UMass team is young (14 sophs) and should demonstrate some improvement with each succeeding game. Hopefully, this is what will happen this weekend.

Middlebury figures to be tough just on the basis of an 8-2 triumph over Norwich in a preseason scrimmage. Like UMass the Panthers are a young team with 11 freshmen and sophs on a roster of 22 which includes four goalies.

The two captains, Dave Pierson and Brian Iggulden, both juniors, rank as probably the best returnees. Pierson, a rangy 6'2, 185 defenseman is rated by coach Wendy Forbes as the best in Division II. Personal prejudice aside, Pierson is a good one and paired with Larry Dixon, he forms a solid first line of defense.

Frosh Tim Silver and Jimmy Hurd form the second tandem. Either Neil Sharkey or Bob Van Wert will be the goalies. Last year Sharkey appeared in five games allowing 20 goals.

Iggulsen, who last year scored 11 goals with 16 assists centers the first line with Dave Norton and Rick Kelley. These two accounted for 49 points between them last year.

Three frosh who have displayed good skating and passing ability make up the second line. This combination of center Stan Kitman and wings Dou Curtis and Steve Anderson scored two goals against Norwich.

The Redmen won last year, 4-3 in overtime.

Norwich has a 2-2 record which includes wins over Canada's Royal Military College and Pennsylvania. The Cadets have lost to UVM, 6-4 and Dartmouth 5-4 in overtime.

The Cadets, coming off a 12-10 mark a year ago and a heart breaking loss to AIC in the Division II playoff finals have 15 lettermen back and figure they have a good shot at the title.

Jim Sutherland, Bob Coughlin and center Dave Bent make up the third line.

On defense, Mike Gately and Mark Callahan will work together as long as Callahan's bad shoulder holds up. Al Doyle and Dick Howard, and Bill Reardon and Bill Coffeen form the third paid.

Last year, the Redmen dropped a 7-6 decision to Norwich in a rough game. This one figures to be just as rough.

Action This Week; Booters Picked

In other Redman sports activity this weekend, UMass wrestlers trek down to Bloomsberg State College in Bloomsberg, Pennsylvania for a quadrangle meet Saturday at 1 p.m. involving Bloomsberg State, Ohio State and Indiana State. Coach Homer Barr's grapplers own a perfect 3-0 record and hope to fare well in this meet against some tough opponents.

The varsity swim team invades Bowdoin on Saturday for a two o'clock water fest. Coach Joe Roger's mermen stand at 0-2 after having dropped their second meet, on Wednesday, to Wesleyan.

Another team on the road will be the frosh hockey team which travels to Harvard for a 1:30 Saturday encounter with Harvard's J.V.'s.

In a very unusual sporting event on Saturday morning at 4:30, the UMass dining commons rifle team will hike down to Stockbridge, shoot a bunch of chickens, label them Rock Cornish Game Hens, freeze them and serve them for next year's Christmas dinner.

The University of Vermont, the 1969 Yankee Conference soccer champions, dominated the all league first team announced following a vote of the six team coaches.

Other first team selections included: UMass forwards Arelindo Alves and Agostino Calheno; Rhode Island forward Jorge Pereira and halfback James Kelly; New Hampshire goalie Edward Meehan and fullback Donald Graves, and Connecticut wing John Sahnas. Greene and Pereira are the only repeaters from the 1969 first team.

Sports in Brief. Injuns Take a Chance, Quarry in Turkey Bout

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Dean Chance and Luis Tiant, both former 20-game winners, were the big names in a six-player baseball trade Thursday involving Cleveland and Minnesota.

The deal was the latest in a reshuffling of the Indians, who finished last in the American League's Eastern division in 1969. It was the first big trade of the off-season for the Twins, defending champs in the Western Division.

Minnesota received Tiant and Stan Williams, a 33-year-old right-hander who had a 6-14 record with Cleveland last season.

In addition to Chance, the Twins gave up outfielder Ted Uhlaender, infielder-outfielder Craig Nettles and a player to be named later.

NEW YORK (AP) - Jerry Quarry, the No. 4 heavyweight contender, will take on unranked George Chuvale, the sturdy Toronto veteran, Friday night at Madison Square Garden in a bout between two-time losers of title matches.

Quarry dropped a split decision to Jimmy Ellis in the finals of the World Boxing Association, April 27, 1968, after Cassius Clay was stripped of his title. He got another chance against Joe Frazier June 23 and lost when the doctor ordered the referee to stop the fight after seven rounds because of Jerry's battered right eye.

NEW YORK (AP) - Greg Cook, the Cincinnati Bengals' rifle-armed quarterback, was selected Thursday as the Offensive Rookie of the Year in the American Football League.

The tall, 22-year-old passing ace is the second Bengal to nail offensive rookie honors in the expansion club's two-year existence. Running back Paul Robinson, the 1968 AFL rushing king, won the award last December in The Associated Press' annual season-end poll.

A panel of 30 sports writers and sportscasters - three in each AFL city - gave Cook 20 votes. Carl Garrett, Boston's versatile running back, was a distant second with six votes and little Jerry Levias, Houston's pass-catching prodigy, received the remaining four.

TWO SCORERS FLANK FLASHY GOALIE

"The Graver Threats Today are Internal . . ."

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Violence Commission said Friday the United States must begin spending more money on internal problems than on defense as soon as its role in the Vietnam War has ended.

Then, it said, military spending must be kept level while spending for the general welfare should continue to increase until essential social goals are achieved."

The nation should start, the panel advised, by increasing spending for domestic problems by $20 billion a year after Vietnam - partly by cutting defense spending and partly through increased tax revenues resulting from the growth of the Gross National Product.

With that, the presidential commission warpped up an 18-month study of the causes and prevention of violence in America - a study occasioned by the murders of Robert F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King, Jr.

Asked whether the panel's nearly 100 recommendations over the months had a realistic chance of becoming part of the nation's fabric. Chairman Milton S. Eisenhower said Friday:

"If in five years nothing has happened, I shall be the most disappointed man in America."

The 338-page final report was primarily a summary of the commission's nine separate reports on various facets of the violence problem, including a recapitulation of 81 recommendations issued with those reports.

Eisenhower said in a news conference he had delivered the final document Thursday to President Nixon.

"The President authorized me to say he is gravely concerned," Eisenhower reported, "and that he will study with care every part of this report. He even asked me to mark for him those portions of the 15 back-up volumes (task force studies) that I thought were especially significant."

"Our most serious challenges to date have been external - the kind this strong and resourceful country could unite against," the 13-member commission said in a unanimous statement. "While serious external dangers remain, the threats today are internal."

Therefore, the commission said, national priorities should be reordered so that domestic needs are no longer subordinated to the military.

"When our participation in the Vietnam war is concluded, we recommend increasing annual general welfare expenditures by about $20-billion (stated in 1968 dollars), partly by reducing military expenditures and partly by use of increased tax revenues resulting from the growth of the gross national product," the commission said.

"We suggest this only as an initial goal," the statement continued. "As the gross national product and tax revenues continue to rise, we should strive to keep military expenditures level, while general welfare expenditures should continue to increase until essential social goals are achieved."

The commission said the internal threats included haphazard urbanization, racial discrimination, disfiguring of the environment, and the dislocation of human identity and motivation - "all resulting in an rising tide of individual and group violence."

By MARK SILVERMAN
Asst. Managing Editor

The Democratic State Committee voted Saturday to hold its state convention at UMass this summer. The decision marks the first time that a major political event will be staged at a University in this state, and, according to State Senate President Maurice Donahue, "This will be one of the best things that has ever happened to UMass."

Scheduled to begin June 12, the convention will run about three days. It is expected that the main convention business will be conducted in the Cage, and that most of the delegates and other convention officials will be housed in University dorms.

The University is at this time considering installing air-conditioning in the Cage before the start of the Convention.

State Senator Robert L. Cawley (D-W. Roxbury), chairman of the party's convention selection committee, admitted that money was the major factor in choosing UMass.

The convention at UMass is expected to cost the state committee only $6,000, Cawley explained, compared to the last convention in Boston which cost the party more than $17,000.

"However," State Senate President Maurice Donahue told the MDC yesterday, "the facilities at UMass are far superior to those which we might have obtained in either Worcester or Springfield. And, since Boston's price was out of the question, UMass clearly was our best bet."

He added, "This is an excellent location, both for the party and for the University."

"It is time that the Democratic party demonstrated its closeness with the educational institutions of this state," he continued, "and holding the convention at our state university is certainly a beginning. Also, I think that the convention will do a great deal to help the University itself in its dealings with state politicians."

"It will allow the opinion makers in the Democratic party to get a first hand look at the school," he went on to say. "I've been working for 20 years to build a great state university and I'm delighted that the democratic party will finally be able to see all that we have accomplished."

Donahue added, "In the past it has been difficult for the University to draw the major Boston media to Amherst, essentially because of the cost involved . . . but the convention will provide the Boston media . . . especially the broadcast media . . . with their first detailed view of the University."

Donahue refused to comment on the theory that holding the convention in Western Massachusetts provides his campaign for the gubernatorial nomination with a big boost, and said only, "I don't think that any site favors any candidate. . . ultimately it's the delegates from all over the state who will decide."

Student leaders from all 11 Massachusetts state colleges held a muster of sorts this weekend in the hope of forming a united political force for more student rights on their campuses.

State Senate President Maurice Donahue received a big round of applause from the 150 delegates at the second day's session of the three-day conference of the United Student government at Framingham when he came out strongly for freedom of student newspapers from censorship by administration officials of the colleges.

Donahue, speaking in Dwight Hall at Framingham State College, was asked for his views on the controversy in which the school newspapers of four of the colleges were not permitted to print an article by militant Negro leader Eldridge Cleaver, while the papers of two of the colleges were allowed to carry it.

The article contained a number of words which officials of the four colleges classified as obscene.

Donahue said "I favor the freedom of the press. Perhaps Mr. Cleaver could have used better language. But if the editors feel this is the kind of material which appeals to their readers, they should be allowed to print it."

He said, however, he would not comment on how the matter was handled by the administrations of the colleges involved.

Donahue said he thinks students should have the right to demonstrate and make their views known. But he added "I don't think they have any right to break the laws, to take over buildings, or destroy property, then go into court and shed crocodile tears and plead for amnesty."

In Case You Didn't Know
Heavy Snow Hits Area

The Weather Bureau Sunday night issued heavy snow warnings for parts of New England and said the warning would remain in effect Mon.

Amounts up to six inches were predicted for an area extended from southeastern New York State through southern New England.

Heavy snow warnings were posted for most of northern New England.

The snow was mixed with rain along the coast, the Weather Bureau said. Small craft warnings were up from Eastport to Block Island.

A low pressure area moved toward New England Sunday night from the New York City area, intensifying as it came up the coast.

In Connecticut, one to two inches of snow fell Sunday afternoon.

The snow was to change to flurries later Monday.

A pre-storm warning was issued Sunday afternoon by the Massachusetts Department of Public Works. A DPW spokesman said two to four inches of snow might fall in the Greater Boston area.

Recommendations of Commission on Violence

(ED. NOTE: The following are brief excerpts from the summary of the final report issued this weekend by the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence.)

We believe we have identified the causes of much of the violence that plagues contemporary America. We are convinced that most of this violence can be prevented, for our work has illuminated for us the strengths of this great nation, as well as its shortcomings. Our institutions and the spirit of our people are equal to this challenge, no less than to the challenges we have met in the past.

Violence in the United States has risen to alarmingly high levels. Whether one considers assassination, group violence, or individual acts of violence, the decade of the nineteen-sixties was considerably more violent than the several decades preceding it and ranks among the most violent in our history.

Youth Power

.....We urge that young people must be given a greater rule in determining their own destiny and in shaping the future course of our society. Responsible participation in decision-making may, for many, be a substitute for the violence that is born in frustration.

We propose lowering the voting age, reforming the draft and providing a massive expansion in opportunities for youth to engage in public service activities whose goals young people wholeheartedly embrace.

While we categorically condemn all illegal violence, including group violence, as incompatible with the survival of a just, democratic, and humane society, we state emphatically that aggrieved groups must be permitted to exercise their constitutional rights of protest and public presentation of grievances. . . .

Community Life

.....The way in which we can make the greatest progress toward reducing violence in America is by taking the actions necessary to improve the conditions of family and community life for all who live in our cities, and especially for the poor who are concentrated in the ghetto slums. It is the ghetto slum that is disproportionately responsible for violent crime, by far the most acute aspect of the problem of violence in the United States today. . . .

Education

.....We must provide better educational opportunities for all our children. We must act on current recommendations that those American families who cannot care for themselves receive a basic annual income. We must restructure our local governments, restore their fiscal vitality and accomplish a host of other major tasks of the kind discussed in this report. . .

Law Enforcement

.....We urge that public officials, including law enforcement officers, intensify their efforts to develop more effective tactics in handling both peaceful demonstrations and violent disturbances.

Further, we recommend the adoption of a national fire-arms policy that will limit the general availability of hand guns. . . .

Priorities

.....In our judgement, the time is upon us for a reordering of national priorities and for a greater investment of resources in the fulfillment of two basic purposes of our constitution - to "establish justice" and to "insure domestic tranquility."

We solemnly declare our conviction that this nation is entering a period in which our people need to be as concerned by the internal dangers to our free society as by any probable combination of external threats.

We recognize that substantial amounts of funds cannot be transferred from sterile war purposes to more productive ones until our participation in the Vietnam war is ended.

We also recognize that to make our society essentially free of poverty and discrimination, and to make our sprawling urban areas fit to inhabit, will cost a great deal of money and will take a great length of time.

We believe, however, that we can and should make a major decision now to reassess our national priorities by placing these objectives in the first rank of the nation's goals. . . .

Food Services Lays Off Workers; Concern Mounts Over Benefits

According to Mr. Colbin, Head of the University Food Services, seventeen cafeteria workers will be laid off between Dec. 20 and Jan. 25. Because of changes in University scheduling this will be the longest period ever to affect the cafeteria workers.

There was immediate concern by the workers as to whether they would lose their Blue Cross status as employee's of the University as well as the loss of income. Mr. Colbin informed the Collegian that they "are doing their best to cover employees who have compansation and/or crude vacation time, to protect their (Blue Cross) benefits," In most cases this means that the employees will be allowed to use their left over compensation time on Jan. 2 so as to retain the low monthly rate for Blue Cross for which they are presently eligible. In addition, "as many workers as possible" will be called back during the off time, according to seniority, to help with certain special functions and the final exam period.

During the periods concerned there is a "drastic" slack in the Food Services business, necessitating the layoff. There is a a period of conferences around the 17th, 18th, and 19th of January during which many workers will be called back and all regular workers will be back by the Jan. 25.

Mr. Colbin made assurances that everything that is possible to do is being done to protect the employees. Colbin stated, "It boils down to you can't keep the help if you don't have the business."

Educ. Assembly Formed, Elect Three to Council

A small number of School of Ed. undergraduates met last week to form the undergraduate Education Assembly and choose three representatives to the School Council. According to the new Constitution, the School Council will be the primary policy making body of the School of Ed.

The undergrad. members of the Education Assembly are organizing primarily to do something about the lack of undergrd. interest in the School of Ed. and the horizontal and vertical lack of communication that now typifies the undergrad. School of Ed.

Any School of Ed. undergrads. with a gripe, an idea, a proposal, a solution, or answer to the ills of apathy, are asked to attend the rap session being held on Tues. Dec. 16th at 3:00 p.m. in the School of Ed. auditorium OR let one of your three Council representatives know what you're thinking or who you are: Edmond O'Keefe, 418 Thatcher House; Frank M. Ruggiero, 6-8986; or Jean Kenyon, 584-8863.

It is virtually impossible for a few to solve or even know all of the complex problems facing the many Ed. undergraduates. We need your ideas, your interest, and your support. Please care! Please come!

Orchestra Performs Tuesday

Amherst, Mass. -- The University of Massachusetts-Mount Holyoke Symphony Orchestra will appear in concert on Tuesday, Dec. 16 at 8:15 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on the UMass campus under the direction of Ronald Steele.

The concert, open to the public without charge, is being sponsored by the UMass department of music as part of its Recital Series.

Mr. Steele, an assistant professor of music at UMass, is the founder of the orchestra. He began his career as a string player with the United States Air Force Symphony Orchestra, appearing throughout the United States and in command performances at the White House. As a conductor, he studied at Interlochen and at the Berkshire Music Center.

Since the founding of the orchestra four years ago, Mr. Steele has "steadily infused it with improvements and expanded the scope."

The concert program will include Poulenc's "Gloria" for soprano, choir and orchestra, with soprano Dorothy Ornest as soloist, and Tschaikovsky's "Symphony No. 5 in E minor".

UM-URI Debate to be Televised

The University of Massachusetts Debate Team will appear on the WWLP-television program "It's Debatable" to be broadcast January fourth and tenth at 6:00 p.m.

The topic to be debated is the Godell proposal, "Resolved that the United States should withdraw its troops from South Vietnam by the end of 1970."

Debating on the negative side of the proposal, the three man team of Steve Daggett, Marlene Fine, and Mike Farrell, representing UMass, will meet the University of Rhode Island, representing the affirmative side of the resolution.

Moderated by Phil Shepardson, Professor of Speech and English at Westfield State College, the debate will be characterized by a four minute constructive and rebuttal speech by both sides. There will be a two minute cross examination of each team after their constructive speech by the opposition.

The team with the highest total points, as determined by a panel of three judges, will be declared the winner.

A win by UMass would put them in contention for the playoffs in May.

Student Senate Issues for Next Meeting

Out of the long, unpredictable agenda for the next Student Senate meeting, Wednesday, Dec. 17 these issues will probably be discussed:

S99 - Move to appropriate $122.50 to the Revelers to defray the cost of replacing uniforms.

S100 - Move to appropriate $1,500 to be donated to the Wesley Honey Memorial Fund.

S103 - Asks for more police protection for vehicles parked in S, F, and V lots because of the large amounts of vandalism in these lots during recent months.

S113 - Recommends that UMass immediately withdraw from the Yankee Conference because it is impeding the successful development of the UMass athletic program.

Other important issues that may be discussed involve the freezing of RSO funds to dorms that have not submitted dues, student representation on the Academic Matters Committee, and the powers of Area Government.

If you have any questions concerning these or any other senate related issues, contact your senator. Speak to him/her so that he can speak for you.

MANDATORY MEETING FOR ALL COLLEGIAN STAFFERS TO VOTE ON THE NEW CONSTITUTION

Pres. to Boston

When the Board of Trustees voted a month ago to reorganize the school's administration by moving the President's office to Boston, the only comments which the University heard were favorable. However, Longmeadow Governor's Councellor Raymond J. Fontana last week asked Governor Sargent to stop the reorganization.

Throughout November, it seemed as though all of the state's major figures in higher education and state government were praising the plan; they agreed that it was a wise decision to move the President to Boston where he can be in closer contact with the State Government and thus can improve the school's bargaining position at budget time each year; they agreed that the new administration scheme was the best way of organizing and building a state-wide system of public higher education --one with at least three major campuses; they agreed that creating chancellorships to head each individual campus would provide students with close contact with administrators, and would be the best way of running, academically, the affairs of a statewide system.

But Fontana disagrees with all of this. He says that the President should be where his students are -- and since, at this time he says the majority of the school's students are in Amherst, the President should be in Amherst. However, he does not take into consideration the school's plan to develop its other branches -- something which will even out student distribution over the next ten years. This makes Fontana's argument invalid.

Also, with the new role of the Chancellors, students would be more anxious to see the Chancellors -- the men directly responsible for their campus, rather than a president in Boston who will spend most of his time working out details which will not really interest students.

Essentially, it seems as though Fontana is making a grandstand play to keep the President in western Massachusetts in order to enhance his own political career. When he says, "We can't afford to let them take that office out of our part of the state," it is clear that Fontana is more concerned with his own political well-being than with the future of the University.

Governor Sargent should ignore all arguments which are not principally concerned with the development of the University and its ability to serve the youth of the commonwealth. He should dismiss Fontana's request, and should allow the University to proceed with its reorganization plans.

"For an entire generation, we have necessarily been more aware of and responsive to the external dangers to our society than to the internal dangers. In this commission's opinion, the internal dangers now demand a greater awareness and a more substantial response - one that can only be made if we face the need to reorder our priorities. It is time to balance the risks and precautions we take abroad against those we take here at home. . .

The greatness and durability of most civilizations has been finally determined by how they have responded to these challenges from within. Ours will be no exception."

Reactions to Sunday Paper--Hertzog Style

Dear Astronomy Lab Instructor,

I changed my mind. Think you're right. I guess I was so overwhelmingly proud and excited over last summer's moon walk and man's spunky spirit that I resisted any suggestions to slow down our space explorations.

But after reading the Sunday paper, I'm now overwhelmed by the problems we've got here, on the third planet from the sun. It is, as you said, frustrating to know that we have the ability to solve all these problems. We just have to attack them, that's all.

So, I agree that we should wait awhile on Mars (it'll still be there later) and initiate a National Sock It To 'Em Decade for solving population, racial and environmental problems.

Now, how do we convince everyone else?

Sincerely,
Gena Corea

Dear Mr. Nixon,

Did you take note of the request by A. Leon Higginbotham, the federal judge who served on the violence commission, that you appoint no more such commissions?

After noting the unimplemented recommendations of many past groups, he said, in effect, why bother? We've got the answers but action is limited to vocal cords.

This commission concluded: "The time has come to question whether expenditures for the general welfare should continue to be subordinated to national defense."

Sincerely,
Gena Corea

Dear Arthur,

For goodness sakes, go find a green and quiet place in Europe or somewhere and be contented. America is no place for gentle dreamers. You're an incurable Quixote and some respectable mob is going to crucify you someday.

About that speech you wrote for the chancellor of the University of California announcing the mobilization of the university for the accomplishment of all the changes youth and men of learning want. Well, as a former clinical psychologist, he probably invited you to his house to talk over the speech because he figured you were crazy and he wanted to try out some therapy on you.

Course you probably dazzled him so much he never did get to try out that therapy. I can just see him that night after you left - brushing his teeth and shaking his head. Hope you didn't scare his wife too much.

Arthur, get out while the getting's good.

GENA

Dear JFK,

The soaring sixties never did get off the ground due to committal difficulties.

Having frustrating time. Wish you were here.

Sincerely,
Gena Corea

Dear Vagales,

Just because you're a Greek is no reason for you to feel personally embarrassed over Agnew. After all, he's a Greek-American and we must do most of the blushing. Disturbing that so many people over here are applauding though.

Since you learned English from American movies and write words the way they sound, you term for Agnew - sun of a beach - came out somewhat milder than you intended.

GENA

Dear Arthur,

Dear Susan Atkins,

My God, what went wrong? But I don't even have to ask. The answers are everywhere - everywhere. On all the other pages of the newspaper. Still, did you have to kill all those people?

Sincerely,
Gena Corea

Dear Aznive,

Are you still alive, I wonder? You were old when I met you and that was years ago.

I remember you now because the girls on the corridor are playing Christmas carols and Christmas carols were playing that day when you told me about the Turks exiling the Armenians.

You were a child during that exile but you hadn't forgotten. You told me about the cruelty, about the deaths. You told me how you lost your whole family. You told me about the brother who joined the Turks and disappeared. You told me you wanted to go to sleep that night and never wake up.

You told me, while the Christmas carols were playing.

Peace, when? Well, I was reading the Sunday paper today and I'm thinking, probably never. Did you read Mary McGrory's column? - The Christmas cards of the majority, she says, read "Honorable Peace on Earth."

Never, Aznive. Never.

Gena

Dear Jesus Christ,
Was it worth it?
Sincerely,
Gena Corea

Moratorium Highlights Low-Key Activities

Moratorium activities across the United States yesterday climaxed a weekend of discussions, vigils and demonstrations planned to emphasize the impact of federal spending - especially for war - on local communities.

In contrast to last month's large Moratorium gatherings, organizers concentrated on low key programs which began Thursday.

The strategy was illustrated by the absence of any large demonstrations in Washington, D.C., during the weekend. The capital was the scene of a mammoth Moratorium march in November.

Antiwar groups called a demonstration in Chicago's Grant Park to protest the war in Vietnam, including the alleged My Lai massacre. The park was the site of disturbances during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

In Tuscon, Ariz., University of Arizona students appeared at local churches and synagogues to distribute antiwar literature. Bill White, student body vice president, said some students also planned to fast from next Saturday through Dec. 24.

At Cambridge, Mass., about 2,300 Harvard and Radcliffe students were to end a 30-hour fast. They were promised a 60-cent refund for each meal missed to be given to a Quaker group to help set up refugee and medical centers in Vietnam.

Veterans of service in Vietnam were to speak in various churches around the San Francisco area during the afternoon. They were to meet later at a high school for a panel discussion to "speak out" against the war and the military.

Return to Chocolate

CHICAGO (AP) - Good news for teen-agers: Chocolate is not related to acne, a study by three skin specialists indicates.

The research was done by Drs. James E. Fulton Jr., Gerd Plewig and Albert M. Kligman of the Department of Dermatology at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine.

They report their findings in the Dec. 15 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. The research was underwritten by the Chocolate Manufacturers Association of the U.S.A.

Acne "is enough of a curse" without its victim having to be deprived of the pleasure of eating, the doctors wrote.

They studied 65 subjects, including 30 teen-agers suffering from acne and 35 young adult male prison volunteers.

Seminar on Survival

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. - "Pollution, Overpopulation - Survival" will be the subject of a lecture Tuesday (December 16) at Smith College.

Dr. Roger Payne, who discussed song communication among wild whales October 21 at the college, will speak at 7:30 p.m. in Sage Hall on the campus. Sponsored by Smith's physics department, the lecture is open to the public without charge.

In discussing land, air, and water pollution as well as overpopulation as menacing problems, Payne will concentrate on their effects on the next generation and thus their imminent threat to human survival.

He will be available for questions after his speech.

A graduate of Cornell University with a Ph.D in biology Payne is assistant professor in the Institute for Research in Animal Behavior. The institute is sponsored by the Rockefeller University, New York City, and the New York Zoological Society.

SMU's Students Claim Victory

The decision this weekend by SMU's Board of Trustees to grant tenure to assistant professor Charles White was interpreted by many students and faculty members as a defeat for president Joseph L. Driscoll, who opposed granting the tenure.

Driscoll's resignation has been sought by the Student Senate, the university chapter of the American Assn. of University professors and the Faculty Federation, the official bargaining agent for the faculty. Some 74 faculty members, of a total faculty of about 185, have signed a petition urging the trustees to dismiss Driscoll.

Driscoll, however, said he did not consider the trustees' action a repudiation of his leadership since, although he personally opposed tenure for White, he had told the board he would go along with the recommendations of a five-man trustee committee.

Also yesterday seven students, one former student and one faculty member were charged with contempt of court for allegedly participating in a demonstration on Dec. 3. A hearing on their case will be held Wednesday.

The nine are charged with violating a temporary restraining order granted by Bristol County Superior Court against disruption or interfering with the functions of the university. SMU officials claim they were members of a group that paraded, singing and shouting, through administrative offices after the Student Senate voted to call off a 10-day boycott of classes.

White said the trustee's decision to grant him tenure was "a step in the right direction for academic freedom at SMU."

"But I didn't bring my case to the public in order to get tenure," White said. "I wanted to expose the autocratic way in which Pres. Driscoll makes personnel decision."

"As long as Pres. Driscoll is in office, it is unlikely that meaningful reforms can take place," White said.

LONDON (AP) - Vivienne Adaway, 19, went late into a laundromat, stripped, put her clothes in a machine and sat down to wait. A policeman found her wearing only a short red shirt and glasses. The judge said: "You mustn'd do this sort of thing. It provokes comment."

BRASILIA (AP) - Veterinarian Clovis Godoi says there are two million rats in Brazil's ultramodern capital - five for each inhabitant - and that housewives should raise snakes to fight them.

Pro Vietnam Rally

Only one hundred persons were drawn to a pro administration rally on Boston Common, Saturday. Homer T. Ford, rally chairman, expressed "dismay" over the turnout. Over 50,000 persons were expected.

Not only did demonstrators fail to show, but the two announced principal speakers were absent. They were U.S. Reps. Silvio Conte (R-Pittsfield), and Margaret Heckler (R-Wellesley).

If the speakers had appeared, they apparently would have had to do without a public address system. The company that supplied the equipment withdrew it before the rally began, claiming the rental had not been paid.

The rally, sponsored jointly by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and the Disabled American Veterans, was to have started at 11 a.m. near Charles and Arlington Sts.

At 11:30, it was moved to the Parkman Bandstand on the Common.

"President Nixon is always very adept at words. I think he covered this one real good when he said the silent majority. It's obvious they are real silent. I am just a little ashamed that they are as silent as they apparently are."

Redmen Wrestlers Lose Three Matches in Rough Quadrangle

Bloomsburg-Ohio U-Indiana too Much

The once high flying Redmen wrestling team has suddenly been grounded. A quick trip into Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania to participate with some of the best wrestling powers of the nation evened the team record to 3-3 as the Redmen faced competition rarely seen in the New England area.

Bloomsburg State College, a perennial power in the nation's small college teams, Ohio University, one of the upcoming Midwest teams, and Indiana State University, currently ranked in the top ten best teams of the U.S. provided the stiff competition.

The quadrangular was conducted as three dual meets with each team meeting the other three teams - all in one day. Time of each bout was reduced from eight minutes to six minutes, and three additional pounds was allowed for each weight division.

The Redmen drew Bloomsburg for their first round and, although dropping a 27-9 decision, they were far from being outclassed as the Redmen won three bouts and lost three other one point decisions, and one two-point decision.

At this point, however, the U-Mass team was almost in a state of shock because everybody in the lightweights failed to register a victory. Previous to this time, Nick DiDemenico, Tyma, Dave Reynolds, Phil Davis, Sheldon Goldberg and Clay Jester had undefeated records and 75% pins against the likes of Rhode Island, Tufts and Amherst. Mike Brauner, Tom Young, and George Zguris scored the three decision wins.

The Redmen were forced to forfeit the 190-pound class in all three duals.

Immediately following the Bloomsburg contest, the Redmen took to the mats against Ohio University. Although the score was 32-5 for Ohio U., they knew they were in a battle until there was a collapse of the last three heavyweights when Mignocchi got pinned, again UM forfeited 190, and Zguris got pinned after suffering a rib injury. The points registered by the Redmen were by Davis and Young. Davis defeated Andy Kohlhepp who was a Pennsylvania State finalist last year, and Young drew with Barry Reighard who placed fourth in the world in last year's junior olympics.

At this point, the Redmen were humble but proud. UMass was proving that it was able to hang in with the best and score individual points. But Indiana State is something else, and after coming out on the short end with Bloomsburg, and Ohio, now the finale with nationally ranked Indiana.

A team of this caliber seems to get stronger as the tournament progresses, and this was no exception. The Redmen felt fortunate to score two decisions in the 36-6 loss.

THE SUMMARY: First opponent Bloomsburg, second Ohio, third Indiana

118 DiDomenico lost 6-4, lost 10-4 was pinned 3:00.

134 Davis lost 8-1, won 6-2, was pinned 2:40.

150 Jester was pinned 5:47, lost 6-1, was pinned 4:36.

167 Young won 5-1, drew 1-1, lost by pin 5:32.

177 Mignocchi was pinned 3:44, was pinned 3:25, won 5-4.

Hvt. George Zguris won 3-2, was pinned 2:46, forfeited.

Pats Fall in Last Period to Oilers, 27-23

HOUSTON (AP) - With an injured Pete Beathard directing the attack, the Houston Oilers exploded for 13 points in the final period Sunday for a 27-23 come-from-behind American Football League victory over the Boston Patriots.

The victory sends the Oilers, with a 6-6-2 record, into the league playoffs next Sunday against the 12-1-1 Oakland Raiders, champions of the Western Division.

Boston jumped to an early 16-0 lead and was still in front 23-14 before Beathard broke the Houston attack loose in the final period.

A 69-yard drive set up a 13-yard field goal by Roy Gerela to cut the deficit to 17-23 before Beathard got the winning touchdown drive under way with less than seven minutes to play.

A 37-yard pass to Jim Beirne put the ball on the Patriot 18 and Beathard then found Bierne in the end zone four plays later for an eight-yard pass that tied the score at 23-23 with three minutes and 14 seconds remaining.

Gerela's placement gave the Oilers their first lead of the day at 24-23 but three plays later Houston covered a fumble at the Patriot 35 and Gerela came in six plays later for the final three-pointer, this one from the 19.

The Patriots had built their 16-point lead by scoring the first four times they had the ball. A 77-yard pass from Mike Taliaferro to Ron Sellers set up a three-yard scoring run by Carl Garrett. Just minutes later, Garrett shook loose from five tacklers and raced 56 yards to the Houston 14 and Gino Cappellotti made it 10-0 with a 10-yard field goal.

Two fumble recoveries then led to two more Cappellotti field goals that covered 19 and 27 yards.

Beathard, favoring a foot injury suffered Thanksgiving Day, moved in late in the second period to replace Bob Davis, a third-year understudy who performed well a week ago against the New York Jets.

Cutting Boston's halftime lead to 16-7, Beathard directed a 74-yard drive that saw Alvin Reed take a 43-yard scoring pass.

Houston then put together a 71-yard third period drive on the passing of Beathard and running of Hoyle Granger, with Woody Campbell plowing over from the four.

This made it 16-14 but Taliaferro came right back with a drive that seemed for a time to have clinched victory for the Patriots. Taliaferro passed eight yards to Charlie Frazier for the score. The key play however, was a 70-yard bomb to Sellers, who fumbled at the Houston 40 only to see the ball bounce like a basketball. Sellers grabbed it on the first bounce and raced on to the Oiler 10.

Erving's Scoring and Rebounding Chapman's Floor Play Lead the Way

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

UMass got back in the winning habit Saturday night when it posted a 76-56 victory over New Hampshire behind the high scoring and rebounding of Julius Erving and the fine overall floor play of Dennis Chapman before 3200 fans at the Cage.

Although the play was often sloppy in the first half, the Redmen were able to gather their forces together in the second half to win by 20 and to up their record to 3-1. It was the third straight loss for the Wildcats and left them with a 3-3 mark.

Erving again was UMass' top point-producer; this time he hit a season high of 33 as he converted numerous offensive rebounds into soft easy layups and clicked on five out of six shots from the foul line. The talented sophomore also grabbed 26 rebounds.

Also contributing heavily to the Redman cause was Chapman who played 37 minutes of solid, hustling basketball. The senior forward came through with 14 points on seven field buckets and added five assists.

The first 20 minutes of action were not a spectator's delight as crummy officiating hampered U-Mass' efforts to get untracked against a team it knew it was better than. After only four minutes had elapsed, Ken Mathias was riddled with three fouls and was replaced by Chris Coffin.

Four minutes later, Mathias came back only to be slapped with his fourth personal less than ten seconds later. With just over 11 minutes to go in the half, Dick Samuelson came in to replace him.

Within 30 seconds he had his first foul, at 10:00 he had his second, at 8:31 his third, at 7:23 his fourth; his fifth and last came at 4:59.

Within the course of six minutes Samuelson had played all the ball he would be allowed to for the night. After his second and third fouls, both offensive, the pep band played a rendition of Three Blind Mice in reference to the questionable calls by the officials.

Erving paved the way in the first half with 17 points followed by Chapman's ten as the Redmen left the court with a frustrating advantage of only 35-29.

Ray Ellerbrook, who had a cold-shooting first half, came on strong in the first nine minutes of the second half to team with Erving as UMass outdistanced the Wildcats.

UNH opened the scoring on a short jumper by Phil Blum. The home team countered with two Erving hoops before Dwight Peters canned a 15-footer and Dave Pemberton hit two foul shots to move the Wildcats to within three, 39-36. Twenty-footers by Ellerbrook and John Betancourt were matched by Tom Weir and Paul Shepard baskets.

With 14:55 left to go New Hampshire was as close as it was going to get as the Redmen led by three, 43-40. During the next six and a half minutes, UMass rang up 15 points on three long-range jumpers by Ellerbrook, three baskets by Erving and a field goal and a foul shot by Betancourt. UNH could only answer with three buckets, one by Pemberton and two by Peters.

With 8:24 to go, the Redmen were out in front, 58-46. They were controlling the defensive boards with ease. In many instances, Erving or Mathias would grab the rebounds and feed Betancourt, Ellerbrook or Chapman for easy layups on the other end of the court. With the clock showing 3:55, the lead was up to 73-49.

As the affair became a runaway coach Jack Leaman substituted freely. The game ended with UMass' Rich Vogeley sinking a 20-footer at the buzzer for the final 76-56 spread.

HOOP NOTES - Ellerbrook had a much better second half shooting-wise, hitting on five of eight shots as compared with his two for six, first-half performance.... the senior captain tallied 14 points to move into ninth place on the UMass all-time scoring list with 882 points....he led all UMass players with seven assists....the Redmen shot an unbelievably poor 44.4% from the foul line....they were 48.6% from the field....Erving's 33 points gives him a total of 105 over four games, a 26.3 average....his 26 rebounds boosts his total to 83, a 20.8 average.... the crowd, though not as large as previous Cage contingents, was very spirited and, during UMass' first half foul dilemma, voiced their support of the Redmen with a bunch of "Let's go!" chants.. ..UMass was nailed with 28 fouls, while their counterparts had the whistle blown on them but 15 times....Chapman was the star of the pregame show when the Redmen ran around in circles throwing the basketball back and forth while a new net was being installed on their basket.

Gymnasts Use Depth to Beat Southern Conn., 157.8 - 151.05

By JOE PARNAR
Staff Reporter

Largely because of superior depth the UMass varsity gymnastic team soundly defeated Southern Connecticut State College, 157.8-151.05, Saturday evening. Although able to capture only one first place in the meet, the Redmen consistently dominated the second and third positions to outscore the Owls.

The win was truly a team effort. UMass' Steve Cary led the Redmen scorers with a first place in the long horse vault and a second on parallel bars. Other standouts for the Redmen were Rick Riley on side horse and Scott Stover on horizontal bar. Both of these performers scored over 9.0 to place second in their events.

The first event, floor exercise, set the tempo for what was expected to be a very close meet. Southern Connecticut's Jim Amerine and Tamburri tied for first with 8.9's to edge out UMass' Joe Godwin, who scored an 8.8. The event score, determined by totaling the best three scores from each team, was 26.0-26.0 at this time.

In the side horse event, UMass outscored Southern Conn. 26.6-26. 35 to jump to an early lead. The event was won by Southern Connecticut's Learwood with one of the finest performances of the meet. His efforts netted him a score of 9.5.

Second place was taken by Rick Riley with a 9.05. Riley also scored a 9.0 against Syracuse last week. Third place was taken by Frank Dean for UMass, UMass led at this point, 52.60-52.35.

The still rings event saw the UMass lead cut to one-tenth of a point. Amerine, N.C.A.A. College Division still rings champ, won the event with a score of 9.2 Joe Reed took second place for UMass with a 9.0. Third place was taken by J. Ball for Southern Conn. UMass' lead was now 78.2-78.1.

The long horse vault proved to be the turning point in the meet. UMass swept the event, taking all three top places. Cary executed an excellent piked front handspring to score a 9.15 and win the event. Tony Vacca took second for UMass with a 9.0 and Reed third with an 8.95. In this event, UMass outscored the Owls 27.1-25.75, to take a 105.3-103.85 lead.

The scoring in the parallel bars event was once again close, with UMass edging Southern Conn. 26.2-26.1. Amerine won the event with a 9.15, Cary took second with an 8.95 and Norm Vexler third with an 8.75. The running score was 131.5-129.95 after this event.

The final event, horizontal bar, proved to be the backbreaker for Southern Conn. Amerine showed why he is considered one of the best all-around men in the country, by winning the event with a 9.25. UMass also proved that it takes more than one man to win a gymnastic meet. UMass' depth enabled them to outscore the Owls 26.3-21.1 in this event. Stover executed an excellent routine to give him second place with a 9.1. Vacca took 3rd for UMass with an 8.75.

Probably the most important result of Saturday's meet was the fact that it showed UMass has the potential to give Penn State and Temple a good run for the Eastern League title.

On Saturday, January 24th., UMass will meet Penn State in one of the high light meets of the season. The meet will be in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym at 7:00 p.m

Prior to the varsity meet, the Little Redmen defeated the Southern Conn. frosh, 130.5-114.65. The meet was similar to that of the varsity in that it was UMass' depth against Southern Connecticut's superstar. Johnny Crosby took all six first places for Southern Conn. in the meet.

The UMass victory was largely a team effort, with strong performances from Steve Scuderi, Jim Battista, John Oliver, John Berner, and Mark Commings. Scuderi took two second places and tied for a third place. The UMass depth was provided by Jay Aronstein, Al Mancini, and Phil Aubrey. These three gymnasts all took a third place in the meet.

Sargent Names First Student Trustee

By JOEL FOX
Managing Editor

FRAMINGHAM - Cindi Olken, the Student Senate President, yesterday became the first student member on the UMass Board of Trustees.

Miss Olken was officially appointed by Governor Francis Sargent prior to a news conference with the eleven Presidents of the student bodies of the state Universities and Colleges. She will have all the rights and voting privileges of any other Board member.

The conference held at Framingham State College, began with Greg Gallagher, the President of the Framingham State student government, presenting Gov. Sargent with acts drawn up by representatives of the state colleges with the most important provisions declaring that all state colleges would have popularly elected student governments and would have student representation on the Board of Trustees.

Sargent, in accepting the acts said, "This is one of the most important and significant daies in the history of Massachusetts." Sargent praised the advancement that higher education has made for self rule. He stated, "My feelings have always been that good communication is needed to make the student - faculty - administration - trustee relationship work. I feel the student member on the Board will make it work."

Sargent than announced that he has set up a task force that will study the communications between the heirarchy of the College (and University) government. This task force will discuss, among other things, if faculty have a place on the Board of Trustees or if the Board is the best way to run the Universities in the first place.

During a question period that followed, the new Trustee, Cindi Olken asked the governor if he felt that the Board was an antiquated way to run the school, considering the distance between the Board and the University and the way the Board acted on school policy like social regulations, which the board couldn't relate to. In answering, Sargent referred to his new task force that will hopefully uncover the answers to questions like these. Later, the Governor expressed his feelings that appointing a student to the Board was a step in the right direction of improving the relations of the Board from within. Olken answered by saying, "I know its an advancement, but after watching the slow motion for four years, I had hoped for a greater step."

The Student Senate President admitted that she liked the governing set-up of the University of Toronto. "There, all the decisions are made by a board made up of 20 students, 20 faculty, 10 administrators, and 20 laymen from Toronto, since it is the city that supports the school. All decisions made at this board are final, there is no Board of Trustees to go to. Possibly a set-up similiar to that would be the answer for smoother more efficient government at U-Mass."

During the conference, Sargent was asked about last year's budget cut that hurt the state school systems. He pointed out that each year the budget is higher but also said that Massachusetts has a lot of problems and that priorities had to be established and that the funds for higher education thus suffered.

When questioned about allowing legalized gambling to foot the bill for higher education he replied, "I don't want to sound like a prude, but I don't think we should pay for higher education through legalized gambling. It should be the citizen's responsibility. Other states have tried but have found that it doesn't bring in enough revenue."

Reversing the tables, Sargent asked the school Presidents what

Trustees Approve WMUA Power Watt Increase

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

BOSTON - The University Board of Trustees at its monthly meeting yesterday authorized WMUA, the undergraduate radio station on the Amherst campus, to increase its power to 1000 watts. Currently the radio station operates with a power of only 10 watts.

The decision to increase the station's power was supported by the University's Broadcasting council because of the development of programming in recent years. The trustees noted that they are not interested in censorship but rather desire the development of professional standards.

In recent years many students living in Southwest and also commuting students have complained that they were unable to receive WMUA's signal. The power increase, which will probably not take place until the beginning of next fall's semester, will enable the radio station's signal to be heard all over the Pioneer Valley.

In other business Richard Saunders, Associate Dean for Academic Affairs at Worcester, presented the Trustees with the problems now facing applicants to the Medical School. Presently, there are 257 applicants of which all are required to be Mass. residents, for the medical school. Only 16 students will be able to enter the school next fall while construction is taking place. Saunders asked for and was granted approval for initiating the acceptance of students.

Nixon Announces Troop Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon announced Monday night he is ordering the withdrawal of 50,000 more troops from South Vietnam by April 15.

The action, third of the Nixon administration's troop withdrawals, is being taken despite a substantial increase in enemy infiltration, Nixon said.

"However, I have consistently said that we must take risks for peace," Nixon said in a brief address to the nation broadcast live over the major television and radio networks.

Nixon warned "the leaders in Hanoi know that if infiltration and the level of enemy activity increase while we are reducing our forces, they also will be running a risk."

Nixon called the new U.S. pullout "another orderly step in our plan for peace in Vietnam."

He tied it to progress toward training the South Vietnamese army to replace American forces.

The 50,000-man reduction comes atop 60,000 troop cuts announced in June and September by the administration, although the President said that statistically speaking the troop ceilings have been reduced by 115,500 men.

The difference results from the fact that the Nixon administration began its withdrawal when the American force level stood at 542,000 below the then-ceiling of 549,500.

The numbers seemed confusing but the White House assured newsmen that a total of 110,000 men will have been removed under the Nixon troop cuts by next mid-April, which will drop the force level to 434,000 lowest since March 1967 when just under 421,000 were committed in Vietnam.

Nixon said the United States has made no progress in its efforts to negotiate a peace in the Paris talks with North Vietnam and the Viet Cong but said the American negotiators would continue their efforts.

The President still has not named a successor at the negotia-

Draft Lottery Not Random?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Four students at Massachusetts Institute of Technology say the Dec. 1 draft lottery was not as random as billed.

The students said studies of the lottery indicate that "some thing other than pure chance" affected its outcome.

No one is suggesting the lottery was tampered with, the four said, in a letter to "Science," the Journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The capsules were in the glass bowl in such a way that if your birthday was in the period from January to June, chances were that you'd get a high number," the letter said.

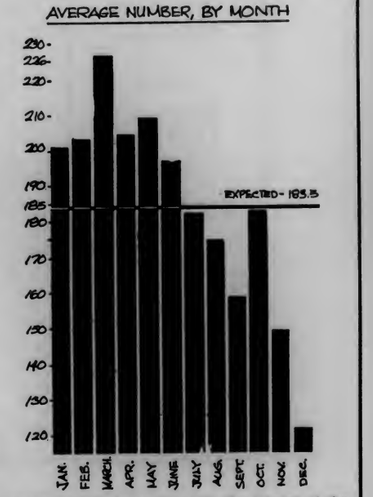
"It just seems that no one bothered to mix them up and down very thoroughly."

They said they took a given month's draft numbers, added them up, then divided the total by the number of days in the month.

They expected the results to show an average of about 183 for each month, they said, half the number of days in 1970, assuming that each month got an approximately even distribution of high-middle and low draft numbers.

"What did surprise us, because it was so highly improbable, was that the months with high averages, were all clustered together," they said. "They should have been scattered throughout the 12 months."

The group speculated that the capsules were thrown into the glass bowl in such a way that ones containing the January dates were on the bottom and those containing the December dates were near the top.



GRAPH SHOWS for each month, the average of that month's "assigned draft numbers". The expected average for a given month is 183.5. It was also expected, however, that six months would have averages above 183.5 and that six months would have averages below 183.5. The surprising factor was that the six months with means higher than 183.5 all are grouped together.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

NEW YORK (AP) - An unofficial commission to investigate allegations of a national extermination plot against the Black Panthers was announced Monday by former Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg and the NAACP's Roy Wilkins.

Citing recent clashes between Black Panther militants and police in Chicago and Los Angeles, Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said: "If the Panthers are at fault, our investigation will bring it out. If the police are at fault, the investigation will bring it out."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - A disciplinary committee at Harvard reported Monday night two students have been ordered separated from the University for their part in "an obstructive demonstration" Nov. 19 in the office of Ernest R. May, dean of the college.

The two separations were the most severe discipline meted out in the cases of 25 against whom Dean May filed complaints.

In a report on the disposition of the 25 cases, the Committee on Rights and Responsibilities of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences said that "all of those charged here were involved in concerted activities aimed at the forcible confinement of the dean of the college."

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) - High bail was set Monday for three men charged with assault with intent to murder during a Sunday melee involving 20 members of the Hell's Angels motorcycle club.

A police patrol wagon was wrecked before some 30 officers restored order at the Andover Street House where the party was held. Police said they confiscated a rifle.

they thought the student trustees will try to do. The first reply was that they would hopefully set up clear guidelines for who can censor student publications.

There has been a furor lately in some of the state colleges over closing of newspapers because of the now infamous Eldridge Clever article. Sargent commented on the student publications by saying "I don't think there should be any censorship. However," he added, "the publications should realize the element of responsibility they have to the community."

Sargent closed the conference by reiterating the student trustees was a great step and he hoped the students would lead the thinking when the board must make decisions.

Phil Lerner, a UMass alumnus of only two years, and now an assistant to the Governor, commented after the conference, "The addition of a student to the Board of Trustees is a major step in bringing about well overdue self rule at the University."

ANOTHER JOB - Cindi Olken added to her long lists of duties the job of student representative to the Board of Trustees. The position was made official yesterday by Governor Sargent.

Trustees Meeting

The level of tuition for medical students was set at $600 which is the average for state medical schools. It will cost a medical student approximately $800 plus room and board to attend the proposed $125 million campus.

Plans submitted by Campbell, Aldrich and Nulty Inc. for the medical school and Ritchey Associates for the hospital building were also accepted.

A feasibility study is being instituted at the Amherst campus to study future housing needs and will be finished within the next three months.

The Trustees were pleased in passing a resolution congratulating the Student Workshop on Activities Program for a worthwhile and professional conference which took place in Lee, Mass. and was attended by many of the Board members. Trustee Robert Gordon termed the conference the achievement of a "better understanding" of each other's point of view.

Earlier in the day the Trustees were presented an open letter by Black students from UMass Boston concerning the "indecencies that exist in this school."

They described the indecencies as a "void of courses dealing with the black experience," tenure discriminately applied to Black people, the ineptness of departments to acquire Black teachers and the "unconstitional procedures" of the University which "refuses to give Black people the rights that everyone else has."

Chancellor Broderick of UMass Boston has scheduled a meeting with Black students on Jan. 8 at 3:00 p.m. in Boston to discuss their grievances.

"Danton's Death"

By KEVIN WM. DONOVAN
Fine Arts Staff

On December 11-14, the UMass Theatre presented Georg Buechner's DANTONS DEATH as the second offering of its 1969-70 season. Although it was warmly received by the audience, the production was plagued by a number of substantial weaknesses.

Before the play began, the entire cast was assembled on a set consisting of a series of steps, ramps, and platforms that appeared to have been left over from a performance by the Vienna Choir Boys. Some of the actors talked and joked among them selves, while others sang or strolled from one group to the next.

This array of activity was apparently an attempt by production-director Gary Stewart to detach the audience from emotional identification with the characters, thus providing an anti-illusory framework in which to view the play. However, what was communicated was the cast's pre-performance tension, and their strained nonchalance was glaringly obvious.

As Robespierre, Dan Johnson figeted about the stage in an Ozzie Nelson sweater, his awkward gestures and overly pretentious tone marring what otherwise was a fine performance. In addition, the constant forced laughter of the cast in reaction to supposedly humorous lines within the play was quite annoying at times. In general, there seemed to be a great deal of overacting and indecision of movement, and the majority of the lines formed a seemingly endless chain of earth-shaking platitudes, admittedly more a fault of the playwright than of the cast.

Michael Walker, as Danton, delivered a solid performance, but at times he also succumbed to inappropriate and affected histrionics. However, Joseph Wilkins as Camille and Elizabeth Weiss as his wife, Lucille, both gave outstanding performances. Miss Weiss particularly enhanced the second half of the play which was as a whole more polished than the first. The eerie hissing of the characters in the final scene was quite effective, yet at this point the play could hardly be saved from being much more than disappointing.

BC Senate Curbs ROTC

The academic senate of Boston College has recommended that the school's Army ROTC program be retained, but without academic credit or departmental status.

The action must be approved by the Jesuit institution's body, the board of directors, before becoming final.

The senate - which is composed of one-fourth students, one-fourth administrators and one-half faculty - defeated a motion to completely abolish ROTC by a 46-4 vote. The vote on reducing its status was 48 to 2.

If the recommendations are upheld by the board of directors, presumably the college's contract with the Army would have to be renegotiated to take into account the loss of credit and other changes.

College Newspapers Change Content and Political Tone

This year the UNIVALA became the EXPONENT. A typical issue contained articles on the "military-industrial complex," the plight of the American Indian children, and war toys.

In announcing the change in their paper, the editors wrote: "Its emphasis will be on ideas and interpretation: we live in a university community, where the accent is on ideas, and we feel very strongly that the purpose of a university newspaper is much more than just a bulletin board. It should reflect views, should emphasize opinion."

The change from the UNIVALA to the EXPONENT was typical of what is happening to student newspapers on many campuses, according to officers of the U. S. Student Press Association, an association of about 350 college newspapers, which held its eighth annual congress here.

Other newspapers which association staff members say have changed their formats (and sometimes their names as well) include the SOUTH END (formerly the DAILY COLLEGIAN at Wayne State University, the BU NEWS at Boston University, CHORAGOS (formerly the NEWS) at Mount Holyoke College, the DAILY PENNSYLVANIAN at the University of Pennsylvania, the University of New Mexico LOBO, the Mississippi State University REFLECTOR, the NEW UNIVERSITY (formerly the ANTHILL) at the University of California at Irvine, the Mary Washington College BULLET, and the Bard College OBSERVER.

On these campuses, student editors have changed almost everything about their papers. Most of them have adopted a "magazine-style" format with wide columns, large pictures, and longer articles. They have added news and features about off-campus events and issues, and their political tone generally has shifted to the left.

Applications Available For Freiburg Program

Applications are being accepted for the 1970-71 UMass Freiburg Program. Students who will be upper division or graduate students next year and who have a good command of German are eligible to apply. The program is not restricted to German majors. Students enrolled in the program enroll in University of Freiburg courses in the arts, social sciences and humanities. They may also enroll in courses given by the several UMass faculty who will be attached to the University's Atlantic Studies Institute in Freiburg. Next year's director of the program will be Professor Lawrence Ryan of the German Department.

Students interested in learning about the program are urged to attend a special meeting Wednesday, December 17 at 8:00 p.m. inthe Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. Several faculty and students who were in the Freiburg Program last year will describe the program and answer questions on it. Further information is available at the Office of International Programs, 235C Whitmore.

Got a bright idea?
...put it on paper!

Coke won't make the quiz easier,
make the lines shorter,
make the weather better,
make your blind date taller or make your draft board forget you.

Come on, man, shine a new light on the subject. Views are changing and Warren Greene of Auburn University has created a new ad for our good friend...Coca-Cola. But it's not just a bright idea, it's Warren's impression of our product and that's important to us. What about you?

How do you see Coke as part of your today? Why not take a few moments to design an ad for us? Show us your own unique way of looking at Coca-Cola. Go ahead... grab a Coke and lay the words on us! If your ad is chosen to be published, we'll lay $25.00 on you.

Who knows? You may be $25.00 richer. And, if nothing else, you're bound to enjoy the Coca-Cola. When your bright idea for Coke is on paper, mail it to:

FROM OUR SIDE

Humane Sanction?

Laws on abortion have become more liberal of late and it seems the trend will continue. In Washington, D.C., the U.S. District Court recently declared unconstitutional a law that made the performing of abortions a criminal offense (the only exception being to save the mother's life). In California, the state supreme court did the same in September. In New York state, movements attacking anti-abortion laws are now underway.

Though these trends may be good in that unprofessional means of abortion will not have to be used by those who seek it, they are, in a more important way, bad.

Why?

Because our basic problem is not abortion itself. Rather, it is our overly conservative attitudes toward contraception and illegitimacy.

In a study of American views of abortion, psychologist Albert Ellis has pointed out that "abortions are mostly had by married women, who, for one reason or another, do not wish more children, or by unmarried women who wish to avoid the stigma of illegitimacy."

Obviously, then, if our views of contraception and illegitimacy were freer, there would be little need for abortion. These are the attitudes which need to be liberalized, not our attitudes toward abortion.

The act of abortion is inhumane. Like other inhumane acts, such as murder and robbery, it should remain illegal. It denies an unborn, but still very much alive child the chance of experiencing life and deciding FOR HIMSELF whether or not it is worth living. To deny him this chance in order to avoid facing difficulties is the height of selfishness.

And attempts to use our own resistance to change puritanical attitudes as just cause for the sanctioning of this inhumane act are sheer rationalizations. Which is what the "liberal" abortion laws are based on.

Atrocities: Transcending Race?

To The Editor:

In Keith Bromery's editorial of December 11, his view is distorted by short-sightedness. A look back in time, or to other nations today, would reveal a continuing history of man's inhumanity. Human atrocities have transcended races, nations, and have occurred in homogeneous groups. Ancient Egyptians enslaved the Hebrews, Cortez liquidated Inca Civilization, Turks persecuted Armenians, Kenyans have driven out Indians and Pakistanis. Romans tortured Christians, the Moors invaded Spain, Japanese wiped out native populations in the Pacific. Mau Maus terrorized whites, Nazis exterminated Jews and now Jews are accused of similar crimes by Arabs. Black Panthers kill themselves, Japanese-Hawaiian-Americans look down on Philippinos and "racially impure" Hawaiians. White settlers were massacred by American Indians in Deerfield, and the Leopard Society exists in Africa where members delight in torturing and killing their victims. Of course Mr. Bromery's examples may be added, and the list can go on. Racism, cruelty, and atrocities are not exclusively the domain of any group except HOMO SAPIENS.

The human is a despicable creature which seems to obey few logical or natural laws. Man has defied natural control with medicine, and the insane, religious desire to populate the world with his likeness. One group of humans will ruthlessly control another group if they are powerful enough, and will use race, religion, or nationality as an excuse. The only comfort is that man will some day be extinct. His advent and passing will be told in the sonar legends of the noble porpoise, and will have truly been a gift of the gods.

EXECUTIVE PERFORMANCE
And The Act Went Unnoticed

I was sitting waiting for our President to appear on the screen. The room around me seemed rather quiet. "Hmm, not too many people here... there must be an exam or something tomorrow." At nine o'clock, the President began his press conference. Four of us watched (I do not suppose that we were or are avid fans), but we listened, half expecting to hear something. Funny, I thought numbers I-250 would be watching; it's their lives. But I guess they were worrying about their future and did not have time to ponder the present. The President said there was no significant change in peace talks and other U.S. peace moves since his last speech on November 3, no significant change since October 15th. Where were the Moratorium crusaders? This is the policy they are attempting to change, didn't they care to see the results of their march? The President talked about a massacre - many civilians slaughtered. My transient sadness was interrupted by people walking and laughing through the T.V. room.

"Hey, I didn't know he was on tonight!"

"Hurry up. They'll leave without us!"

"Oh, I thought you said cartoon. He's not funny, he's sad!" Vietnam seems like a remote place sometimes. They should have hung around. The President announced a possible reduction in troops. That was hilarious -- part of his "secret" plan for ending the war, which by the way will end some day -- we have his word. The President was asked about his relationship to the youth of this country. That's us, fellow students! Wonder if he's affected by us at all? Wonder if he listens? I did not hear his reply too well, someone was playing basketball in the T.V. room.

Our president "likes to be liked." Personally, I do not think he is very popular. Not too many people showed up for his performance last night.

TWO CAMPS

Where It Hurts

Of the many problems facing the U.S. today, both on the domestic front and in foreign affairs, the saliency of the Vietnam issue has become so powerful that it often overshadows all other issues in the mind of the public.

Today it is difficult for one whose views are in the middle of the road. The Moratorium of October and that of November and Nixon's speech of Nov. 3, have only served to divide the country into two distinct camps at least among the public, leaving no room for those who don't agree with either group.

The efforts of dissenters should no longer be directed at Nixon, for it is obvious that he has turned a deaf ear (at least partially) to public opinion. Neither can the public trust Nixon's platitudes and promises, for his actions have been consistently opposite to his public pronouncements. Pressure must therefore be exerted upon him through other means-namely the Congress. They control the purse strings and can wield tremendous power, over the President as well the people. They are more finely attuned to the opinions of their constituents -- public opinion.

Pressure can and should be brought to bear on Nixon, by the Congress, to continue the systematic withdrawal of all U.S. troops, for the U.S. position in Vietnam is a precarious one. We can never win a military victory against the Communists, for the basis of their success is political and economic instability. This instability is fostered by the continuing presence of our military forces in Vietnam. But a sudden and precipitous withdrawal could be just as disastrous as the continued presence of our troops. Witness --the alleged Song My Massacres.

Looking into the past, the U.S. would have been wiser to send into Vietnam, industry and 500,000 Peace Corps workers ten years ago instead of combat troops. We didn't and we have paid the price with the blood of American lives and the lives of Vietnamese men, women and children.

We can and should withdraw from Vietnam within a reasonable time -- say 1 / 1 1/2 years. We can still win something of a victory against Communism and at the same time withdraw our troops honorably if we give the Vietnamese economic aid; if we help them build up industry that will give jobs and money to the people; if we aid them in setting up a sound educational system and get more extensive health services operating. Only with increased economic stability will come increased political stability. We can no longer stifle and sacrifice the needs, the desires and the lives of the Vietnamese for our own political benefit in foreign affairs or for the benefit of the defense industry. For now, the continued presence of U.S. troops hurts our prestige abroad and our domestic economy far more than a withdrawal would.

The domestic problems of our own nation are either being ignored or only given token attention - often due to lack of money and bureaucratic red tape. The country is more divided than it has been since the Civil War. Much of that money which is going to defense (Vietnam and military - industrial complex) and many of the defense industries can and should be diverted to areas dealing with urban problems, transportation, air and water pollution, education, poverty programs, drug and race problems and conservation.

Of course, the U.S. should not and cannot become isolationist. But let us shift our priorities to solving our own problems before we try to solve (or compound) the problems of others.

To People Who 'Search'

(Bruce Balboni, former president of the Student Senate at U-Mass, resigned his position and withdrew from the university several weeks ago. The following is an open letter to him. It is reprinted from the Amherst Record).

Dear Bruce:

By the time you announced you were leaving, it was too late to reach you.

Strange how often that happens. Someone quietly approaches the breaking point and no one understands what's happening until the time for helping has long since passed. You can only pick up the pieces or write a poem in memory of.

Not that I could have helped, but at least I could have listened sympathetically even though I disagreed with much of what you said.

But then, what you said wasn't nearly so important as what you did. You left.

I suspect we don't really know why you left because the "personal reasons" were probably the most decisive and the most difficult to articulate. It's hard to put into words a feeling you don't even hitch an adjective onto. Words dry up and you have only tears, a world sadness, or anger, a rebellion in your cells.

Maybe you went to a psychiatrist and told him what was bothering you--Vietnam, injustice in many forms, people who can't see -- and maybe he told you he couldn't help you because the same things were bothering him.

Where do you go from there? I suppose you leave and start looking.

You did say that you've found courses here irrelevant. (Probably that point received more prominence than it should have because it was possible to put that in words). That situation is changing and rather rapidly.

Many new proposals have been suggested and some have already been implemented. It's too bad these changes haven't come in time to benefit us much, but they'll benefit others. And it's still possible to take what you want out of a course and ignore the rest.

I'm not suggesting you do that now. Time enough for that. Better, perhaps for you to come back when you know what you want to take out, when you know what you want courses to be relevant to. That feeling I mentioned - World-sadness. I'm sure you've known it and known it recently. It's a feeling that comes when all you can see is pain. It comes when you see all the things that are wrong and you know you can't change them. It comes when you're past the stage of frustration at trying to articulate and reason and when you can only cry at the latest kill counts in Vietnam.

I found something that helps sometimes (not always) when I get an attack of world-sadness.

Thoreau wrote: "I came into this world, not chiefly to make it a good place to live in, but to live in it, be it good or bad. A man has not everything to do, but something; and because he cannot do everything, it is not necessary that he do something wrong."

If you could accept this viewpoint you could achieve a kind of peace, a peace that comes when you stop thrashing. Peace or, I suppose, catatonic schizophrenia, depending on your definition of either.

Or you could crusade to right all wrongs and achieve greatness or full-blown insanity, again depending on your definitions. I'll leave those definitions to you, but do wait a year or so before attempting them.

You see, you'll be on your odyssey for the next year or so. I'd like to talk with you when it's over. Someday maybe you'll be walking in the rain to a bus stop in a strange city, crossing streets and avoiding puddles and holes and thinking about the shape your life is taking. It's then I want to talk with you.

You'll think about all the things

Sex Course: From Abortion To Contraception

By SKIP ROSENBLOOM
(Of the Amherst Student)

This year's Human Sexuality course at Smith is now almost finished and, according to chief organizer Sydney Waller '70, the course has been generally successful.

Miss Waller and Mimi Horner, both of Smith, are responsible for most of the work done in organizing the course. Barry Hoke, of Amherst, handled registration here, and Professor Haskell Coplin devised the course's content.

Approximately 400 people, including students from Smith, Amherst, UMass, and Northampton Junior College, took the course. 200 Smith girls had to be turned away to make room for male students.

COPLIN LECTURES

The course is a series of lectures followed by seminars. The seminars, led by students or faculty couples, are of two kinds: intellectual, in which students discussed and analyzed what they learned in the previous lecture; and personal, called T-groups (for Therapy groups), in which students rather than talk coldly about lectures, concentrated on relating as human beings. Students elected one kind of seminar before the course began.

The first lecture, given on October 8 by Dr. Coplin, was on the pysycho-sexual development of the male-female relationship.

The next three lectures were given by Dr. Philip Sarrel, of New Haven. His first was entitled, "Anatomy, Sexual Techniques and Responses," but focused almost entirely on the female anatomy, a choice of concentration which though probably comfortable for Dr. Sarrel, let down many students.

HOW TO ABORT

However, his second lecture, on contraception, proved to be more exciting, perhaps because Dr. Sarrel has done extensive research on this subject. The most startling part of the lecture was Dr. Sarrel's showing and discussion of the morning - after pill. Evidently, this pill has tested remarkably well at Stanford, with the only bad effect being nausea.

His third lecture, on abortion, was also a valuable experience for students in the course. After talking about the horrifying methods used by some abortionists, Dr. Sarrel told about the Clergyman Consultation Service, a local organization which counsels girls desiring abortions and tells them where they can get an abortion.

A lecture was given by Dr. Anderson, a woman gynecologist and obstetrician and a Miss Ingrid Mitchell, from Sweden, contained a Swedish film on birth. The film, besides graphically showing a birth, was particularly effective in that it dealt with real humans, rather than with the vices and shadowy figures found in most clinical films.

Recently, the role of the male and female in American society was discussed. A member of a Boston chapter of a female liberation group talked about the discrimination against her sex, and Norm Braden, Amherst '67 spoke about male emancipation and the role of the male as arbitrarily defined by society.

The final lecture, to be presented in February, will be concerned with the population problem. In March, the course will begin again with a different series of lectures.

The organizers of the course do feel that there are some problems with the course. First of all, seminars were erratic in quality; some, in fact, disbanded mid-way in the course. Miss Waller feels that the unsuccessful seminars were those which were too intellectual; she enthusiastically praised, however, the T-groups, calling them "Communal experiences."

NEED MORE SOUL

A second problem was the lack of males in the course. Three fourths of the enrollment were female, and the balance would have been less equal had not the organizers refused the 200 Smith girls. A reason for the lack of male enrollment could be the $2.50 price for the course, a price the organizers felt necessary but too high.

The final problem was the generally unemotional nature of the lectures. Only the lecture on love concerns human feeling. Hopefully, the next series will deal more fully with the soul.

Despite the problems, the Human Sexuality course proved to be an extremely worthwhile experience for its students.

One immediate result of it is that Miss Waller has received over thirty-five phone calls this semester asking for information on abortion.

The course has also been significant in what it suggests about students and their attitude toward their education. In Miss Waller's words, "It definitely points to a tremendous amount of interest in a course relating to our immediate lives - our bodies and our minds."

That's about all you need to open an Equity Management Account. (Ask anywhere else and you're likely to find they're not very interested in anything under $15,000. In fact, don't be surprised if they think of $15,000 as a modest starter.)

What's more, once you've come up with the first $7,000, you can add as little as about $2,300 on the first day of any month.

This is not a mutual fund—your money is invested in about 20 stocks which are actually carried in your name. This means that if, for any reason, you decide to withdraw, you can take your stock in kind or you can elect to take cash instead.

I know what it all adds up to, although I have no idea how it does. After your walk, in that strange city, you'll know that step by painful step, you grew. When you come back, you probably won't expect professors to help you find out who you are or where you're going.

You'll probably come back with clearer answers, even though you may never have formally asked the questions.

Maybe you'll come back to the University as I did -- an observer, more removed, with a different perspective. You'll know you're just stopping by here for a little while and then you'll go on. Still looking maybe, but more quietly.

I do wish you peace. And I hope it's not too late to tell someone I don't know that I care what happens to him.

Sincerely,
Gena Corea

Frosh Stickers Split, Down UConn, Lose to Harvard

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

The UMass freshman hockey team split a pair of games last week, beating UConn 13-0 at home Tuesday and dropping a 6-3 decision against the Harvard J.V.'s Saturday at Watson Rink in Cambridge.

The score tells the whole story of the UConn game. The UMass frosh completely dominated every phase of the game. Center Pat Keenan scored five goals, but the plaudits for this game should go to the entire team. It was a total team effort defensively, offensively, and in the performance turned in by goalie John Kiah. The fact that UMass outshot Connecticut 74-25 is indicative of the way the game went.

Paul Whitney opened the scoring for the frosh sextet at 6:11 of the first period assisted by Bob Shea; Lonnie Avery tallied the next goal at 10:55 of the same period; and Whitney closed out the scoring in the initial stanza with his second goal at 12:51.

Rick Anderson got in on the scoring act at 7:50 of the second period with assists going to Dave Kelley and Dave Branch; Don Lowe followed with a goal at 8:47; Bob Shilalie, Don Riley, and Joe Roache completed the scoring in the second period, each with singleton tallies.

The third period belonged solely to Keenan. He scored all of his five goals in the last stanza, three of them unassisted. The second-line center opened the scoring at 0:33 of the third and completed the UMass romp with his fifth goal at 14:00 assisted by Winchester Woolard and Kelley.

The Harvard game was an altogether different story. UMass entered the game depleted by injuries to key personnel and the results were evident. The Little Redmen started out quickly and actually demonated play for the first few minutes. Whitney again opened the scoring, this time at 3:04, with the assist again going to Shea. However, the Crimson J.V.'s came on strong after that and tied the game at 12:39 of the first period on a goal by Connell. This closed the scoring for the first period, but only superb goaltending by Kiah, including an eight-shot barrage after he had had his stick knocked away from him, kept Harvard from breaking the game open in the initial frame.

UMass could not ward off the surging Harvard team in the second period, however, and the home team scored four times to pull into a comfortable 5-1 lead. The Little Redmen suffered constant defensive lapses and were repeatedly caught out of position in the middle period.

Keenen narrowed the lead with a goal at 2:10 of the third period assisted by Riley. Another Keenan goal at 16:31 suddenly brought the UMass frosh back into contention, but a disputed goal by Harvard's Connell at 19:00 closed out the scoring for the game.

Grapplers Meet Harvard

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Coming off a losing weekend against some of the best wrestlers in the east, the UMass wrestlers will be trying to get back on the winning trail when they face Harvard tonight at Cambridge. The Redmen are now 3-3 on the season after the disasterous trip to Pennsylvania, where they lost to Bloomsburg State, Indiana State, and Ohio University.

The Redmen will use basically the same lineup, but injuries to some key men may cause some real problems for Coach Homer Barr. George Zguris suffered a rib injury over the weekend and had to forfeit his last match. If he can't wrestle, Coach Barr hopes Dick Donlin will be able to fill in at heavyweight. The Redmen don't have a wrestler at 190 lbs. and either Bob Willman or Tom Andrewes will have to move up to that weight. The other question for the Redmen is Clay Jester who has an injured shoulder. He should be ready at 150 lbs., but if he can't wrestle, the Redmen will forfeit. Other starters will be Nick DiDomenico at 115, Dave Reynolds at 126, Phil Davis at 134, Sheldon Goldbert at 142, Mike Brauner 158, Tom Young 167, and Kent Mignocchi at 177.

Harvard finished second in the Ivy League last year and fifth in the east. They are 3-0 this year with wins over Wesleyan, Brown and Franklin and Marshall. One of their top wrestlers drowned this past summer and two of the lightweights quit the team. Coach Barr thinks his team is as good as Harvard, but "injuries may kill us."

Redmen Meet UConn in "Must" Game

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

It will be the task of what has been an inconsistent UMass basketball team to cool off a streaking, undefeated Connecticut five tonight at the Cage. Tapoff is at 8 p.m. with a freshman clash between the two teams scheduled for 6:30.

The Redmen find themselves in a must win situation versus the fast starting Huskies who are in the midst of retaining their glory hoop days of old under the leadership of new coach Dee Rowe.

UMass cannot afford to lose another Conference game since their late season schedule has them playing on enemy courts for the most part. The Redmen are one game down to both UConn and Rhode Island. Thus they must win tonight, simple as that.

Coach Jack Leaman is well aware of the importance of this one. "This is more important than any game we have played this year. We can't lose tonight or we'll be in a very bad spot to repeat as Conference champion. This is the trouble starting with all these home games with a young team. You lose one and you must make it up on the road."

Leaman has been displeased with two things thus far, inconsistency and lack of the production he expected at center. "I think that the inexperience of much of the team has contributed to our inability to put together two good halfs of basketball. But we must get better performances from the center position."

In UConn Leaman's charges will face a team that as sophomores, were 5-19 and as freshmen 7-8. But the combination of Rowe, and the addition of some transfers and sophomores have quickly made the Huskies a top contender for Conference and New England honors.

The Huskies have won four straight, and two of them have to be considered upsets. Those were impressive wins over Yale and Boston College, along with triumphs over Fairfield and New Hampshire.

UConn has won simply through torrid shooting and hard-nosed rebounding from a bulky frontcourt. They have averaged well over 50% in field goals shooting in every game.

Leading the bombing have been two excellent guards. Bob Boyd, a 5'11 junior from Worcester has been the leading scorer averaging around 20 points, while also being the chief playmaker. He is joined by 6'4 junior Bob Staak, who is averaging around 18 points. Both are two of the best guards in the Conference, and have some backup help in sophomores Roy Brooks, Paul Zorsky and Doug Melody.

Upfront the Huskies are big and tough and include two capable scorers. Bob Taylor, a sophomore transfer at 6'5 has been averaging in double figures while pulling down a like number of rebounds. Ron Hrubala, a 6'6 junior, who was pleasant surprise for UConn as sophomore has picked up where he left off averaging in the teens for both points and rebounds.

Also playing a lot up front is 6'8 senior Tony Budzinsky and 6'3 junior Tom McCrocklin who came off the bench to spark UConn in their win over B.C. In addition 6'8 senior Steve Koski and 6'4 junior John Crisp who is back after a year's ineligibility, give UConn frontcourt depth.

UMass must get a stout defensive job from its backcourt plus a hard-nosed performance from the forwards if they hope to knock the well-balanced Huskies from the undefeated ranks.

ANOTHER REBOUND FOR JULIUS - UMass sophomore sensation Julius Erving, (32) takes a rebound away from UNH's Phil Blum in action from Saturday night's 76-56 win. Tonight the Redmen meet UConn at 8:00 in the Cage in a key Conference battle.

An extra added attraction, in what should be one of the big games in this hallowed rivalry, will be the fact that Connecticut has not been too inconspicious in the recent trials and tribulations UMass has suffered with the Yankee Conference. UConn, from the illustrious President Homer Babbidge on down to the team would like nothing better than to knock off the Redmen tonight.

It should be an interesting evening.

Frosh Dump Amherst, 66-61

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Although displaying great inconsistency and very sloppy play at times, the UMass freshmen basketball team defeated their cross-town rivals from Amherst College, 66-61 at the Cage Saturday night. The win evened the frosh's record at 2-2.

Despite the prevalence of missed lay-ups and poor passing by both sides, but especially UMass, the Little Redmen dominated the first half. Although they were unable to score their first field goal until 13:13 of the half, the frosh pulled ahead early.

Free throws led the way for the Little Redmen as Scott Golden broke the scoring ice with two charity tosses. Mike Polakoff hit another one and Chuck Olsen, who was high scorer for the frosh, hit two more to give UMass a 5-0 lead with only a minute and a half gone. Aided by Redman turnovers, Amherst came back with two hoops by Bob LaVigne and one by Dave Mantini to tie the score at 6-6. Golden then made two more baskets for the Redmen to give his team a 10-6 lead with 13:13 left.

After Dave Margulies netted one for Amherst, UMass ran off eight straight points on two baskets by Chuck Peters and a pair of free throws for both Olsen and Polakoff. The teams traded scores for the rest of the half and at the buzzer the Little Redmen led, 30-22.

The second half proved to be a little more difficult for the frosh. Amherst came back right away with baskets by Margulies, Mantini and Lavigne while UMass could only counter with a free throw by Olsen to cut the lead to 31-28.

The Little Redmen were plagued at this point by their inability to break an Amherst press. However, after a time out, the frosh regrouped and scored five straight points. Scoring in this surge was gone on hoops by Peters and Olsen and a charity toss by Golden.

The overall play of the game improved from this point on as the UMass lead see-sawed between four and eight points. Finally, however, Amherst tied the score at 55-55 on a Margulies jump shot. Olsen then came back with a basket and two free throws to give the Little Redmen a four point lead with 5:45 remaining.

However, with only 1:11 left on the clock, Amherst cut the lead to one as Mantini canned another jumper. But the Little Redmen kept their poise and put it out of reach as Bob Kalbfell and Mark Starr came off the bench to score four points to ice the victory for the frosh, 66-61.

Once again Assistant Coach John Shockro led the team from the sidelines and gained his first win of the young season. Chuck Olsen was again impressive for the Little Redmen as he canned twenty points and did a strong job off the boards. Also deserving praise was Golden who played the entire game until he fouled out with 6:43 remaining and scored sixteen points.

Tonight the Little Redmen face another tough challenge. This time the competition will be provided by the frosh from UConn. The action is slated to start at the Cage at 6:00.

Norwich, 6-3, Middlebury, 4-2, Drop Redmen Over Weekend

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Journeying into the Northlands of Vermont, with visions of sweeping a two game road trip against Middlebury and Norwich College, the Redmen returned empty-handed. Friday night they lost 4-2 to Middlebury and Saturday afternoon Norwich defeated them, 6-3. Despite the two losses, the Redmen showed plenty of desire and promises of greatness in the future. Their inexperience, inconsistent back-checking, and their inability to capitalize on scoring opportunities were the Redman's failing points.

Middlebury scored first on a power day goal by Jim Glynn at 12:47. UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty came up with several remarkable saves as Middlebury outshot the slow-starting Redmen 12-5 in the opening period. In the second period, the Redmen came out flying. Sophomore Bob Whelden scored at 6:25 with assists going to Jack Edwards and John Hartnett. Both teams displayed fine style as it remained scoreless until 12:30 when Middlebury scored two quick goals. Eddie Riley went off at 11:45 for cross-checking. Forty-five seconds later Middlebury's Rick Kelley scored. Twelve seconds later, on a fluke bounce, Middlebury scored when Steve Anderson's shot suddenly bounced in front of Flaherty's stick into the net. The second period ended with Middlebury holding the advantage, 3-1.

During the third period, the Redmen completely dominated play. Edwards scored at 1:12 narrowing Middlebury's lead to one goal. But their inability to finish the play hurt UMass dearly. Several times the puck was centered across the crease out no one was there to collect the puck. Middlebury scored an insurance goal at 19:15 of the period. The final score was Middlebury 4, UMass 2.

Saturday afternoon the Redmen started slowly against Norwich. Norwich opened the scoring with a first period goal by Mark Callahan. During the second period, the UMass offense finally clicked, but at the cost of scoring goals their defensive play broke down. Whelden scored at 6:09 tying the game at 1-1. One minute later, Norwich went ahead on Dave Hunt's score. At 15:03 Dennis Grabowski tied it for the Redmen but Norwich came bouncing back seventeen seconds later when Jim Marr scored his first goal of the year. Both teams scored again in the middle period but Norwich still held a one goal advantage.

The third period was all Norwich as they dominated play holding UMass scoreless while netting two goals. Final score, Norwich 6, UMass 3.

ICE CHIPS -- Goalie P.J. Flaherty was outstanding against Middlebury stopping 37 shots. Against Norwich he stopped 24 shots but poor back-checking gave Norwich numerous three-on-two and two-on-one breaks. The penalty killing unit of Eric Scrafield and Dan Reidy did a commendable job. Center Charlie Donovan, though he didn't score, played extremely well in both games.

CHARLIE DONOVAN (left) has been a bright spot for the Redmen this year with his fine all-around play. BOB WHELDEN (right), back from a knee injury, showed some of his old scoring prowess with two goals this weekend.

"The Department of Public Safety has limited the basketball attendance figure for the student sections on the FLOOR in the Curry Hicks Cage to 3,000. Once the floor of the cage is filled to capacity students will be allowed to occupy the unsold sections of the balcony. When these sections are filled student admissions must be terminated. Therefore, for the more attractive games we may not be able to accommodate all who wish to attend. We regret this disappointing situation; however, the safety of spectators must remain our primary concern."

Mermaids Dunk Holyoke

Christmas came early for the Girls Swim Team last Thursday night, as they turned in an outstanding team effort in defeating Mt. Holyoke, 49-46. Record-setting performances were turned in by two individual winners, as well as the freestyle relay quartet. Gretchen Nelson, a freshman, was a double winner in both breaststroke events, taking the 50 in: 36.0 and the 100 in 1.18.4. Janet Shockley, the captain of the team, also took two firsts, one in the 100 free (1:00.5) and one in the 100 I.M. (1:12.5).

Scoring individual wins were Leslie Barselaar (50 free) and Jan Reid (50 fly). Others who contributed to the victory were Barb Quinn, Ginny Hepp, Nancy Tyksienski, Pat Ritchie, and Betsy Booher. The final relay decided the meet, with the Misses Nelson, Reid, Barselaar, and Shockley emerging victorious.

Thus far, the latter four have qualified to compete in the first Women's National Inter-Collegiate SWIMMING AND Diving Championships, which will be held at Illinois State University in March.

Program Set Up to Improve Campus Police, Black Relations

The five proposals have been worked out by representatives of the Town of Amherst, its Police Department, UMass administration and Black students, faculty and administration at the University.

The recommendations call for such things as a Black Community-police relations specialist for town and campus police; a "hot line" system of black resource people to be called by police in incidents involving blacks; a committee of police and black community representatives; recruitment of black campus police; and other measures.

The proposals are the result of an unusual three-day conference the past weekend at Cumbres, N.H. The conference was basically a sensitivity training session in which police, administration, students, blacks and others got together and focused on each other's interests and problems. It was conducted by Jack Porsche of the Illinois Commission on Human Relations, a nationally-known specialist on police-community relations.

The three-day meeting is part of a continuing effort to improve the racial climate at UMass that began in November of 1968. Black student demands made then resulted in a broad University program to improve conditions for black students on the Amherst campus. Representatives of the Town of Amherst joined the meeting as a result of a racial incident involving UMass black students and police in the town the past summer.

The University has already formed two special committees to improve the working of the campus police, both of them including student representation. One is an advisory group and the other a fact-finding committee.

Also begun under Dr. Joseph Havens, psychologist with the University Mental Health Services, is an accredited course for police officers, administrators and black students on police-community interaction on the college campus. Dr. Sheldon Cashdan of the psychology department is assisting Dr. Havens.

In detail, the five proposals are as follows: The first states that the Town of Amherst Police Department commit itself and do all it can to promote a flow of communication among the campus police, the Black Community and itself. The town department will "make a special effort to recruit black personnel for its department."

The second proposal recommends that the UMass Campus Security Department do the following: Devise a plan for student representation on the Campus Security Selection and Promotion Board; continue the short-term and long-term training programs involving campus security officers and students; continue special efforts to recruit black campus security personnel; assign volunteer campus security personnel to meet informally with students on a regular basis in dormitories and recreation areas.

The third point calls for twice-monthly and emergency meetings when necessary of a police-Black Community committee composed as follows: the town manager, the chief of police, a sergeant and a line officer from the Town of Amherst; the chief and director of security, a sergeant and a line officer from the University Police; and representatives of the Black Community from comparable levels representing a cross-section from the Town of Amherst and the University.

Point four recommends that in case of encounter, potential arrest and arrest, there will be names provided to both the University and the Town of Amherst Police. These names will be selected from the Black Community to be used as a resource and facility to aid and assist the police in relating to the problems that confront the community and the police. This arrangement could act as a hot line and would be included in the agenda of the first twice-monthly meeting. The arrangement could also deal with rumors.

The final point recommends that the Town of Amherst and University Police will each provide for the hiring of a Black Community-police relations person to meet the needs of the Town of Amherst, the University and the Black Community. This person would become a key addition in the twice-monthly Police-Black Community Black Community will provide the list of candidates.

Former SMU Student Govt. Pres. Traces Problems to Driscoll

By DON GLICKSTEIN
Staff Reporter

A former president of the Southeastern Massachusetts University Student Government said in a Collegian interview yesterday that all the problems that have occurred at SMU can be traced back to University President Joseph Driscoll.

Fred Fortin, President of the Student Government from 1967-1968 and now a grad student in the government department at UMass, called Driscoll an "autocrat", not willing to lose any of the power he had as a "one-man ruler" in a relatively small, but growing school (approximately 3,000 students).

Fortin reviewed the history of the escalating controversy at SMU that eventually led to a boycott, strike, and mass resignations of student leaders and faculty last month. In 1967, he said, the SMU Student Government overruled the results of their own referendum and voted to go along with President Driscoll's naming of the school football team the "Corsairs". Fortin called this incident "trivial, but an omen of sorts."

Since then, he said, Driscoll has been censured by the Student Senate for hiring a Pinkerton agent to trail the student Vice-President in the fall of 1968, he disregarded a ruling by the then Attorney-General Richardson to allow an art display with a swastikaed-American flag in it, he arbitrarily persuaded the Board of Trustees to give a one-year non-renewable contract to the art teacher sponsoring the display, and he recommended (but was overruled by the Board) that "six of the most popular professors, all radicals" be given non-renewable contracts, Driscoll has been "deceitful", Fortin added, by lying not only to the Board of Trustees, but by distorting news to the press.

That there are faculty members who support Driscoll is due to the makeup of SMU, declared Fortin. The school became the Southeastern Massachusetts University when two technical schools, the Bradford-Durfy Technological Institute and the New Bedford Institute of Technology merged. Approximately half of SMU's faculty consists of technicians with but a B.A. and a B.S. who have tenure.

Most of the newer faculty members support the students, asserted Fortin, including the former Dean of Arts and Sciences, Robert McCabe, who has resigned. The local branch of the American Association of University Professors Fortin added, has voted to censure Driscoll. Amont the supporters of Driscoll, he noted, is the Dean of Faculty, who allegedly said that students are immature and don't know the difference between "superordination and subordination."

When asked if Driscoll had ever initiated any reforms with student pressure, Fortin said, "Well, he built the buildings." Unless Driscoll is fired, Fortin predicted that there will be only unrest for SMU.

Homecoming Committee Censured by Gen. Court

The Homecoming Committee was censured in General Court action last night in connection with the Sly and the Family Stone concert.

The complaint was brought against the Chairman and Co-Chairman of the Homecoming Committee by Richard Johnson, a graduate student. The court ordered a full $14 refund for 4 tickets purchased by Johnson.

Johnson contended that : "the show started at 7:45 p.m., instead of 7 p.m., as per my ticket contract which stated 7 p.m. Some unannounced, unbilled, and unadvertised second rate performers took the stage until 9:05 p.m., . . . Sly did not appear at 7 p.m., and the Homecoming Committee broke their legal contract with me, the ticket purchaser, and I feel a full refund is unquestionably and certainly justly due to me."

In its letter of censure the General Court stated: "Regardless of the fact that members of the Homecoming Committee are undergraduate students they still have a moral and legal responsibility to the general public."

"Those sponsoring and promoting the Homecoming concerts are responsible for at least fulfilling their part of the legal contract (tickets and advertisements).

The Court further stated that although the delays were not directly the fault of the committee members "they are still responsible to the students that they serve."

N. Vietnam Premier Says US War Protests Will Help His Forces

WARSAW (AP) - North Vietnam's Premier Pham Van Dong is quoted as saying antiwar demonstrations in the United States have given Communist forces new impetus in their fight for "final victory."

The Hanoi government leader, in an interview distributed Wednesday by the Polish government press agency, PAP, predicted the protest movement would grow wider and deeper.

In terviewed by PAP's editor-in-chief, Michel Hofman, who is visiting Hanoi, Dong said: "This great sympathy and this great support added new strength to the Vietnamese people, encouraging it to fulfill its national and international duties. . .for final victory."

He said the two basic ones were complete and unconditional withdrawal from South Vietnam of American and "satellite" armies and the creation there of a provisional coalition government " whose task it would be to organize free and democratic general elections after the complete withdrawal of foreign troops."

Volpe Reveals Air Pollution Development

WASHINGTON (AP) - Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe unveiled Tuesday a modification kit for bus diesel engines and exhaust systems that he termed a significant development in pollution, noise and odor reduction.

He said the system produced by the Genreral Motors Corp. Truck and Coach Division eliminates smoke, reduces unburned hydrocarbon emissions by 90 per cent, cuts carbon monoxide 30 per cent and reduces nitrous oxides 17 per cent.

The new unit can be installed on nearly 22,000 post-1959 GMC busses now in service, Volpe said. This is about 45 per cent of the nation's transit and suburban busses.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - About the same number of cheap revolvers and pistols are available today as before enactment of the federal gun control law which became effective one year ago Tuesday, a study shows.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday 1970 draft calls can be cut by about 25,000 men as a result of the Nixon administration's latest 50,000-man withdrawal from Vietnam.

PANAMA (AP) - Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos returned to power in Panama Tuesday and the two colonels who ousted him the day before were in jail.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Simone "Sam the Plumber" DeCavalcante and 54 other persons were indicted Tuesday in connection with what federal authorities termed a $20-million-a-year gambling ring.

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union announced Tuesday it will boost defense spending next year by a modest 1.1 per cent, apparently seeking to discourage a spiraling arms race with the West.

FORT BENNING, GA. (AP) - The lawyer for 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., accused in the alleged massacre of 109 South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, asked Tuesday that the case be dismissed on the ground that the Army lacks jurisdiction.

CHICAGO (AP) - The second night of a proposed 6 p.m. curfew on whites in black areas came yesterday as quietly and without incident as the first night. A 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew on whites had been one of nine points outlined Monday in an announcement by an umbrella organization of black groups in reaction, spokesmen said, to the deaths of two Black Panther party leaders during a police raid on Dec. 4.

BALTIMORE, MD (AP) - Republican hopes of winning a second Maryland seat in the U.S. Senate were jolted Tuesday when Rogers C.B. Morton, after conferring with President Nixon, said he would seek a fifth House term next year.

Morton met with the President amid strong speculation that he was being urged to challenge Democrat Senator Joseph D. Tydings. Instead they said they believed Morton could not keep up his job as GOP national chairman - which Nixon wants - and at the same time campaign successfully for the Senate seat.

Health Plan Asked by Kennedy; To Begin with Children First

BOSTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy Tuesday proposed a national health insurance plan to cover all Americans by 1975.

The proposal also would provide draft exemptions to doctors who serve in a "national health corps."

The Massachusetts Democrat said he will file legislation in the coming congressional session to provide for phasing in a comprehensive health plan beginning with children in 1971 and working up to those over 65 by 1975.

He said he favored paying for the plan through "progressive taxation" rather than through "regressive" payroll deductions under Social Security.

"All we need is the will," he said in taping his speech over WGBH-TV, an educational station.

Asked during a question period if his proposed starting date of 1971 would depend on a significant decrease in American spending in Vietnam, Kennedy replied, "I would hope so."

He said Americans "must embrace the concept" that high military spending deprives Americans of health programs and other benefits.

Providing a "money ticket" through Medicare or Medicaid is not enough, he said, adding that estimates of some health insurance plan costs run as high as $40 billion. He did not put a figure on the cost of his own plan, saying Congress will probably be presented with several.

Health care is "the fastest growing failing business in the nation, he said, running at $60 billion annually now, and projected at up to $100 billion by 1975.

Federal health outlays in the 1960's increased six-fold, and now absorb 10 per cent of the federal budget, he said.

Since three out of four doctors are specialists, the American average is one general practitioner for every 3,000 persons, he said.

"Vested interests are strongly ranged against innovations," he said in introducing his program to:

Increase federal health spending, develop community and group health care facilities instead of hospitals, provide "special attention" for the poor, develop paramedical technicians to absorb some doctors' chores, and restore "severe cuts" in federal medical research spending.

The poor suffer illness twice as frequently as other Americans, having three times the heart disease, seven times the eye defects, and five times the retardation and nervous disorders suffered by other classes, he said.

The United States is the only major industrial nation without some form of national health coverage, he said.

He said it would require an "excruciating moral effort" to overcome opposition to a national health program.

He denied his plan amounted to socialized medicine, and said it would avert the "twin evils" of either a complete breakdown of the present inadequate system, or a complete government takeover in the health field.

He said Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Tex., chairman of the senate subcommittee on health, had promised "comprehensive hearings" will be held in the next year on national health insurance proposals.

Blacks Boycott Classes Over Harvard Hiring Policy

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Black students at Harvard University began boycotting classes Tuesday in a new phase of their dispute with the university over hiring practices at Harvard construction sites.

The boycott was undertaken by the Organization for Black Unit OBU, a coalition of black students groups, and Tuesday afternoon an OBU spokesman termed the tactic 95 per cent effective.

Harvard officials said it was impossible to gauge the effectiveness of the boycott, however, because the university keeps no attendance records and attendance immediately prior to vacations is off anyway.

OBU is demanding that Negroes make up at least 20 per cent of those employed on university construction projects. Harvard has rejected this, however, saying that if it complied it would be guilty of reverse discrimination. The school has noted that Negroes make up only 9.3 per cent of the population in the Boston area.

In a related development Tuesday, a Middlesex County Superior Court judge continued for two days a temporary restraining order prohibiting OBU from engaging in any further disruptive demonstrations.

The order was issued last week after members of the organization took over a portion of University Hall, Harvard's main administration building, to dramatize their demands.

The order was to have expired Tuesday and a hearing was scheduled for whether it should be made permanent, but that was postponed and the continuance granted when the respondents said they had obtained counsel only a few hours earlier.

Harvard keeps no official racial enrollment figures, but a spokesman said earlier that "upwards of 600" of the 15,000 students at Harvard, its sister college of Radcliffe and the university's 10 graduate schools are black. Most are undergraduates, the spokesman added.

The boycott was to continue through Saturday, when classes end for the Christmas vacation.

OBU says its strategy committee will prepare "future attacks" on the university during vacation, but did not elaborate.

Pedestrian Hit at Puffton By UMass Graduate Student

AMHERST - In critical condition in the intensive care unit at Wesson Memorial Hospital is Edward Letourneau, 18, of Greenfield Rd., Montague. Letourneau is suffering from head and other injuries received in a pedestrian accident which occurred Monday night on North Pleasant St. in Amherst 150 feet north of Pufton Village.

He was hit by a car operated by Ethan F. Roberts, 23, of Queens Village, N.Y., a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts who resides on Leverett Rd.

Dr. R. Sheldon Clapp of Amity St. answered the emergency call and had the Amherst ambulance take the injured youth to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, Northampton. There he was transferred to the Gold Cross ambulance and taken to the Wesson Memorial Hospital in Springfield, where a hospital spokesman said this morning that he is in critical condition and in intensive care.

Innisfree Stresses Togetherness on Orchard Hill

By NEAL NOVACK
Senior Reporter

Apprehensive that too many students have been entrenched fully in traditional methods of teaching, have been brow-beaten by bureaucracy, and have been fortified against people and humanistic feelings, 70 UMass students have set out to secure social and academic change on campus.

Male and female students living in 5-South Grayson and 5-North Field House, respectively, have gathered together "to be" together in this pilot experiment. There are, however, no pilots to give specific direction, for the desired direction towards ultimate group achievement has not been pre-planned.

It will depend upon what is desired by each individual in the community. This could conceivably lead to 70 directions, all converging at a crossroad called group sensitivity and cooperation.

"Innisfree", which is the title of a poem written by William Butler Yeats, was adopted by the group as the community name. Innisfree was initiated in the Spring of 1969 by some 15 students from Grayson and Field House who were disconcerted with University life.

Ray Harpin ('71) one of the group harbingers, explained that, "We were dissatisfied with the living conditions in the dormitory system and dissatisfied with the personal and physical aspects of the classroom."

Frustrated by poor student interaction, Ray said that, "The living experience was extremely narrow with unaligned interests."

Progress of Innisfree went from informal group get-togethers consisting of mountain hikes and group sensitivity meetings to program committee meetings.

The committee meetings served as a way of making prospective members aware of the group's intentions and served also as a means to discuss practical problems that would be encountered upon returning in the fall of '69. These meetings aided in procuring some 40 more members by the end of the '68-'69 school year.

The remaining 14 or so members were chosen from incoming freshmen at random, pending freshmen response of interest in such a community experiment. Letters describing Innisfree were mailed to the first 400 freshmen who were accepted to live on Orchard Hill.

One such freshman in Innisfree Elise Bloom of Marblehead, Mass. expressed her reaction to the group venture: "Innisfree is one of the greatest experiences I have had the chance to enjoy. From the minute of our arrival all newcomers have been warmly welcomed into the group. Innisfree's progress during the first few weeks was remarkably rapid and if this is any criteria for the future we should soon reach our goal as a functioning community."

An integral part of Innisfree is its academic offerings. Three courses have evolved from Innisfree to bring the total course offering on Orchard Hill to seven.

Other students living on the Hill, but not in Innisfree were also able to take the course. Inviting outside students from the Hill to take the course was designed to prevent Innisfree from becoming an isolated, or what some students may feel to be an "elitist" group on the Hill.

In fact, Innisfree encourages all members of the University to drop in anytime and rap on anything from community to caving.

Tom Clark, professor in the School of Education, and director of the Graduate Program in Higher Education, is attempting to redefine his role as instructor of Orchard Hill 391.

"The course," he said, "is one which is created through the participation of students and faculty as 'learners'." Concerning course objectives, he added that, "I hope to provide a series of readings and provocative speakers which act as a vehicle to faster communication and an analysis of the community we're trying to create."

Another Innisfree course is freshman English, taught by Bruce Riddington, a graduate student in the M.F.A. program in English. "I'm dissatisfied with present approaches to English rhetoric," Riddington said. Stressing the usage of the language itself, Riddington said that, "Language is more than a cold academic discipline. It is an organic part of the way people feel about what they are doing."

Innisfree, existing within the University, has resulted in an unavoidable compromise over the pure communal concept as exemplified by one of the dozens of self-sufficient rural communes in the country, "The Cathedral of Spirit" located in Heath, Mass.

Physically, this compromise has led to a semi-autonomous community structure within the dormitory system. Dependence upon the dorm is in the form of adherence to house regulations.

An example would be the payment of dorm dues and required representation in the house council. The community's partial autonomy holds in matters of judicial functions concerning decisions on whether or to what degree punitive action should be taken to rectify disciplinary infractions.

The fact that much of the time of the students in Innisfree is involved with the outside academic community, in a necessary dependence with this community, has meant that the individual's energies have been scattered and distracted to various areas. This interdependence has, in part, deterred the formulation of group unity and a true sense of community identity.

Within the community, itself, there have gathered, because of minimal group residential requirements and type selectivity, a heterogeneous aggregate of students who's wide range of interests and opinions has deterred, to an extent, group unity in relation to common group objectives.

Having partaken in extensive group interaction within Innisfree, Dick Lees ('73) presents his perspective: "Innisfree, like any group of people living together, has its inevitable internal problems. However, rather than simply dealing with these problems in a totally negative way, we try in a constructive way to find out what the problems are and deal with them. These problems concern the courses and to a greater extent personal relationships between people in the community.

"For me, Innisfree seems to be a unique experience," continued Lees, "where I can easily be open and honest with other people, knowing that they will accept me as I am."

Reaction from outside the community has in many instances been favorable. According to Donald Tepper, area coordinator of Orchard Hill, "Innisfree is a group of people who are concerned about the establishment of community spirit which is academic as well as personal. It's the beginning of an educational development where students can determine their own academic, social and cultural destiny."

Secretary Laird Announces Draft Call Cut Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday 1970 draft calls can be cut by about 25,000 men as a result of the Nixon administration's latest 50,000-man withdrawal from Vietnam.

The defense chief told newsmen that a 10 per cent reduction in next year's planned draft total will be possible because the size of the overall U.S. military force is declining.

The Pentagon had programmed for 250,000 draftees over the next 12 months, so the revised figure will be around 225,000 - some 65,000 below the 1969 quota.

The 225,000 will be chosen under the administration's newly enacted lottery-by-birthdate system of selection which will start next month.

Laird spoke of the reduced draft requirement during a news conference at which he also announced he will go to South Vietnam in February to get a first-hand look at the battlefield conditions.

Laird's visit, which he said was directed by President Nixon, will come at a time when North Vietnam is expected to step up offensive activities possibly to coincide with the annual Tet holiday period.

Laird said he plans to "assess the situation as it affects our security, the security of American forces, and also to assess the level of military activity on the part of the enemy and the infiltration from the north."

Laird acknowledged that the majority of the newly ordered 50,000 troops redeployment will take place after the Vietnamese holiday period in February in order to give military leaders maximum flexibility in case the enemy sharply steps up attacks at that time.

The military command has been given until April 15 to complete the withdrawal, the third of the Vietnam reductions announced by the administration.

Laird echoed President Nixon's concern about increased enemy infiltration although he said North Vietnam's manpower input this year is substantially below the infiltration level of 1968.

On the basis of the present infiltration, Laird said he sees no chance at this time of a substantial attack against U. S. or South Vietnamese forces over a prolonged period.

Laird said it would take possibly up to two months for infiltrating North Vietnamese troops to reach the southern half of South Vietnam and be ready to fight. "I rule out the possibility that they could move those forces in - country during the particular period of time that we're discussing here through the 15th of April, 1970, and have them in III and IV Corps ready for such an activity," Laird asserted.

Laird said the enemy strength is down by as much as 40,000 men since last year, primarily because of huge combat losses.

According to Pentagon figures, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have suffered more than 150,000 troops killed thus far this year.

Laird did not say how many enemy troops this leaves in South Vietnam, but the Pentagon in September estimated their combined strength at 240,000.

Most of the American troops returning under the third administration pullout will be combat forces, and a number of them will be discharged, Laird said.

Dancers Emphasize Ecology At Smith College Workshop

The workshop was inspired by a recent RAMPARTS magazine article on ecology - the study of nature's balance - and conservation.

One dance is performed to a poem expressing "man's annihilation of himself through his shortsighted destruction of nature." Another dance, "Rebirth," is billed as a "statement of faith that man will be able to overcome his self-wrought destruction by pollutants" in the air, the water and even in the food he eats.

Performances will be tonight at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. in Smith's Theatre 14 of the Center for the Performing Arts. No tickets are required and the public is invited to attend.

FROM OUR SIDE

No Place To Go

If we are not going to have revolution within our educational community, we will have to take a revolutionary look at our institutions of education. We should not be reluctant to ask daring questions or consider bold solutions...No generation can confer wisdom upon its children. Each generation must work to earn its own...Relevance is often an excuse for more amusing and less arduous involvement..... the elegant ornament of liberal arts....

Spiro T. Agnew, Baltimore
Maryland, December 10, 1969

Agnew might be right, you know. The panacea and Ultimate Value just might not be universal higher education. And eighteen-thousand students at the University of Massachusetts, just perhaps should have stayed home.

There are many purposes and goals of traditional education. The underlying principle of universal education in America is to instill in its children traditions and values. When a student pledged allegiance to the flag in elementary school, he was merely performing a vestigial rite inherited from the Puritan's desire to control heresy. As the society became more complex, schools were charged with teaching children the practical skills with which they could become contributing members of the economic society. Social mobility through education was the goal of the parents, yet, as the Kerner Commission Report pointed out, the poor remained poor. The age of romanticism came, and education became a goal unto itself -- art for art's sake. As the Twentieth Century aged, school provided an excellent opportunity for socialization -- making youth "fit" into the increasingly complex society. Finally, the Judeo-Christian morality of "help-your-fellow-man-through-education" reimprinted itself on every new generation of Americans. All of these reasons - patriotism, socialization, philanthropy, social mobility, the knowledge ideal, and survival -- all of the reasons for universal education are now in conflict with a new factor -- the freedom of the 1960's.

Our automated society has a surplus of people, and no matter how many meaningless jobs are created, there will always be people with nothing to do. One solution which has evolved is to shuttle, by social and parental pressure, youth into colleges for four years of their lives. Considering the circumstances, this is not bad. But too many university youths have no desire or personality to follow the traditional university goals. And the university goals themselves, have not been redefined, thus making them (if the reader will excuse the term) "irrelevant" to the needs of the "student", who desires nothing more than to find a fun way to spend his unavoidable, free time. For those people who wish to spend their time learning knowledge, the traditional university is a fine place. But for the majority who have no place to go, the university (which incidently means "place where all people meet") must think of more imaginative busywork for them to do than learning. After all, if the university doesn't, who will.

American concepts of education should not be questioned in the fear that we are out to destroy popular education, but as a positive search to broaden educational institutions fit the public, rather than make the public fit the institutions.

ART BUCHWALD

Keeping Up With the Joneses

WASHINGTON - The draft lottery is probably fairer than anything the government has come up with so far. But I do not believe the Army has faced up to all the problems it will eventually bring. As you know, men will be called according to their birth dates. Sept. 14 is first and June 8 is 366th and those whose last names start with the letter J will be called first.

It probably didn't occur to anyone but the entire 1970 draft call could be made up of men whose last names are Jones.

"Jones, Andrew; Jones, Arthur; Jones, John; Jones, John; Jones, John; Jones, John; Jones, John; Jones, John," ad infinitum.

"How do you explain that, Sergeant?"

"We had an emergency leave request for a John Jones whose mother was ill. So I asked how many John Joneses there were whose mothers were sick, and 14 of them raised their hands. Since I didn't know which one was telling the truth I let them all go."

"That's not very smart, Sergeant. How do you account for the three James Joneses who are missing?"

"The psychiatrist said he wanted to see James Jones immediately. I sent the three over there because I didn't know which James Jones he wanted, and I assumed he would send back the other two. But he's kept all three of them."

"Dammit, Sergeant, we're going to have to work out a system. I notice you have 12 men in the hospital all named Robert Jones. How did that happen?"

"During mail call, sir. They kept grabbing letters as their names were called out and then got into a terrible fight over which Robert Jones the letter was addressed to. One Robert Jones opened a letter and a photograph of a girl in a bikini fell out and he made some obscene remarks. The Robert Jones who belonged to the girl let him have it right in the teeth and then the brawl started."

"We may have to do awa y with mail call if this continues. Well, you better start close order drill."

"Why not?"

"They say it's their birthday."

"The entire brigade was all born on the same day, sir. It's EVERYBODY'S birthday. They're very depressed about it, sir. They want to call their parents."

"We can't hold up the Army to let everyone make a telephone call. Tell them if they don't drill, they won't get paid."

"I was going to speak to you about that, sir. William Jones who is married and has three kids says his wife hasn't gotten an allotment check in six weeks. Four other William Joneses who are bachelors have received not only allotment checks but visits from the Red Cross at their homes to find out if the children were all right."

Over the loudspeaker comes a voice, "Will Jack Jones report to the administration building immediately, on the double?"

"Hey, wait a minute. Where are you guys going?"

Oh, Say Can You See . . .

To the editor:

I have been trying to figure out Mr. Scully ever since I read his article, "Contempt", a week ago concerning the display of what he called anti-American behavior on the part of the blacks at the Rhode Island basketball game when they did not stand when the National Anthem was played.

As far as I am concerned Mr. Scully displayed his true ignorance and his misunderstanding of the race problem today. I am not anti-American nor am I anti-white. But I can only be for America if in fact America is for me and my people. I will respect it if it respects us.

The race problem is heightened today to a point where black youth find the problem of identity a hard goal to pursue. In America, the supposed "land of the free," this identity problem should not be so difficult to solve.

I sat down on behalf of the millions of blacks in the ghetto who have nothing - I repeat - nothing to be proud of in America. As long as I know that 3/4 of the people are still scraping the bottom of the barrel; I don't feel proud of my country at all.

Perhaps Mr. Scully should take a course in race relations to see the grievances that blacks have and have had in America. 400 years of sweat - for what? America should know that we couldn't possibly be proud of a nation that has given us nothing but hard times and a hell of a lot of frustration and then some.

NATALIE COLE

Looking Ahead

Black students have lobbied for increased efforts of Admissions Committees to recruit more of us into this University. As a result of this intense pressure, the University has acceded to our demands, and we have been acclaimed appropriate college material by the multitude of this institution.

We, as black people, feel that this experience is a time for the culturation of our intellectual and moral resources and the personal autonomy necessary to use these powers creatively. We feel that this process of education should be based on the needs and desires, or at least upon an explicit recognition of the tensions between opinions and views of those who presume to know what is good for them.

Dissatisfied with the world of which we are being prepared to enter, we must alleviate all dissatisfaction with the processes of preparation itself.

We DO NOT seek to become consumers in a required bureaucratic supermarket, accumulating packages of knowledge and the trading stamp of a diploma. Alternatives represent response to the present structures. Creating of alternatives does not necessarily mean potentially formenting educational revolution; but if need there be change, isn't that too simultaneous with success?

As a part of this institution we must be recognized as individuals, but just as important, black individuals on the white campus. This realization has come as a shock to some contemporaries; but for some, it has become an accepted fact.

The facts of race do not change in college; how you regard them often does, We understand that our presence at a white institution is no escape from racial identity. It is for you to realize that our efforts only reflect a consciousness of a community beyond boundaries.

We realize more now than ever before that our presence here is uniquely valuable to the real world waiting on the other side.

Yes, the forms of our activisions may be many and varied, but the aims are identical: to create and extend communication between blacks in order to understand more profoundly the world in which we live. Right on.

Pedestrians Not Allowed

Dear Editor:

Friday, December 12th, the Collegian reported two pedestrians struck on North Pleasant Street south of the Morrill Science Building. These students are not the first nor will they be the last to be hurt, I fear. Those in charge of the physical planning of the University ought to be charged with homicidal bureaucratic negligence. More students cross North Pleasant street at the University than there are people crossing at Main Street in town or at Pine Street. Yet pedestrian lights are NOT provided. There are no lights for pedestrians ANYWHERE on campus, and only one set for cars. Eastman lane has none, nor any major exit from a parking lot. There are not even traffic police during rush hours.

Now I was told that sidewalks could not be laid on the west side of North Pleasant Street on campus because the road will be phased out for vehicular traffic. This is also true of that snake turn at the north entrance to campus from Eastman Lane which has no sidewalks at all. For a full year the Student Union has had no delivery entrance. Is there no responsibility for pedestrian life and limb? I say NO DRIVEWAY WITHOUT A WALKWAY not for week, not for a year, not for two years. Let us end bureaucratic homicide!

Twenty-five underprivileged children from Northampton were treated to an afternoon of gifts, games, puppet show, and Santa Claus through the combined efforts of Sigma Kappa sorority and Phi Mu Delta Fraternity.

Fifty-Five Indicted In N.J. Gambling Ring

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Simone "Sam the Plumber" De-Cavalcante and 54 other persons were indicted Tuesday in connection with what federal authorities termed a $20 million-a-year gambling ring.

The indictments came one week after U.S. Atty Gen. John Mitchell announced that federal agents were about to crush in New Jersey "the largest gambling syndicate ever broken up in this country."

It was the second multimillion dollar gambling case in Newark this year. Ruggerio "Ritchie the Boot" Boiardo and 18 others had been convicted previously on state charges involving an alleged $12-million gambling operation.

DeCavalcante, 58, a distinguished-looking reputed Mafia leader whose nickname stems from the plumbing business he operates, was the best-known name listedon charges handed down by a federal grand jury.

Most of those named were believed to be runners and lesser functionaries in alleged lottery operations.

One count accused Joseph Ippolito, 48, of South Orange, N.J., and Anthony DePaque, 41, Clifton, of "soliciting and receiving information of pending raids from certain law enforcement officials," who were not named.

DeCavalcante was named on two counts, accused of supervising and controlling the acceptance of bets.

He was brought handcuffed into the federal building here for arraignment.

DeCavalcante has been named as head of one of the Cosa Nostra "families" operating in New Jersey. Boiardo and his son, Anthony "Tony Boy" Boiardo, also are reputed to be Cosa Nostra leaders.

The younger Boiardo was sought to appear before another federal grand jury investigating alleged official corruption in Newark. That jury heard four witnesses Tuesday.

Mitchell last week promised "massive indictments of public officials" and said the Cosa Nostra had gained control of a segment of the Internal Revenue Service. A third federal grand jury meeting in Newark had indicted two men so far in an investigation of the IRS.

All 55 persons named Tuesday were charged with violating laws against interstate gambling. Specifically cited were telephone calls from New Jersey to Troy, N.Y.

District Attorney Desires Re-definition of Obscenity

BOSTON (AP) - Dist. Atty. Garrett H. Byrne said Tuesday that he is launching an all-out drive in the courts to win redefinition of what constitutes obscenity.

Byrne's campaign comes on the heels of two U.S. Supreme Court decisions Monday on obscenity actions by state courts.

The high bench said the film "I am Curious (Yellow)" may not be shown in Massachusetts while the state's courts are determining whether the film is obscene. The court also refused to hear an appeal from seven Boston book sellers who had been fined and sentenced by a state court for selling obscene literature.

Byrne said the fact that the Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal and ruled in favor of the state in the film case may indicate a new attitude toward what the court considers obscene.

He said he is assigning his two top assistants to prosecute the film case before the state Supreme Court.

Byrne said also he would seek the immediate implementation of sentences of the seven convicted men. A meeting of attorneys for the men has been set for Friday in Suffolk Superior Court.

The district attorney added that he would "prosecute vigorously" any obscenity cases brought by the Boston police department.

State Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn termed the Supreme Court decision as a key victory.

"The government has a right and a legitimate interest in taking measures to prevent persons from browsing in bookstores from being affronted by obscenity," Quinn said.

Business School to Hold Discussion Topic is Graduate Study Preparation

Undergraduates from all schools are invited to a panel discussion tonight on the three master's degree programs available at the UMass School of Business Administration.

The panel will be at 7 p.m. in Room 116, School of Business Administration. A major point of emphasis will be how a student in his last year of under-graduate study can best prepare himself for graduate study in business. Such preparation can permit a student to reduce time required for a master's degree in business to one year of full-time study.

A student's view of the program will also be voiced. A question period will follow the panel discussion. Afterwards, the panel members will be available for individual interviews. The panel will consist of the coordinators of the three UMass master's programs: M. William Frey, Master of Business Administration; Carl Dennler, Jr., Master of Science in Accounting; and Eugene E. Kaczka, Master of Science in Management Sciences; plus Michael Alcivar, Amherst College graduate and master's degree candidate at UMass.

Professor Frey, coordinator of the panel, said that master's degree graduates in business are among the most sought-after group in the country. Reports in national news magazines note that recent salaries for MBA graduates are in the range from $12,000 to $16,000 per year and higher. The demand for these graduates comes from government, labor, social, charitable, and other groups as well as business organizations.

The UMass School of Business Administration is one of five New England schools accredited at the master's level, the others being Harvard University, Boston University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dartmouth University.

Rows 1 through 7 in F Lot and the parking lot in front of Webster in Orchard Hill are for staff and faculty parking only. Please help us by observing these regulations.

UMass Artist Displays Painting In Wash. at Show

The show, which runs through Jan. 4, is devoted to paintings, drawings and sculpture related to the Apollo missions to the moon.

For more than two years, Hendricks has concentrated on the moon as a subject and has produced a volume of canvases based on NASA photos. His moonscapes have been shown at galleries, group shows and art festivals in many parts of the country.

Supreme Soviett Session Shows Small Defense Budget Increase

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union announced Tuesday it will boost defense spending next year by a modest 1.1 per cent, apparently seeking to discourage a spiraling arms race with the West.

The defense budget was made public at a session of the Supreme Soviet, this nation's parliament. The session also revealed that Soviet industrial growth will fail to meet its 1969 goal and agricultural performance was down sharply.

Military spending for 1970 was announced as 17.9 billion rubles - the equivalent at the official exchange rate of $19.7 billion. This is an increase of just 200 million rubles over this year's budget and it was the smallest percentage increase since 1965 when the public defense budget was cut. At the official rate one ruble is worth $1.11.

Western economists believe the real defense budget to be about twice as high as the acknowledged amount with many defense items concealed under other industrial budget headings.

The figure announced each year is seen more as a statement reflecting the Kremlin's current foreign policy.

Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov reported Soviet economic plans for 1970 and declared that Soviet foreign policy is determined to "fight for peace . . . and against the arms race."

He reiterated that the Soviet union is committed to a policy of peaceful coexistence with all countries.

The total budget for 1970, Garbuzov said, will be 144.5 billion rubles the equivalent of $158 billion.

Preceding Garbuzov's report, Nikolai Baibakov, chairman of the State Planning Committee, or Gosplani reported that Soviet industrial growth this year will be 7 per cent, short of the 7.3 per cent goal called for in the current plan.

He also announced the 1969 grain crop, the chief indicator of the health of Soviet agriculture, would be 160.5 metric tons, far off last year's 169.2 million. Baibakov blamed the poor farm showing on bad weather.

UN Asks Moratorium On Nuclear Weapons

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - The U. N. General Assembly, sweeping aside U.S. and Soviet objections, asked Tuesday for a moratorium in their further testing and deployment of offensive and defensive nuclear weapons systems.

Mounting impatience by the small countries over lack of progress by the super powers on disarmament was reflected in the closing hours of the 126-nation assembly session.

By a vote of 82 to 0 with 27 abstentions the assembly adopted a resolution appealing to Moscow and Washington "to agree, as an urgent preliminary measure, on a moratorium" pending outcome of the strategic arms limitation talks in Helsinki.

The United States and the Soviet Union objected to the appeal, saying it would only complicate th e talks of the negotiators in Helsinki. They were among the abstainers.

But sponsors of the resolution, including 12 members of the Geneva disarmament committee, refused to yield on the moratorium issue.

Area Children May Attend Boston Ballet

Several area organizations and private sponsors are sponsoring tickets for a group of children to attend the Boston Ballet's holiday program at the Center for Performing Arts, Smith College, in Northampton on December 29, January 1 and 2.

The patrons are subsidizing the cost of tickets to the ballet performance for a group of area youngsters. Transportation is being provided by Western Massachusetts Bus Lines. Assisting in the planning is the Hampshire Community Action Committee.

The matinee on January 1 at 2:30 p.m. intended primarily for children is SWAN LAKE, Act II and THE NUTCRACKER, Act II. Added to the evening performances on December 29 and January 2 at 8:30 p.m. will be the ballet SUSPICION choreographed by the Japanese choreographer, Saeko Ichinohe. The Boston Ballet's appearance is presented by The Dance Concert Series.

Tickets for all performances are available at the box office, Center for Performing Arts, Smith College, through December 19.

Heroin Deaths Increasing In New York

NEW YORK (AP) - The number of heroin-related deaths among teenagers in the city has nearly tripled in one year, said Dr. Michael Baden, associate medical examiner.

Incomplete autopsy studies show that of 820 deaths attributable to heroin use this year, 210 involved youngsters 15 to 19 years old, Baden said.

Baden told a hearing of the New York State Democratic Advisory Committee on Crime and Safety in the Streets Tuesday that the number of heroin-related deaths is expected to surpass 900 before Jan. 1.

He said 141 persons between 20 and 24 died of heroin use last year and that so far this year 250 heroin deaths have been reported in that age bracket.

As Director of the Amherst Computer Center, he will be responsible for all administrative aspects of the Center, and will act as an advisor in scheduling the use of the machines.

Mr. Plourde received his B.A. degree from the University of New Hampshire an M.A. from Northeastern University, and did graduate work at American University.

United Electrical Workers Brings Charges Against GE

NEW YORK (AP) - The unaffiliated United Electrical Workers (UE) announced Tuesday it was charging the General Electric Co. with intimidation of strikers by refusing to pay for already earned vacations until the workers return to their jobs. The unfair labor practice complaint was to be filed with the Manhattan office of the National Labor Relations Board.

The NLRB already had on file cross-complaints filed by GE and the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers IUE, accusing each other of refusal to bargain in good faith.

The UE, representing 16,000 GE employees, and the IUE, negotiating for 88,500, are the only unions bargaining nationally with the company.

The two are among a dozen unions taking part in a nation-wide strike now in its eighth week that has pulled out 133,000 of the 310,000 domestic GE employes in 135 cities.

Both the IUE and UE were back at separate negotiating tables in the Belmont Plaza Hotel Tuesday.

The UE put two women workers on its negotiating team for today to tell the company they wanted no pay to be below that of a common laborer.

Mrs. Midge Knauff, from Conneaut, Ohio, and Rita Petrie, from Ashland, Mass. were the women.

Strikers Receive Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) - An AFL-CIO official said Tuesday the 147,000 General Electric Co. strikers are receiving as much or more aid from public welfare and similar sources than they are from union strike benefits.

"In the area of surplus food, or in the area of food stamps, it could go as high as $20, $30, or $38 a week," said Leo Perlis, director of the AFL-CIO's Department of Community Services Activities.

Most strikers are receiving $12 a week in union strike benefits.

Perlis said public aid including food and other community assistance to strikers and their families probably totals about $1 million a week in the nation-wide strike, now in its eighth week.

Strike benefits paid out to members of the 13 unions also amount to about $1 million weekly.

Swiss Pianist to Solo For First Time in Bowker

The UMass department of music faculty recital series will present the distinguished Swiss pianist, Fernande Kaeser, in her first solo performance on campus, Thursday, in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

Her varied program will include Bach's French Suite in G major, Mozart's Sonata in D major, K. 311, Schubert's "Valses Sentimentales," Opus 50 and "Valses Nobles," Opus 77, and 25 Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel, Opus 24, by Johannes Brahms.

When the Brahms was performed at the Hague by Miss Kaeser, a critic reported that, "She set about this imposing music powerfully and without hesitation, she mastered the subject completely, and when she elaborated on the contrasts the "oneness" always remained organic. . ."

In addition to The Hague, Miss Kaeser has given concerts in most capital cities of Europe, and has made two concert tours for the Jeunesses Musicales of Switzerland. She has played with the greatest European orchestras including the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, the London Philharmonic, the Royal Philharmonic, the Bayerischer Rundfunk, the BBC Symphony, and the Stuttgarter Kammerorchester. During the month of January, Miss Kaeser will give concerts in Switzerland and London.

As a competitor in international performances, Miss Kaeser was the only prize winner for piano at the International Music Competition of Geneva in 1951, and was awarded first prize at the International Music Competition of Munich in 1954, the only Swiss pianist to receive the award.

UMass Bows to UConn, 88-71, In Weird Basketball Contest

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

If anyone had told you that UMass would outrebound Connecticut, 63-41, take 88 shots to the Huskies' 64, and lose 88-71 you'd think them crazy. But that's just what happened last night at a less than full Cage.

The disciplined Huskies, who remained undefeated under their new coach Dee Rowe, had the necessary firepower at the right time to send UMass to their second Yankee Conference defeat of the young season, and put the Redmen's Conference hoop title in severe jeopardy.

As well and steady as UConn played, the fact is that UMass beat themselves. The Redmen shot an atrocious 31% from the floor and commited 17 turnovers. The score is really not indicative of the type of contest it was throughout. The Huskies scored the last 11 points of the game as UMass quit.

The Redmen started things off as if they would blow the Huskies all the way back to Storrs. UMass rushed out to score the first ten points of the game within three minutes. Julius Erving had two buckets, John Betancourt, and Ken Mathias and Dennis Chapman divided four foul shots.

UConn, however, spurred on by a vocal group of supporters that made more noise than the meager home crowd, kept battling back in the next five minutes to slowly close the gap. The bulk of the Husky scoring was done by Ron Hrubala and Bob Boyd. UMass, meanwhile, had their shooting turn from luke warm to ice cold.

UMass got their spark back immediately, however, and scored eight straight points to lead 29-21. The points were divided among Mathias, Ray Ellerbrook, Chapman and Erving.

It was then that UConn made a 12-point splurge that went unanswered by the Redmen.

The teams traded baskets the remainder of the half to give the Huskies a 38-37 lead at the half.

The first nine minutes of the second half were equally as even. UMass persistently kept close despite their inability to shoot at all consistently, and actually led at a couple of junctures. However, the more steady Huskies, who were led by sharpshooting Bob Staak, never lost control of the tempo of the game.

Good defensive work by Betancourt, who kept UMass close earlier with some long range gunning and the shooting of Erving, Mathias and Ellerbrook, brought the Redmen within four with still 3:50 remaining.

It seemed that it was still anyone's ballgame. But it was safely in the hands of UConn.

The Huskies broke the UMass all-court press to shreds, with Staak, Boyd, Taylor and Koski all getting easy layups.

UMass meanwhile became sloppy all over the court, and suddenly the game was out of hand. After an Ellerbrook field goal, UConn ran off 11 straight points in a minute and a half, as UMass never got the ball over midcourt, save for the last few seconds.

Staak led all scorers with 22 points many of them coming on late layups, and 15 of them coming in the second half. He got a lot of help from Hrubala who fouled out with five minutes left, with 11, Taylor with 19, Boyd with 14 points and 11 assists, and Koski with 13.

Erving had 20 points to Lead UMass and also added 23 rebounds. Mathias had 16 points, 11 in the first half, Ellerbrook 13 and Betancourt and Chapman both hadten points.

It was a decidedly discouraging performance by a UMass basketball team that is enormously talented. If the game ended with the talented Huskies outplaying an inexperienced UMass team, it wouldn't be so hard to take. But those last couple of minutes, when hustling ceased and chaos reigned, left a pretty lousy taste in everyone's mouth.

REDMAN RANTINGS - Nothing much was said in the UMass locker room, but the Huskies were making up for it across the way.... They carried off their new miracle worker Coach Rowe, and one UConn player, said, "We are beginning to believe in this guy (Rowe) more and more. We might never lose"....UMass did a good job defensively on those two talented UConn guards Boyd and Staak, especially in the first half.... UConn maintained its season record of not shooting under 50% from the floor as the Huskies hit the halfway exactly....There were only five UConn cheerleaders and around 100 fans, but they generated more noise than the UMass spirit leaders who sat for the most part passively....Rhode Island eked out a 100-54 win over New Hampshire, while Boston College lost another, this time to Penn. State, 67-64.

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Although playing probably their best all-around game of the season, the UMass freshman basketball team dropped its third game to a huge, sharp-shooting undefeated squad from Connecticut at the Cage last night, 75-65 The defeat dropped the Little Redmen's record to 2-3 for the season.

The first half was well played by both squads and the lead changed hands many times. Leading the way for the frosh was Scott Golden who, although he was starting only his second game, scored the first five hoops for his team and ended the evening with 22 points. However, UConn's Lee Barback was just as hot as he netted eight field goals in the first half alone and finished with 25 points.

Jim Pendulik opened the scoring for the Little Huskies with a jumper and Golden got his first hoop to tie the score. After Mike McSharry had hit a free throw and Pendulik another jumper, Golden and Barbach proceeded to put on their scoring show.

For the next four and a half minutes, these were the only players on either squad to score. When they had finished UConn had taken a 12-8 lead with 13:11 remaining in the half. After Bill Woolsey stole the ball and hit a lay-up to extend his team's margin to six, Golden hit two more baskets to one by Barback and UConn led, 16-12.

Although the Little Redmen were having a hard time penetrating the Huskie defense they continued to hit from outside and finally tied the score with 5:25 remaining at 26-26. Golden then canned another jumper to give UMass the lead for the first time in over twelve minutes. Bob Kane made a hoop for UConn but Chick Olsen came through with a big three point play that gave the frosh their biggest lead of the night, 31-28.

UConn came storming back to take the lead, however, as Kane hit two hoops and Barbach and Pendulik made one each while UMass could only counter with a Bob Kalbfell basket and a charity toss by Chuck Peters. The half ended with UConn in front, 36-34. It seemed to be the best half of basketball the Little Redmen have played thus far.

In the second half, the Little Huskies height advantage started to show as UConn started to pull away. Despite a brief surge that pulled UMass into a 42-42 tie, UConn started building a lead behind guard Dick Begen. With only 11:42 to go in the game the Little Redmen had fallen behind by ten, 56-46.

Behind the outside shooting of Begen, Dick Hennessey, and George Parsons, the Little Huskies kept pouring it on and finished off the game with a comfortable 75-65 edge. Andre Polly proved effective in the late going as he hit two hoops to keep the frosh's faint hopes of victory alive. But in the end UConn's outside shooting and great height just proved to be too much for the hustling Redmen to overcome.

UConn, 6-0 for the season, started a front court of 6'7 George Parsons, 6'7 Pendulik and Pat DeVries at 6'10. Many varsities wish they could field a team of that size. Another impressive fact about the Little Huskies was that they seemed to have good depth as three or four players seemed to be able to hit consistently from well outside.

However, if the Little Redmen can play as well as they did against UConn consistently, then their record should improve considerably.

Most impressive of all was the play of Golden. A look at the statistics tells the whole story. Incredible as it may seem, Golden did not miss a shot all night. He was ten for ten from the floor and two for two from the line and led all rebounders with nine. If he can keep up this type of play, he should considerably brighten the UMass hoop prospects for the coming years.

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

In special business last night, the Student Senate, after hearing a vigorous presentation by black representatives, appropriated $2200 to THE DRUM, a literary magazine "for black people, written by black people."

The meeting, held in the Ballroom and attended by about 80 blacks, was marked by charges that this University, and educational institutions generally are irrelevant to black needs; that blacks receive little benefit from the monies they pay in student tax funds; and that the Senate would become illegitimate if it failed to recognize the legitimacy of the need for a black literary magazine.

Robin Chandler, speaking for THE DRUM, described the appropriation as "a test of (the Senate's) sincerity and understanding of black students' needs at the University of Massachusetts."

The Senate defeated a motion to postpone for one week, and overrode objections concerning the non-RSO status of THE DRUM, passing the appropriation with four dissenting votes.

In calling the question, Senator Verrochi affirmed that there exist two quite different cultures, white and black; that black culture cannot adequately express itself through existing media, COLLEGIAN and SPECTRUM; that therefore there exists a need for a publication such as THE DRUM, but, Senator Verrochi contended, the benefits of this publication extend into the larger community as well, for "we need to learn as much as we can, as soon as possible about black culture," and that an avowedly black literary magazine will therefor e provide a service to the entire community.

In other action, the Senate urged the administration to provide monetary support for the experimental programs being developed in connection with the Greenough Coeducation Residence Hall, scheduled to open next semester; criticized the administration for inadequate police protection in student parking lots; and established an ad hoc Area Government Advisory Board, to act as a liaison between the Senate and the Area Governments.

Film Draws Reaction From Jury in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) - A film of National Guard troops thrusting bayonets into the window of a car driven by a middle-aged woman visibly stirred some members of the jury Wednesday in the trial of seven men charged with conspiracy to foment riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The film, one of three introduced by defense attorneys, showed a woman trying to drive her car across the Congress Street bridge near the Conrad Hilton hotel the night of Aug. 28. Among her passengers were several young demonstrators.

The woman was barred by a line of troops which pointed bayonets into the car windows and dragged the demonstrators out of the automobile.

The two other films of convention disturbances earlier in the day elicited no response from the generally impassive jury.

A newspaper publisher testified he was tear gassed and other persons were clubbed by police during clashes that same night.

Thomas W. Pew Jr., editor and publisher of the Troy, Ohio Daily News, said he was reporting and photographing the convention for his newspapers.

Pew said police lobbed tear gas near him as he crouched to take a photograph of a man in Grant Park with a bayonet pressed against his chest. The publisher said after he was able to open his eyes he attempted to enter the Conrad Hilton to purchase more film for his camera.

Pew said he was prevented from entering the hotel by a line of police who ran down the street and clubbed some bystanders.

"It was just sort of a frenzy," he said. "The police were just hitting anybody, just anybody it seemed who was in the front line."

Pew said two policemen trapped a long-haired man in a revolving door of the hotel by holding the door still with their feet while a third policeman clubbed the man.

"I would say the policeman hit him 25 to 30 times," Pew said. "He just kept beating . . . Then the fellow fell down in a heap inside the doorway and the policeman still kept beating."

Under cross-examination Pew answered "no" when he was repeatedly asked if he saw demonstrators provoke police by shouting obscenities and hurling missiles.

In the morning session, defense attorney Leonard I. Weinglass estimated that the defense case will continue for five or six more weeks.

The estimate was requested by Judge Julius J. Hoffman, who said it would help him to evaluate a defense motion asking a 2-1/2 day Christmas recess.

The motion also asked that the jury, which has been sequestered in a hotel since the start of the three month trial, be allowed to spend the holiday with their families.

Judge Hoffman said he would rule on the matter Thursday.

Mobe Committee Sets Focus On War Costs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The New Mobilization Committee, trying to sustain the momentum of its massive November anti-war rallies announced today a months-long campaign to focus national attention on the cost of the Vietnam war.

Stewart Meacham, co-chairman of the committee, announced the "winter-spring offensive" at a news converence in a hotel room bedecked with "No Christmas - as usual" posters picturing rows of military graves at Arlington National Cemetery, with a Christmas wreath on the foremost tombstone.

State Dept., Senate Ask for Cease-Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) - The State Department endorsed Wednesday night a resolution by Senate leaders calling on President Nixon to seek agreement with North Vietnam on a mutual cease-fire.

"Mutual cease-fire under international supervision was an element of the President's peace plan of May 14 and has been an integral part of our peace proposals since then," H. G. Torbert Jr., acting assistant secretary of state, wrote Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

He thus endorsed a resolution sponsored by the two Senate leaders, Mike Mansfield of Montana and Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania.

At the same time, the State Department strongly opposed termination of the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which authorized U.S. armed help for South Vietnam, claiming "we do not believe its termination would bring us any closer to peace."

The positions were given by Torbert, for Secretary of State William P. Rogers, in nine letters to Fulbright on Senate resolutions relating to Vietnam.

House Passes Bill To Control Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House passed 259-136 Wednesday a bill to set up sweeping standby controls over all forms of credit.

In addition to authority for the President to empower the Federal Reserve Board to institute such controls, the measure contains other far-reaching sections designed to check inflation and at the same time make more funds available for housing.

It was passed over strong opposition by Republicans, who tried unsuccessfully to substitute a more limited measure similar to one already passed by the Senate.

"This is control authority greater than anything ever granted in the history of the country, even during wartime," Rep. William B. Widnall, R-N.J., told the House. "Its scope could affect every single person in the United States."

Under the terms of this bill, if the President found a need and the Federal Reserve Board concurred, every kind of personal and business lending could be controlled as to amount, terms, interest.

What was That, Anyway?

A UMass student was observed lying in a sleeping bag in front of Bartlett Hall yesterday afternoon while dozens of Umies passed by.

When questioned as to the purpose of his action, the student explained that it was part of a psychological experiment designed to observe the reactions of passersby to a strange occurence.

The student claimed that the majority of the people hadn't expressed enough interest to stop and inquire as to the nature of his actions. However, he had been given food by a group of passing students and was kissed by a UMass coed.

The fact that few people stopped could be interpreted as a lack of concern on the part of the students explained the young psych student. However, the overall apathy of the students might be attributed to the idea that students have become accustomed to weird occurences since arriving at the University and do not regard such happenings as reason of extraordinary interest.

Another day, another psych experiment!

Winter Carnival Brings Back '30's

Bill Cosby

Three Dog Night

Ten Years After

Winter Carnival 1970 is going to be the largest and most spectacular weekend of the Spring Semester. This year the theme is centered around the sophisticated 1930's. Talent will be the most important highlight of Winter Carni. The class of 1971 has worked hard to bring to our campus what it feels is the best in the talent field. Pending final arrangements the projected talent lineup is:

Saturday - The hospitable Bill Cosby featured in two concerts, at 7:00 and 10:00 p.m.

Sunday - The hard rock sounds of Ten Years After and the Three Dog Night in concerts at 2:00 and 7:00 p.m.

Black sedans, bath-tub gin, keystone cops, and slinky dresses are just a few of the items that spotlight the theme of "Those Were The Days" for Winter Carni 1970!

Traditionally, Winter Carni blasts open a long weekend with Thursday night entertainment. On the Thursday Night Agenda we forsee Fireworks, Bands, a Bonfire and a gruelling student vs. administration Hockey Game on the Campus Pond.

The difficult selection of a Winter Carnival Queen from among the UMass Beauties has, in the past, always been a frustrating experience for the Judges. This year, in order to avoid high blood pressures and cardio-vascular arrests, the Judges have given up attempting to choose the Winter Queen. The choice, therefore, has been delegated to the Student body - YOU! Applications for Winter Queen have already been submitted and accepted and the preliminary judging date has been set.

Will the Butterfield, Chadbourne, Greenough, Baker feud flair into open snow sculpture competition this year? Does the Quad, with a 1930 atmosphere through its antiquated facilities, have an edge on this snow sculpture contest? Will the apples roll out of Orchard Hill to compete with the stiff competition? Will the modern architecture of Southwest be a hindrance in cement city's entry into the snow sculpture race? All these questions and more will be pursued on February 14 during the final snow sculpture judging.

The Winter Carni store, called the "Drift Inn" will be located in the Student Union all week long, Feb. 6 - 14. Many items will be on sale, including assorted glassware, shot glasses, water goblets and ash trays all monogrammed with the theme and the date of the weekend. Also, to go along with the theme of "Those Were The Days," stuffed animals, squirt guns, and cigarette holders will be available.

Two pairs of Head skis will be given as a doorprize to a guy and a girl. Anyone who buys a set of tickets for both Saturday night's show and Sunday's concert will be eligible.

Saturday afternoon will be highlighted by old time movies and a fashion show in the Union. Men and women will be modeling the fashions of the 30's.

Since this is the last editorial I will write in 1969 and since the pressure of term papers etc. have precluded researching a really trenchant editorial on an important subject like abortion or the Pentagon press officer, I have decided to abandon the objectivity for which Collegian editorial columnists are famous and have written a subjective piece. Last night in the lavish opulence of my mind a testimonial dinner was held honoring the newsmakers of 1969. Here is a list of awards given to these 69ers.

The Spiro Agnew award for intelligent oratory: to Mrs. John Mitchell. "to Alice Longworth Roosevelt she is 'unbelievable'. To less charitable critics she is an utter ass."

These awards could go on and on but it is meet that we consider that a new decade will begin in a week or so, a decade which will see the end of the rule in America of the "Depression children" and the beginning of power for those of us who reached maturity in the balance-of-terror world and the Age of Johnson.

We will be the people in power. I offer here a list of heroes and villains for you to consider as we move into the 70's, to whom we can look as past examples when the power in the nation passes to our generation.

Heroes: Martin Luther King, John and Robert Kennedy, the ACLU, J. W. Fullbright, Sen. Ribicoff (for Chicago), Gene McCarthy, Dr. Spock, and friends, and (some) of us who are a silent majority determined to change the U. S. into a more tolerant liberal - in the true sense of the word - society.

Villains: Agnew, the Mitchells, Mayor Daley, Tricky Dicky the draft-issue-dodger, Thurmond, Wallace, the M-I complex, and the Okies from Muskogie and all they stand for.

Take this editorial, read it, wrap fish in it, or frame it. But remember the next decade belongs to us - who are our inspirations, who are our bete-noires?

DAVID BASKIN

Mr. Silver

Isidore Silver, professor of law, may well have saved what was aesthetically a silent, lonely night on Tuesday with his skillful rendition of an unusual version of a Greyhound bus station scene.

Silver moved briskly, showing his most photogenic side to the TV cameras. He conveyed full meaning without speaking, using his pipe to good advantage.

Accolades poured in from all over Amherst, but Silver brushed them off without comment. Onlookers could see, however, that he was deeply moved by the reception of his performance.

Despite Silver's outstanding work, local viewers began to reconsider the maxim about burning bridges.

Jock Honor

Us U-mies would like to thank the football jock for upholding our honor after the U-Conn basketball game. The way you leered at the U-Conn cheerleader, (as if ready to hit her in the mouth), and told her that U-Mass was #1 in football really put her down, and restored our shattered egoes. The courage you displayed, by single-handedly intimidating her, must have taken years of similar experiences to develop: you're all right. Thanks again, (you know who you are); you're all man; you ASS----.

NAMES WITHHELD FOR FEAR OF LIFE

SMU

This note is in reference to an interview I had with Don Glickstein about the SMU affair; there are a few corrections in order. His statement "Approximately half of SMU's faculty consist of technicians with but a B.A. and a B.S. who have tenure" is factually incorrect. My point in this regard was, that with the merger of New Bedford Institute of Technology and Bradford-Durfy Technological Institute (which became SMTI then SMU) many faculty members who had tenure but had not received degrees beyond their Masters were 'held over'. The main support that Driscoll has within the faculty consist of these people. The SMU faculty is a fine and intellectually stimulating group, but there still remains in the faculty senate and the administration a strong influence of the old guard.

Secondly, the Dean of Arts and Sciences, who resigned was not Robert McCabe but Dr. Sammuel Stone. Mr. McCabe is one of the faculty members who is under Driscoll's attack. Also, Mr. Glickstein stated,

"Among the supporters of Driscoll, he noted (referring to me) is the Dean of Faculty, who allegedly said that the students are immature and don't know the difference between 'superordination and subordination'." I had mentioned to Mr. Glickstein that Dean Wright (Dean of Faculty at the time) who had resigned earlier this year, due to student and public pressure and in these statements referred not to the students, but to the faculty who are now still under Driscoll's persecution!

The whole SMU affair is a sad one indeed, for the school, the students, and the area it is supposed to serve. There exist now, complete alienation of the faculty and students from the administration. Driscoll and his dictator-like approach to higher education will ruin SMU and its precious academic freedom (for this is certainly the issue), if not stopped. Massachusetts cannot afford such a loss.

ALFRED J. FORTIN

Silo And Core

I am a little confused by Don Glickstein's article of Wednesday. With liberal quotations from the much quoted Vice President, Mr. Glickstein states that the University is an institutional silo for a population - namely youth - that the society cannot yet economically cope with. A valid point. He further states that the youth is socially coerced into desiring a college education, despite his capabilities or level of motivation. Again I concur. However, he proceeds to state that the university, though offering a social life, does little for those students who are unmotivated intellectually, and that the university must "think of more imaginative busywork for (these students) to do than learning." Here I must disagree. I think that the University has valiently fulfilled this responsibility by maintaining its core requirements. This deserves an award for imaginative busywork.

One final point of disputation is the assumption that "if the university doesn't (provide such busywork), who will." Does Mr. Glickstein really believe that the university is an elite babysitting service, complete with safety pins, wet nurses and fancy-dress recitals? Wouldn't it rather be better to go all the way back to the core and educate parents and guidance counselors to present college as one of many alternatives for higher education.

Most people around Whitmore now admit that, unless some catastrophe occurs within the next year, Provost Oswald Tippo will be named Chancellor of the Amherst campus when the new University reorganization scheme takes affect next year.

Tippo, the man who has led the academic growth of UMass during the Lederle administration, became involved in a verbal battle with Beacon Hill last spring over the University's budget. At that time, he submitted his undated resignation to protest the state lack of support of UMass.

The following article was written by former Asst. Provost Kenneth J. Suid, and highlights the author's impressions of Tippo, "the man who stood up for the school which he helped to build."

By KENNETH J. SUID

During a lifetime, there are perhaps a few individuals who make such a profound impression that they are remembered vividly by all those with whom they come in contact. Oswald Tippo, Provost of the University of Massachusetts, is such a person.

My first interview with him was indicative of things to come. I was led into a half-darkened office which was almost entirely carpeted by stacks of papers, books, magazines and folders. Sitting in the midst of this paper surplus warehouse was Oswald Tippo. No sooner had I cleared a chair of several miscellaneous magazines and papers to sit down than my future boss directed a barrage of questions at me, none of which I was able to answer completely. I was just warming to the occasion and had prepared what I thought to be a brilliant response to his fifty-fourth question when he came over, shook my hand and pushed me out of the door. The entire interview lasted five minutes, a rather longish session, I was later to learn. It also amused me somewhat to discover that faculty candidates, all of whom Tippo was accustomed to meeting, were so shocked at the apparently brusque treatment they received that deans finally decided to give them a full briefing on what to expect before they met the Provost.

In my four years at the University, I was constantly amazed at the amount of reading material which he could absorb. After a full, nine hour day at the office, a short dinner break, and a full evening's work -- again, at the office -- he more often than not took additional reading material home to spend half the night reading. Almost invariably he would have already read an article or book referred to him by a faculty or staff member. It got so I had second thoughts about referring articles to him in my alumni magazine for fear that he had already read them. Of course, he was deadly in a committee meeting because often he was the only member who had read the material and fully briefed himself.

I think faculty and staff members probably recognized and saw more than anything else his almost fanatic dedication to his university. Faculty and staff who were occasionally working late in the evening could always be certain that the provost was working later and that at least was a source of comfort to them, if not to their wives. And even when they were not working in the evenings, weekends and holidays, driving past the administration building with their families or friends they would point at the provost's car parked in the lot and remark boastfully that the provost was working. But most do not realize that this fantastic dedication extended to self denial at times. When the administration moved into the new building, the provost was asked what type of new furniture he would like to order for his office. He replied that the money earmarked for his furniture should be spent for faculty furniture and refused to purchase new furnishings for his office. Even now, his old desk remains.

The quality of faculty and staff to him were extremely important. He constantly encouraged deans to recruit the best and was extremely critical of second-raters. At merit increase time, he personally read every recommendation for merit increments and raised questions where appropriate. The presence of even one or two inferior faculty members or staff members in the University bothered him. As a result of his constant efforts -- coupled with those of other dedicated individuals, of course -- the quality of faculty improved enormously. A frequent comment proffered by faculty members and deans is "I came to the University of Massachusetts because of Oswald Tippo."

He invariably returned the compliment by his obvious solicitude for the well being of his faculty. Although there were almost 1000 faculty members on campus, it would irritate him if he could not remember the name of a member of the faculty and the academic field of interest. At a reception for new faculty and their wives, he would absolutely astound everybody by remembering the names of most of the new faculty as well as their erstwhile institutional association and probably the name of one or two of their colleagues.

However, lest you think his memory for everything was extraordinary, I must relate a rather revealing story. Late one weeknight I was sleeping very soundly when there was a rap at the apartment door. Not quite believing that anybody would disturb me purposely so late in the evening, I ignored it. This was followed by a doorbell ring at which time I decided to answer the door. I was somewhat surprised -- to say the least -- to see Dr. Tippo standing in the hall. Explaining that while attending a banquet nearby he had mistakenly locked the keys in the university car, he asked if I had another set which he could borrow. I responded that my keys were in the office and offered to drive him home and unlock the car in the morning. It was only then that I learned he had locked the keys in the car with the motor running and it had been running for over four hours. The joke was on him, but I think he enjoyed the ridiculousness of the situation as much as I.

It is characteristic of Oswald Tippo that he could catch the humor in almost any situation even though it might be directed toward him. He was always perpetrating practical jokes on members of his staff and faculty. One that I remember particularly well was a near-miss. While being guided on a tour through one of the campus fraternity houses, the provost noticed a couch which was so worn that only the frame and springs were still attached. Knowing that an administrative colleague had ordered an expensive new couch, Tippo suggested that we deliver the fraternity couch to the colleague's office that evening, leaving a note which said, "This is your Harvey Probber couch which you ordered. The matching chair will arrive next week." Unfortunately or fortunately, we couldn't find a truck at that time to deliver the couch.

At a reception for new faculty and their wives, a cordial young instructor whom Tippo had not met previously came over to introduce himself, giving his department. Tippo responded, "My name is Tippo and I'm the provost." "What exactly is that?," the bewildered guest inquired. With a twinkle in his eye Tippo answered, "I'm sort of the janitor around here."

Often, in recalling a person or experience, we tend to remember more vividly the positive and amusing aspects of our relationships than the negative facets. Despite Tippo's enormous contributions to the University of Massachusetts, he, too, had less positive facets to his personality and his effects on people. For example, he found

Lawmaker Wants SMU Prof Fired

NEW BEDFORD - A New Bedford lawmaker yesterday called for the immediate expulsion of a female faculty member of Southeastern Massachusetts University for an article she wrote on obscentiy in a campus newspaper.

Rep. Edward P. Coury, a Democrat, said, "I have received numerous complaints from parents whose children attend SMU about the article.

"It is unbelievable. Unbelievable. I plan to see if I can abolish the newspaper."

The article was written by Judith Adler, a member of SMU's department of sociology. Entitled "On Obscenity," it appeared in the Nov. 25 edition of the SMU Torch. It dealt with the use of a certain, tabooed four-letter word which, she said, expresses a feeling unlike the word's true meaning.

Rep. George Rogers (D–New Bedford), House chairman of the education committee, said, "It was an unfortunate choice of words on her (Miss Adler's) part. The message she was trying to convey was made crystal clear. I question the advisability of using that type of vocabulary in a campus newspaper."

Rep. Donald R. Gaudette (D–New Bedford), said, "I'm surprised at everybody at the school for allowing this to happen.

"What's happening to our educational system? What's happening to our morals? I think we're losing everything now."

Coury said he would allow the newspaper to continue only if it could be "censored."

Coury said it is "wrong" for the taxpayers to pay the salaries of faculty members in state intitutions who write such articles.

"I think she should be discharged immediately," he said.

Rogers, mayor-elect of New Bedford, said he was "opposed" to censorship.

"But.", he said, "the problem is when a person is trying to make a point, makes it by using that type of language."

He added, "I am absolutely flabbergasted that a faculty member would use words like that."

In her article, Miss Adler said that a "new reflectiveness, a new self-consciousness in the use of language is necessary."

"As members of an academic community," she wrote, "we have a vital concern in renewing, preserving and restoring a language capable of conveying the whole of experience - a language which will preserve our 'integrity' in the literal meaning of the term. Sometimes 'obscene' language alone is capable of fulfilling that function; at other times it may do the opposite. Aware of both possibilities, we can only choose our words with care."

it completely distasteful to discuss questions of salary with faculty members or staff. A disgruntled faculty member appealing to the provost during merit increase time would as likely be avoided as consoled. Therefore, in many cases at least some of the younger faculty must have gotter the feeling that salary and personnel decisions were arbitrary. Then, too, he caused more than a little consternation among those who were unaccustomed to his style when they were always being questioned directly about their opinions of their colleagues. Nobody was ever safe from the prying, probing questions - not even students, who, in the course of an hour could be asked what they thought of the English department, the library, the curriculum and particular administrators. This type of approach generated, at times, as much circumspection and reticence as forthright expression.

Those who worked most closely with him on his staff became familiar with another characteristic: the almost total involvement in every facet of any project. Even the smallest task would attract his attention if he could find time to do it himself. As a result, one could only work with Tippo if he was willing to impose the same grueling tempo and pace as the provost, absorbing responsibilities by running alongside and trying to keep up with him.

At a time in academic life when there is little dedication to an institution and increased pursuit of material advancement, professional status and opportunism, Tippo has consistently adhered to an idealism which has guided him toward resignation more than once for a cause. In fact, these resignations have been at considerable financial sacrifice and personal discomfort. That's perhaps why he seems much bigger than life, more than a little unreal and even perhaps one of the last "angry young men." Certainly the man who replaces him as provost will be of a different generation and breed than Tippo.

Pucksters Seek End to Loss Streak vs. Amherst

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

The Redmen will be hoping to break a three-game losing streak tonight when they tangle with cross-town rival Amherst College. Face-off is 7 p.m. at Orr Rink.

Coach Jack Canniff has made several changes in his three lines hoping to get the Redman offense going. Senior Bob Madore will move to left wing, teaming up with John Hartnett and Jack Edwards.

Bryan Sullivan has been moved back to defense and he will team with Al Nickerson. The other defensive tandem of Bob Bartholomew and Doug Powling remains intact.

The probable starting goalie is P. J. Flaherty, but Bruce Crawford is also expected to see action.

Canniff hopes the new line changes will produce a more consistent attack. The Redmen have missed numerous scoring opportunities in front of the net during their first five games. When they have been able to get the offense untracted, it has been at the cost of the defense. Against Norwich the forward line was getting caught up ice giving the Cadets three-on-two and two-on-one breakaways.

One of the bright spots during their recent slump has been the play of penalty-killers Eric Scrafield and Dan Reidy. Only sophomores, both boys have shown good hockey sense and have allowed only three goals in ten assignments. Canniff feels this figure will dwindle even more as the season progresses and the boys gain more experience working together as a team.

The preliminary game will have the UMass freshmen, currectly 3-1, playing Nichols College. Leading the freshmen is Pat Keenan from Toronto, Canada. Last year people were amazed at the way Julius Erving could play basketball, as a frosh. Anyone who appreciates hockey will be equally amazed at Keenan's ability with the puck.

A fine scorer and playmaker, Pat has scored 13 goals and has had nine assists in only four games. A good forechecker, Deenan puts constant pressure on the opposition in their own end.

Tuesday night against the AIC frosh he stole the puck in the corner, came out and faked the first defensiveman out of the play, then swept around the other defender and put the puck in the corner of the net. There are many complimentary adjective that one could use to describe Keenan with, but they would seem biased. The best thing would be for one to come out this afternoon at 4 p.m. and form his own opinion.

The varsity game against Amherst will start afterwards at 7 p.m. as was previously stated. The first home game against Colby was SRO, and the crowd was treated to an exciting contest as the Redmen won, 4-2. Another SRO gathering and another home victory would be a welcome holiday gift for UMass in this, its final tilt of '69.

Clemson Goes Hootie

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) - Cecil Wayne "Hootie" Ingram, an assistant on the University of Arkansas staff, was announced Wednesday as the new head football coach at Clemson University.

He succeeds Frank Howard, 60, who stepped down last week after 30 years at the post. Howard will continue as Clemson's athletic director. In announcing Ingram's selection as his successor, Howard promised him a free hand as coach of the football Tigers.

"I feel ready to do this job," the husky, 35-year-old Ingram said on being introduced at a news conference.

"He'll be the finest coach Clemson ever had," Howard predicted.

Mermen Win First Meet Take Month Vacation

The swimming team travelled to Worcester last Tuesday in an attempt to break a three-meet losing streak. Seven strong now, with the addition of Dennis Moulton, coming out of a three year retirement, the mermen surprised a good Holy Cross team and beat them 55-38.

Strong man for UMass was Senior Captain Al Northup, who won the Individual Medley, although challenged by team-mate Herb Schuster, the 200 yard breast stroke and took a second in the 200 yard butterfly. Also in the winning column for UMass were Mark Miller winning the 50 and 100 yard freestyles, Ed Jazab in the 200 yard butterfly, Maurice Lynch in the 200 yard freestyle.

Scoring additional points were Ed Jazab with a second in the 50 yard freestyle, losing by about six inches, Rich Vogel with a second in the 200 yard backstroke and a third in the diving, Herb Schuster with seconds in the 200 yard Individual Medley and breaststroke.

Winning this meet will be a big boost to the swimmers, who have been discouraged by lack of manpower this year.

The team plans to stay on campus after finals and put in heavy workouts to get in top shape for the final run of meets. They begin January 31 against Vermont, a team they beat last year, and finish with the New England Championships in March. Last year UMass was eighth at the New Englands, but have only one person who scored points there, Mark Miller, left on the team this year, due to graduation.

Hoopmen Down; But Have a Lot of Time to Comeback

By STEVE ROSS
Senior Reporter

After the discouraging 88-71 loss to Connecticut on Tuesday, the Redmen must find the answers to a number of questions that have troubled them thus far. Few who knew the quality of the returning lettermen and the abundance of ability that was on last year's frosh team can believe that Jack Leaman's team is now only 3-2.

The Redmen have beaten Providence, Vermont, and New Hampshire. Leaman termed the PC win, "lucky", and beating the Catamounts and Wildcats rank somewhere with the sun rising in the East as an achievement.

With the exception of one player, the quintet has been plagued by inconsistent performances. All five regulars have shown well at times, but all too often there have been extended periods of nonproduction. If any one area has been lacking more than another, it has been at center.

Tuesday, the Redmen suffered their worst shooting night in a long time. A lowly 31% won't beat the Sisters of the Poor, let alone a Connecticut band that shoots 50%.

Julius Erving canned 20 points, but his shooting (7 for 18) could hardly be determined great. He added 23 rebounds to his total, and now averages over 21 an evening. He could well lead the nation by the end of the season.

This is not to say that the Redmen cannot have an awfully good year before the curtain comes down in Durham, N.H. on March 2, but the hoopsters will have to start playing up to their potential. Before this reporter gets another crack at analysing in this journal, the Redmen will be involved in a half dozen road frays. If the Redmen can do well in them, a good season could quite easily loom.

One man who must come around is Ray Ellerbrook. The UMass captain has only had one real good game, and since the opener with PC in which he netted 25, he has not given the team the needed scoring punch. But this week, the 6'1 guard was named to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, and maybe things are looking up.

DOUBLE DRIBBLES - The Redmen watched a horror movie before practice yesterday: the UConn game film. Leaman was pleased with the rebounding, but considering that the hosts missed 32 field goal attempts, there was ample opportunity to show rebounding prowess.

There was a period of time midway in the second half when the Redmen floored four sophomores. Mike Pagliara set up Erving for a bunny, and UMass closed to three. UConn Coach Dee Rowe called time out, and made the necessary adjustments to keep the Huskies on top.

Probably the most disappointing aspect of the game to many was the way in which the Redmen quit in the final moments. A good team never quits, but in the final two minutes the hosts never could get the ball out of their own backcourt. It would be one thing if U-Conn had the better horses, but that is the furthest thing from the truth.

Junior guard Billy Greely tried to put his finger on the woes that have beset the team when he said, "It's just one of those things. We've been trying, but nothing has gone well. I guess it's just a big slump that a lot of guys are having right now."

Last year a similar dry spell hit in Boston during successive games with B.U. and Northeastern. Both games were lost, and, in the second half of the fray, with the Terriers, the Redmen looked almost as inept as they did last night. But the Redmen recovered to win ten of the last 13, so there is no reason to throw in the towel.

Tickets for the AIC game remain on sale until tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at $2 per. During finals ducats for the Penn game at the Palestra in Philadelphia will go on sale. Student tickets are $1.75, and only a limited amount will be available. In the second half of the double header fourth ranked Davidson will meet St. Josephs.

By MARK SILVERMAN Asst. Managing Editor

A group of black students have presented the administration with a petition calling for the immediate establishment of a black studies department and have demanded a reply by the end of Final Examination period.

Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen, speaking for the administration, said he wished to discuss the matter with black students before a reply is made, but indicated that a black studies program would have to go through "regular University channels" before it could be initiated.

He added that an administration-created committee has been working on a black studies plan for the past semester, but that it has not as yet submitted a final proposal to the administration.

In their petition, the blacks made five major demands of the administration.

1. "The immediate installation of a black studies department.

2. "That such a department be controlled in autonomous fashion by the black faculty who make up the department and the black students.

3. "That the University appropriate the funds necessary for the functioning and maintenance of the department.

4. "The black students be able to fulfill core requirements now by taking courses under the present black studies program which, when the Black Studies Department is established, could lead to a Bachelor of Arts degree in black studies.

5. "That negotiations be instituted with the other four (area) colleges for the eventual but speedy formation of a Black Studies Institution, encompassing the black students from the Five College Area."

In presenting their petition, the students argued, "As the University exists, it is only oriented to white people and by its very existance as a white university, is incapable of addressing itself to both the academic and intellectual needs of the black students on this campus."

They continued, "We can no longer allow ourselves to exist at the mercy of the white bureaucrats who control the University and our lives on this campus. We see as the only possible alternative to this systematic process of cultural genocide, the immediate establishment of a Black Students Department."

Allen ruled out however, the overnight establishment of a black studies department. "We cannot create an academic department by that", he said.

He indicated that as soon as the black studies committee finalizes its report, the College of Arts and Sciences and the Faculty Senate must OK the plan before it can go to the Board of Trustees for final approval.

"This is the only way in which we can create an academic department by law," he added.

He went on to say, "While we (the administration) realize the urgency for more action in this area, we haven't been totally unresponsive to the needs of blacks on this campus."

He cited the creation of the black studies committee a year ago, and the administration's intent, a year ago, to establish a black studies program. He also pointed out that UMass has already hired three black faculty members to teach black studies courses; they are Ivanhoe Donnaldson, Cherif Guellal, and Playthell Benjamin.

SDS Hatch Protest Prompts Meeting

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

The controversy raised by SDS over the laying-off of seventeen Student Union cafeteria workers during the period covering Christmas, finals and intercession was the subject of an informal meeting yesterday in the Whitmore Business Office.

The major issue involved was the effects this lay-off, the largest of its kind ever to occur during this period of time, would have on the individual workers, many of whom are self supporting and dependent on a constant income.

The basic problem, according to Gerald Grady, University Business Manager is "a lack of funds." There is simply not enough money to keep all the workers employed.

Grady has been meeting with Charles Sheridan, Union representative, in an attempt to make the most "equitable" arrangements for the workers. According to Grady, the talks have been "going along well." The University has assumed a policy, as it has in previous years, of trying to relocate those workers who want to continue working in other University departments, so that "most" of the workers being laid off Friday will probably resume work Monday in a different department, with no break in pay.

The number of people who will take this continued employment is at the present time undetermined. There are some workers who will want to take vacation time, some who are probationary workers and were told, when hired, of the possibility of a lay-off, and there is the possibility of not having enough money to cover the overflow workers in other University departments. Grady said, that the University will cover as many people as the fund allows. "According to the present information, most will be able to continue working," cautioned Grady.

The SDS release concerning the Hatch workers apparently had raised the issue of Collective Bargaining Procedures. Grady, at the beginning of the meeting, immediately emphasized that the SDS cannot do "things which relate to the workers at the University, which are against the Collective Bargaining Laws of the State." Grady emphasized that "SDS can't represent the workers."

Julius Katz, a member of the local SDS told Grady that the students weren't there "to represent the workers, but rather as concerned individual students". The questions raised were simply when the lay-off will be effective and "how many workers will be effected."

A generally congenial tone was assumed by all after Charles Sheridan, the Union representative, expressed delight over the presence of "interested" people and pointed out that in most places the general public didn't show any concern.

The problem of the seventeen workers being laid off is only symptomatic of the future situations which will have to be faced by the workers, Administration and Unions. For example, next summer, there is only to be one summer session, because of a lack of funds. There are approximately 2200 non-professional employees, necessary to maintain the Community of 18,000 regular students. There is simply no way of maintaining this working large force during the summer when the community shrinks. This is the crux of the problems to be faced at UMass. Even to compensate for the 17 workers being laid off, the prices in the Harch would rise and the student tax fee would have to be increased. There is no simple solution.

On the Green Gutted In Early Morning Fire

An early morning fire destroyed the On the Green restaurant in Amherst yesterday, as two-degree temperatures hampered firemen.

The blaze is said to have begun at 6:30 yesterday morning, and spread upward through the building's three floors. Firefighters working on the top floor several times had to retreat because of noxious fumes. The icy roofs of adjoining buildings caused firemen additional difficulty.

There has been no estimate of damage as of last night, and the cause of the fire is still unknown.

Windows in the second and third floors of the building housing Russell's Package Store and the Gallery were broken to disperse smoke, and the building suffered some water damage.

The other adjoining building, housing Giard's Barber Shop, the Kimball and Cary Fuel Company and Daily Hampshire Gazette Offices, the House of Walsh and several small apartments, was undamaged.

Occupants of the Walsh building were able to return at about 8:30 this morning.

Fire chief John Doherty has not yet decided if he will call in the State Fire Marshall to aid in the investigation.

Surplus of Qualified Teachers May Cause Employment Trouble

(AP) - A new government study indicates there will be no oversupply of teachers during the next decade requiring the opening of new training and employment opportunities to women.

The study suggests to Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., that the federal government may have to provide the same help in breaking down job barriers for women that it has tried to give Negroes.

Other conclusions drawn from the study point to manpower shortages during the 1970s in the health professions and certain scientific fields, but to an overall balance of supply and demand for college-educated personnel.

The study was prepared by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to help plan for the nation's manpower needs between now and 1980. Geoffrey H. Moore, commissioner of labor statistics, summarized it Thursday to a House Education subcommittee headed by Mrs. Green.

Moore said the most dramatic shift indicated in employment supply and demand conditions is in elementary and secondary school teaching, long a shortage occupation.

"Teaching is about to undergo a sharp change in prospects," Moore said. "The aggregate supply of trained teachers is expected to significantly exceed demand if recent entry patterns in the occupation continue."

The study estimates jobopenings for elementary and secondary school teachers at 2.4 million between 1968 and 1980, with the output of trained teachers during that period reaching 4.2 million - an oversupply of 75 per cent.

The indicated surplus could be significantly reduced, Moore said, if communities introduce or expand kindergartens, nursery schools and classes for the handicapped, or hire more teachers to reduce class size.

Agnew and Newsmen Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) - Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew and representatives of the Radio Television News Directors Association met Thursday and "explored views" on Agnew's recent criticism of news broadcasting but "there was not much agreement on either side," a broadcast spokesman said.

J.W. Roberts, president of the association, said, "Our primary concern was to get across to the vice president the climate his speeches had created."

Roberts explained that news directors have received some "pretty strong letters" from viewers who side with Agnew and this generated "public pressure" on stations facing license renewal every three years.

Roberts quoted the letters as saying that the writer had seen enough of the "long hairs and hippies. Why show Eldridge Cleaver? Show the good things."

East Meets West in New Policy

(AP) - East Germany made its first move Thursday to put into practice the Warsaw Pact nations' new policy toward Chancellor Willy Brandt's West German government.

The initiative came in a letter from East Germany's President and Communist party chief, Walter Ulbricht, to president Gustav Heinemann of West Germany.

It was the first such contact between the heads of the two states since November 1951, when Presidents Wilhelm Pieck of East Germany and Theodore Heuss of West Germany exchanged letters.

Officials in Bonn maintained silence on the content of Ulbricht's letter. Government spokesman Conrad Ahlers said it would be answered.

He said the development was related to a resolution passed Wednesday night by the Volkskammer, the East German parliament. The resolution endorsed the policy set at a meeting of the Warsaw Pact states - the Soviet Union, East Germany, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Romania - in Moscow earlier this month.

The East German parliament called for relations with West Germany in the interest of world peace and security on the basis of equality, peaceful coexistence, to be secured by "recognized" agreements.

Like the Moscow meeting, however, it also called for final recognition of the border between East and West Germany and the Oder and Neisse rivers as Poland's western frontier.

The resolution appeared to be a slight softening of the East German line toward Bonn and Ahlers said the Bonn government found it "interesting." He declined to elaborate.

New Catholic Ruling On Mixed Marriages

The Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston asked parish priests Thursday to allow the traditional reading of the marriage banns when Catholics marry non-Catholics.

"It is my hope that the priests of the archdiocese will welcome this ecumenical initiative and will implement it willingly and wisely," said Richard Cardinal Cushing.

The banns are announcements to parish congregations of intent to marry, traditionally read three weeks before a marriage to allow anyone who knew of an impediment to object.

But in the case of mixed marriages, the bans have not been read and Cardinal Cushing said this has been misunderstood and "has even given offense to many persons, including Catholics, who have been sensitive to the ecumenical mission of the Church."

The Cardinal's rules, to go into effect Jan. 1, will allow reading of the banns for mixed marriages under certain conditions - if the parties approve and if the marriage will not "violate the norms" of the other faith.

The couple must also obtain the required dispensation for the marriage prior to the reading of the banns, and they will be read only at the parish of which the Catholic partner is a member.

According to the United States Catholic Conference, since 1910 about one third of American Roman Catholics have married non-Catholics.

Removal of Indians From Alcatraz Undecided

(AP) - It's been a month since the Indians invaded Alcatraz and despite government complaints, they're still there, picking up some support from various quarters.

"I tell them every day that they must leave," said Thomas Hannon, regional administrator of the General Services administration, the 2½-acre island's current landlord.

There were 200 of the Indians on the island, a former federal prison, Thursday. The Indians are demanding the island for an Indian cultural center. They say a 19th century treaty gave them the right to surplus federal land.

Among recent moves in their behalf:

- More than $12,000 in cash and numerous foodstuffs have been contributed to the Alcatraz Relief Fund.
- Indian folksinger Buffy St. Marie raised $2,300 with a concert at Stanford University.
- A poetry reading benefit Friday night at San Francisco's Glide Memorial church is expected to produce $1,000.
- A dozen university professors from various schools issued a "position paper" endorsing the Indians' claim to Alcatraz. The occupation began late the night of Nov. 19, when some 75 American Indians in a make-shift flotilla of small boats seized the island in San Francisco Bay.

The Indians, mostly from San Francisco's Mission District and claiming membership in 50 tribes, are using the occupation to dramatize demands for a general new deal for the welfare of Indians throughout America.

Actually, few of the occupants have spent the entire month on the windswept isle. They come and go, camping out a few days at a time amid the decayed buildings of the onetime "escape-proof federal prison.

"It would be very simple to take them off," says Hannon, but no move has been made to do so.

Instead, the GSA is making the occupation possible: It periodically sends a barge-load of fresh water to the bone-dry island.

Representatives of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and the U.S. Attorney have gone out often to talk to them.

The Indians say they want secretary of Interior Walter J. Hickel to pay a visit. Hickel says fine, but not on the island.

Resignations Requested "On Obscenity"

NEW BEDFORD - The propriety of obscenities in campus publications has become an issue here as it has in so many college communities in recent months.

State Rep. Edward P. Coury (D-New Bedford), has called for immediate dismissal of a female faculty member at Southeastern Massachusetts University here because of an article she wrote "On Obscenity."

Charging that a "left - wing movement" is "trying to brainwash our kids to use four-letter words," Coury said he will try to abolish the S.M.U. newspaper or at least have it censored.

The questionable article was written by Judith Adler, a member of the school's sociology department, and dealt with a certain four letter word.

Miss Adler expressed the view that "as members of an academic community we have a vital concern in renewing, preserving and restoring a language capable of conveying the whole of experience- a language which will preserve our 'integrity' in the literal meaning of the term.

"Sometimes obscene language alone is capable of fulfilling that meaning," she wrote. "At other times it may do the opposite. Aware of both possibilities, we can only choose our words with care."

"The message she was trying to convey was made crystal clear," Rogers said, "I question the advisability of using that type of vocabulary in a campus news-paper."

Rep. Donald R. Gaudette (D-New Bedford) expressed surprise "at everybody at the school for allowing this to happen."

In calling for Miss Adler's immediate dismissal, Coury said it is wrong for taxpayers to pay salaries of faculty members in state institutions who write such articles.

Gaudette asked, "What's happening to our educational system.. to our morals. I think we're losing everything now."

Seniors Named to "Who's Who" List

Thirty-two seniors from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst have been named this year to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

This annual listing honors those seniors throughout the country who have contributed most to their schools during their four undergraduate years.

UMass has a nomination process unique in this country. It is the only campus where the nomination committee is composed solely of students.

Students are judged mainly on scholarship, with special emphasis given to academic and extra-curricular activities, leadership, and all-around citizenship. The University's nominees were chosen from the entire list of graduating seniors. In addition to the committee, students and faculty may nominate as well.

Among those who have been inducted into Who's Who include:

David R. Floreen, Sander B. Ross, Stephen J. Wait, Barbara S. Ditkoff, Carolyn A. Nevins, David Stevens, Jr., Ray A. Ellerbrook, John P. Shayavitz, Bruce R. Baldoni, Theodore S. Giatas, Richard S. Spiro Supported by "Unsure Majority"

NEW YORK (AP) - A poll taken for ABC shows 52 per cent agreed with Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's charge that television newsmen present the news in a biased manner and that 33 per cent disagreed with him.

At the same time, an overwhelming majority of those interviewed said news commentators should have the right to give their reactions immediately after a presidential speech. The sway was 2 1/2 to 1 in favor. The respondents were almost evenly split in their reaction to Agnew's contention that newspapers are biased. Thirty-six per cent agreed, 34 per cent disagreed and 30 per cent didn't know or had no opinion.

The majority endorsed freedom of the press for all media. The results of the poll, which included interviews with 559 adults in 12 cities across the country, were released Thursday night on the ABC Evening News.

ABC commissioned Lieberman Research Inc. of New York to make the survey after Agnew criticized the networks for their news analysis following President Nixon's Nov. 3 Vietnam speech.

The poll showed that the public is generally familiar with the vice president's criticisms. Eighty-eight per cent said they knew of his criticism of television and 60 per cent said they were familiar with his comments on alleged newspaper bias.

The respondents supporting Agnew said the principal reason that they agreed is that they feel the news media does, in fact, slant the news. Those who disagreed said they feel the news is not slanted, newsmen should be free to express their own opinions, and the news media is doing a good job.

More than half of those who agreed with the charges of bias said they still believed that the media has been basically fair and should not be asked to lessen its criticism of the Nixon administration.

Eighty-nine per cent said they believed newspapers should print editorials and 85 per cent said they believed television should broadcast editorials.

Nationalist Leader Convicted

MONTREAL (AP) - Pierre Vallieres, a leader in the Quebec nationalist movement, was sentenced Thursday to 2 years in prison for manslaughter in a 1966 bombing death.

Sentence was passed by Justice Paul Miquelon of Court of Queen's Bench. The 32-year-old former journalist and member of the Fron de Liberation Quebecois was convicted Wednesday by a jury.

Vallieres, who plans to appeal the verdict, said he will continue to fight for an independent Quebec in prison.

The conviction was in connection with the April, 1966, bombing death of Therese Morin at a strike-bound shoe factory.

He admitted he was a member of the front, which seeks a n independent Quebec through violence.

Vallieres said after the verdict was read: "This verdict means I must continue to fight for my ideals in my homeland even if I am kept behind bars."

He has been held without bail since 1966, when he was arrested in New York City while demonstrating before the United Nations building. His detention set off several nationalist demonstrations.

Vallieres conducted his own defense with the help of three legal advisers in his second trial on the same charge.

He was convicted of manslaughter in 1966, but was granted a new trial by the Quebec Court of Appeal.

Appeal. It ruled the Crown had made objectionable and improper statements to the jury.

Death Cycle

Another semester finished! No doubt also, this is the time of year you most enjoy - Christmas, Holidays. True, you have to come back in two weeks for finals, but that's a long way off. You're glad to get away from boring lectures, computer exams you crammed for, and courses irrelevant to your life and interests. Released from this burden of "academic responsibility," you will go home and relax and party for a few weeks. You believe you have accomplished something and are therefore entitled to this rest. The truth is, most of you have accomplished nothing.

What you have learned this semester and the degree you hope to acquire, both do nothing to change the quality of life, yours or anyone else's. You are being trained to fill a slot in a vast, inhuman, "progress" oriented machine. Each day, I see you walking around campus in a daze, shut-off, afraid, alone. By virtue of moral compulsion, most of you are sexually repressed. You feel guilty doing anything related to life or in contradiction to any of your parents' repressed values. Your faces are rigid, anxious masks, and you can't look anyone straight in the eye.

Whether or not people, like yourselves except with darker skin or slanted eyes, live or die makes no difference to you. Song My, Hue, Laos, Okinawa, and the Fort Dix stockade are places all far, far away from Amherst, as are all the urban and rural ghettoes and prisons of this nation, state, and county.

For most of you, a decade of civil rights, student movements, rebellions, riots, hoaxed elections, massacres, deaths of your friends and brothers, murders, and political trials and repression in a supposedly free country has made no difference - has had no REAL effect upon your life. All that stirs within your heads to cure social ills and these symptoms of social injustice is a program of "law and order" and the pursuit of "legitimate channels."

It is time for you to realize that poverty, racism, imperialism and war are all the result of your apathy, your sexual repression, your lack of concern, your false patriotism, and your acting only out of guilt when and if you do ever act.

Why don't you think seriously about your life. Question the reasons you seek security, and the ways in which you deal with people, for unless you do begin to question yourself and your life, you will soon find yourself in a swamp in Vietnam or South America or even guarding a street corner in some riot-torn city. Worse, you may find yourself in some horrid obscure desk job or playing a role of "housewife" or "businss secretary."

Genocide: The Black Panthers

The killings of Fred Hampton and Mark Clark are only the latest in the long history of white genocide against black people in this country.

One does not have to go to Vietnam or to what was Hitler's Europe to find the meaning of genocide. The history of black people in America has been one of rape, castration, pillage and genocide for over 400 years. Every black man or woman who has resisted has been killed, exiled, jailed or broken.

There are no examples of successful black resistance to white oppression. White society has never allowed it to exist. The only exception is the group survival of black people as a unit and their continued attempts in each generation to create new forms of resistance.

A listing of only some of the better known victims of American racism is itself a course in black history. It includes: 60 million black deaths in the slave trade in Africa, the West Indies, Latin America and the United States; some names are Gabriel; Denmark Vesey; Nat Turner; Shields Green; Frederick Douglas; Monroe Trotter; Claude MacKay; Marcus Garvey; George Padeniore; Richard Wright; Sterling Brown; Josephine Baker; Benjamin Davis; William Patterson; Paul Robeson; Malcolm X; Robert Williams; Stokely Carmichael; H. Rap Brown; Muhammad Ali; Huey Newton; Max Stanford; Ted Jones; Martin Sostre; down to Eldridge Cleaver and on and on.

Any black threat to white America - whether it was political, economic, cultural or military - has always been harassed, isolated then crushed.

To The Living

Imagine a class where every student gets an "A". Imagine the student getting an "A" even if he did no work. If he did work, he chose what work he did, how much he did, and decided himself in what ways doing this work was valuable for his own life.

Imagine that in this class the teacher did nothing but explain his own concept of his own work. If he tried to say work valuable for his own life was also valuable for students' lives and justified saying this with insanely prejudiced reasons, students could shut the man up, tell the teacher to be quiet or leave.

Imagine the students - people - talked about the way work interfered with or enhanced students' - people's - relating. Imagine that people threw out reserve, inhibitions against showing feeling, courtesy or decorum, dependency on authority to explain or pathfind. Everyone had to struggle for his own meaning. People threw out texts, seating arrangements, tests. They worked out one to one their problems in relating. Imagine trusting people, with no established, ceremonial ways of thinking about people's lives, each of which really does soon end. Competition is replaced by cooperation. Isolation is replaced by communality. Anxiety and hostility are replaced by love and gentleness.

One's mind shifts its focus from fear or tension about relating with people, to focusing on the human fears and tensions arising from relating to the universe. Imagine separating the anxiety about death, disease, hunger and shelter from anxiety through making people face life dilemmas in confused, unjust ways. Imagine the insanity of culture which all authoritarians call reason - imagine that insanity replaced by a way of living called sane and pleasurable by those people presently ruled or beaten or intimidated into submission by authority.

So instead of preparing for business careers, one lived one's life among those people one loved and cared for. One lived one's life with one's friends who with similar bodies and consciousnesses are all fated to die at approximately the same date. One lives one's own life with other humans who are also living their own life. Then, nothing obscures the process of learning how to enhance the development of the individual and collective personalities of these people.

To imagine all this, a person must imagine taking everything the average college student - the average American - believes about himself, other people, his country, his needs, their needs, his goals, their goals, and throw it away. Get it, you take everything that crops up inside this person's head whenever he thinks about the meaning of his life, and you discard it. You throw it away.

Of course, you throw away the medium that got these reflexive values there inside these heads in the first place. The major vehicle for creating this kind of mind filled with illusions about life and death and sex and love and meaning and time and work - the vehicle creating pressures in a person so he ends up asking certain questions about his life and not other questions - the vehicle systematizing the ways we then go about answering these questions - the vehicle then supplying us with answers for the questions the average human after his years of bludgeoning has no choice but reflexively accepting - that vehicle is the school.

What a person needs to be alive he must have if he is alive. If he's let alone with his own equipment, he will live and interact with his friends and environment in creative, life-affirming ways. He will make love without fears and compulsions, without the accompanying insane justifications like duty or procreation. In dealings with people, he will show his feelings and prevent hysterical pressures from building up, resulting in violent releases. He will always be creating new channels for expressing feelings. Of course, he will want for himself in every moment of his one life the richness that the rich preserve for themselves. There will be a different, different culture, because its basis, the individual human, will be different in kind, not merely in degree, from what he is now.

Imagine living the way you want to live, and the way some humans now do live. Imagine freedom. Imagine calling all illusions of freedom lies. Imagine telling your teacher he is a lie. Imagine telling him his words are lies. And imagine telling priests and rabbis that, and ministers, and all those who profess to know and understand things the average human being is too stupid to understand, or can only understand after a long apprenticeship, and even then he will continually need the advice of those who are keepers of the magic lore of living, and wo keep it pure and safe as only they know how to do.

Imagine your own private life-revolution. Imagine it as the birth thoughts of a reality you are going to make with your own hands.

You are only free if you live your life as its vital, quick, shortness urges you. You can not be alien to yourself, or to others, or they to you or themselves, and lead free lives.

Education allows for systematic alienation - indoctrination into the pattern of dynamics of the machine and its products.

The life of the machine is different than the life of the human. Do you know that? Can you imagine yourself, your teacher, your father and mother, knowing that? Can you imagine living your life with that always in mind, instead of the other things?

Why can't you do so now? How does being a student, that is, a child, a citizen, a wife or husband, a buyer or seller interfere with knowing human life differs from the life of industrial goods? Who benefits from subordinating individual human lives to the life of business and the state? Isn't a career and a preparation for it, other words for enslavement?

Are you taught to hold out in front of you a carrot always beyond your reach, but because you are preoccupied with getting it, you forget that you are dragging behind you a heavy wagon which keeps filling with mutilated or dead human bodies?

Racism Cogs

For Blacks "racism is the normal result of living under a system of oppression." Why should be "wear the mask that grins and lies; it hides our cheeks and shades our eyes?" Does everyone really know that Blacks have been discriminated against? There are some who are so naive as to say that the Blacks deserved what they got and what they are presently getting.

My letter is mainly aimed at an article that appeared in the Daily Collegian the other day. The student stated that he was a "liberally reared student" (whatever that means). Undoubtedly you were not that liberally reared for you claimed that you could not understand the Black people's actions at the basketball game last Tuesday. Your story sounds like a sob one to me; it really was sickening. Man you must realize that we have not asked for your brotherhood, neither have we asked for your sympathy. If you want to play a part as a white person in accepting Black people, you will definitely have to learn to understand Blacks better. "The intelligent Negro (Black) of today is resolved not to make discrimination an extenuation for his shortcomings in performance, individual or collective; he is trying to hold himself at par, neither inflated by sentimental allowances nor depreciated by current social discounts. For this he must know himself and be known for precisely what he is . . . rather than the old sentimental interest."

What you witnessed Tuesday, one saw practically all over the world during the 1969 Olympics and as usual white America cried "anti-Americanism and racism." Just what do you expect from a people who have been so dehumanized?

It is not so much whether you respect "those people" for you stated it quite clearly in your ending ("But what does it matter if I'm their enemy anyway"). You must realize that too much of your life will be lost, its meaning lost, unless you approach it as much through love as through hate, for "it is not how we love or who we love but that we love."

Cogs

This society is the most advanced society in the world, in technology . . . that is. Therefore it issafe and logical to say, that this society has designed many different types of machinery that are capable of designing other machines and that has replaced human individuals, labors, and values. This civilization has created monstrous machines, such as:

1. The political machine was created so that the elected, honest, and pious men could control the masses and exploit the minorities.
2. A war machine was created by the political machine, to help acquire great wealth and so that nothing could be in conflict with the democratic and liberatic views of the ruling machine.
3. The industriallized educational machine was also created by the political machine, so that it could insure domestic tranqullity and the loss of individualism in the upcoming generations.
4. These machine people of this society have become so dependent on these "helpful" machines, that they have even created a love machine to try and replace the loss of self.

We have all created these machines in this society; by the sweat and blood of my Black kidnaped, raped and robbed ancestors and by the scrupulousness of your white forefathers.

On the night of December 17, the second presentation for an allocation of funds for the continuation of a Black magazine, the Drum, was hesitatingly and hostilely passed by the school's war machine which is the Student Senate. On the initial presentation for funds, the war machine denied the allotment of $2100 dollars for the magazine but desired a compromise on the issue. The war machine then charitably offered 2-3 hundred dollars as a compromise, and we flatly rejected this absurd suggestion. In a few hours, we Black students renewed our solidarity to combat the war machine for what is "rightfully ours". Did I understand you correctly, when "you" questioned, "rightfully ours"? 303 Black undergraduates attend this industrialized educational machine. We have all paid the $30 fee for Student Affairs and this amounts to $9,090 dollar s - plus, because there are Black graduates who are also subjected to this payment. It appeared that if we had not received our overdue $2,100 dollars, the Senate would have been guilty of "taxation without representation". Because of reasons similar to the before-mentioned ones, lit the match that caused a revolution that overthrew the political machine in the mid seventeen-hundreds. "We" know who the political machine is, but if "you" are ignorant of who or what it is, observe the honest and pious men of our administration.

POWER TO THE PEOPLE.

Censure

This is a plea to a member of the Massachusetts Legislature to stop interfering with the right of free speech at SMU. Rep. Coury, I mean you. Your statements concerning the abolition of the college newspaper and the firing of a faculty member are atrocious and intellectually repugnant. Your political chauvinism is unwanted and positively detrimental to the continuance of free higher education in the State of Massachusetts. Freedom of the press is unlimited unless it involves libel. Demagogic statements of the kind you have so flagerantly uttered (and especially in your position as a public servant) are unforgivable. Times are changing Mr. Coury, and if you expect to be re-elected (and I hope you don't) you better think before you bark.

Christmas Snow

Crystal love sparkling, spreading warm streetlights to all people walking in the dark.
God bless the merry gentlemen who keep their stores open until nine p.m. on Christmas Eve. They do it for Christ.
The Messiah played on our set is better than on yours; listen to the expansive tones and richer voices.
Fruit cakes to receive, freeze, thaw and give away next year.
Send a bottle of Christmas cheer to turn worries into bright red noses and drive home over children using new sleds.
All we want for Christmas is peace on earth; but we'll take skiis, radios, new posters, money, tied, slips, sweaters, games and platinum plated peace medallions.
Just put them under the new k-five one four series twelve aluminum tree making sure they're signed 'to me'.
Oh! Look! It's snowing out! Wow!
Yea that's that new plastic stuff.

Trackmen Face Stiff Test Run in Rugged Boston Meet

On Saturday, January 10, members of the UMass track team meet their first formidable competition at the annual Knights of Columbus track meet in the Boston Garden. The running events begin at 7:30 with the field events taking place at Northeastern University's cage in the afternoon.

Leading the Redmen weight throwers will be junior Ed Arcaro. Arcaro will be the only experienced thrower for UMass in both the 351 lb. weight and the 16 pound shot. Accompanying him to Boston will be Barney Schneider in the weight and Peter Natti and Bob Hoy in the shot. All three are freshmen.

The running events have had strict limiations put on them this year by the K of C, allowing only one athlete per school in most of the running events. Therefore, UMass will not be able to get all its good runners in this top flight competition. The new limitations will force Coach O'Brien into holding run-offs for places in the meet.

In the 50 yard dash three men will battle for the right to race in the Garden. Co-captain Dave Marble, a senior, junior speedster Walter Mayo and soph Ron Harris will contend for the Garden honors.

The 45 yard hurdles will have junior record holder Jerry Spellman, senior Marc Levefer, and Sophomore Jim Graves vieing for the top position on the team. As of now Spellman and Graves hold a slight edge over Lefever.

In the Invational New England Mile, Coach O'Brien will have a problem picking the Redmen representative from three able runners. Ron Wayne, the leading Redmen miler last year, will be pushed by frosh cross - country stars Rich Barry and Tom Swain. Barry and Swain ran 4:24 and 4:25 miles on the Cage's slow track, and are prime candidates for the Boston race. Wayne, however, has been suffering from a severe cold and may not be ready for the mile. Also, he may be running a half mile on the two mile relay team. If Wayne stays just with the relay, the two frosh will probably split up the Invitational Mile and the Invitational 880.

Both the varsity and frosh will enter mile relay teams. Running for the varsity will be Dave Marble Ron Harris, Jerry Spellman and one of the half milers on the two mile relay team. The freshmen will be represented by four of the following: Steve Levine, Mark Robinson, Bill Boyce, Alan Johnson Tom Swain, Pete Crisci, Dennis Busa or Joe Messina.

The varsity two mile relay will be anchored by three well trained half miles in senior co-captain Dave Evans, senior Bill Donaldson, and soph Al Mangan. The fourth member will be either Ron Wayne or Larry Paulson, both juniors dropping down from their usually further distances.

Girl Gymnasts Drop First Meet

UMass girls symnastics team lost to National champions Springfield College 89.65 to 99.45. Patti Corrigan and Karen Stewart from Springfield each scored 8.95 on uneven parallel bars in helping their team to victory. Patti also won side horse vaulting with a 9.1.

The best performances on the UMass team were from Sue White, who placed third in vaulting with a score of 8.4, and Ruth Morse who took third place on the belance beam, scoring 7.45.

Intramural Program Completes Successful Fall

The Intramural Sport Program, which is the single largest program on campus, in terms of voluntary participation, commenced this year's activities on September 22. A most successful fall season was manifested in increased student participation and a wider selection of activities.

CROSS COUNTRY

On October 8th, 248 men, representing 22 residence halls, 17 fraternities and 10 independent units, competed in the cross country run. Paul Segersten, representing the A & P Gypsies, an independent team, came in first, running the 1.7 mile course in 9 minutes and 16 seconds. Len Zane, unattached, was runnerup and Bill Meixner, also of the A & P Gypsies, was third.

The Team Campus Championship was annexed by the Webster Panthers, with the A & P Gypsies runnerups and Kappa Sigma third.

The Touch Football season got underway on September 22, with 91 teams representing 41 residence hall units, 20 fraternities and 30 independent club units, playing 247 games on 23 action filled playing dates. It was not unusual to see as many as 1,500 spectators and participants on the Lighted IM Fields from 6:00 to 10:30 p.m., on any one of the aforementioned playing dates.

The winning teams of fifteen leagues played off for the Campus Championship. The Jocks, with Ken LaChapelle running, passing and kicking, won four straight games to capture the Campus Championship. They defeated last year's independent champs, the Roadrunners, in a high scoring, (38-26) thriller. Next they took on the Wheelers, a strong independent team and won a real cliff hanger, in the last few minutes of play, by a 13-8 score. They then defeated Phi Sigma Delta, the IFC Champions, 18-0. This could have been a great game had not PSD lost their triple threat star, Tony Lauria, by injury the previous night in the Frat Playoff versus Phi Mu Delta. In the final game, the Jocks defeated the Chadbourne Maroons, Residence Hall Champs, 29-6.

The Roadrunners scored 301 points to break the old record of 265 points, set by the Hills South Hi-Lo's last year. The Kennedy Panthers performed the phenomenal feat of not allowing an opponent to cross their goal all season. This surpassed the defensive records of the Grayson Aces of 1966 and the Washington Terrors of 1967, who had allowed only six points each during those seasons.

Tony Lauria, of Phi Sigma Delta, won the Leading Passer laurels completing 93 of 131 pass for a .710 average. Mike Delugan of BX was the Leading Receiver with 42 receptions. Tom Brennan of the Roadrunners led all scorers for the season with 98 points. For the second year in succession, Pete Woodcock of BX was the most successful among the defenders, in rushing the passer.

Extramural Touch Football games were played against Amherst College and the University of New Hampshire. The Jocks, Campus and Independent Champions; Chadbourne Maroons, Residence Hall Champions and Campus Runnerups; Phi Sigma Delta, IFC Champions and Campus third, met their counterparts from Amherst College and the University of New Hampshire. The University of Massachusetts representatives won all six games. The Touch Football trophy, awarded to the winner between UMass and UNH, will stay on the UMass campus for the fourth year in a row.

This past Touch Football season, 1,751 students registered; 1,395 took an active part, with a total individual participation of 5,591.

TUG-O-WAR

This activity becomes more popular each year. Thirty-four teams, representing 19 fraternities, 13 residence halls and nine independent units competed in the double elimination tournament.

There were 462 students who actively took part, with 1,158 participations. Altogether, 46 matches took place.

Kappa Sigma won the IFC Championship, then defeated the Hamlin Pied Pipers, Residence Hall Champs for the Campus Championship. The 3 M's won the independent laurels.

METAWAMPE 500

The fraternities were represented by 13 teams, residence Halls, nine teams and the independents, seven teams. Students actively participating numbered 232.

The race was conducted in heats, and the winner was determined on time. The Butterfield Lemons won the Campus and Residence Hall Championships, completing the 6.8 mile course in 21:36.5. The Moore Mags were Campus Runnerups, while the A & P Gypsies won the Independent Championship and finished Campus third. The 3 M's, another independent team, finished fourth. Phi Mu Delta finished fifth overall, but first among the fraternities.

TENNIS SINGLES

Cold weather and rain held up the completion of the Tennis Singles Tournament. However, 146 students played 140 matches in the single elimination tournament, with the final match for the Campus Championship being played November 20 in 30 degree temperatures.

Winners of the fourteen flight brackets - six Residence Halls, four Fraternity and four Independent, began Campus Championship play October 24. Steve Ferber, of the Cance Cool Cans, repeated his championship play of last year, by winning his flight bracket in three straight matches and repeating in the playoffs in three straight. Steve was forced into three sets in only one match, by Dave Bellware of the Kennedy Leopards, Campus Third place winner. Keith Cross, Unattached was Campus Runnerup.

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Coming off a strong 26-13 win over Harvard, the UMass wrestlers now can enjoy a six week layoff before returning to the mats next semester.

At the beginning of the season, Coach Homer Barr felt his team would be in good shape if they were over .500 after the Harvard match and this has been accomplished. The Redmen broke fast and won their first three meets of the season in impressive fashion over URI, Tufts and Amherst. However a weekend tournament in Pennsylvania quickly evened the record at 3-3.

UMass was soundly defeated on the trip by Bloomsburg State, Ohio U. and Indiana (Pa.) State, but came away better wrestlers as their win over Harvard indicates. The win gave them a 4-3 record and put UMass in an excellent position to better its 9-6 record of a year ago, with an easier schedule coming up.

Springfield, perennial New England champs, and Central Conn., will give the Redmen problems and maybe MIT, but the rest of the schedule should be relatively easy if UMass stays healthy. Teams such as UConn, UNH, Dartmouth, Wesleyan and Boston College are not in the same class as the Redmen, and UMass should pile up wins in these contests.

Individually, coach Barr feels the team is fairly settled in the light and middle weights, but injuries have caused problems in the heavyweights. Nick DiDomenico, Dave Reynolds, Phil Davis, Sheldon Goldberg and Clay Jester have all been wrestling consistantly in the light weights. Mike Brauner and Jim Godkin have been splitting the chores at 158 and Tom Young seems to have won back his spot at 167 after a fine showing in Pa. Kent Mignocchi and Tom Andrews are wrestling at 177 but both have been plagued by inconsistency.

The loss of Tim Perkins at 190 has forced Barr to move Bob Willman up to this weight and to compound problems, Willman got hurt against Harvard. Captain George Zguris should be over a rib injury in time to wrestle in the next meet and his presence gives the team stability it needs at heavyweight.

The first meet of next semester is at home against the Coast Guard on Jan. 30, and if the Redmen return to school in shape and with no weight problems, they should get rolling again.

Swimmers Bounce Back

By ED DOHERTY
Staff Reporter

The vastly improved UMass swim teams scored their first victories of the season, with the Varsity taking a 55 to 37 victory over Holy Cross and the Freshman team triumphing 51 to 37, in Tuesday night action. The varsity squad was let to victory by the duo of Mark Miller and Al Northrup, who each captured two first places for the Redmen.

Miller earned his victories with fine performances in the 50 and 100 yard freestyle events. Northrup's specialty is 200 yards, and he won both the 200 yard breaststroke and 200 yard Individual races.

Other strong performers in the team's victory were HerbSchuster who finished second in the 200 yard individual , the 200 yard breast stroke, and the Diving competition, and also Eddie Jazab who won the 200 yard Butterfly and placed second to teammate Morris Lynch in the 200 yard freestyle. Rich Vogel aided the Redmen cause with a third place finish in the Diving competition, and was runner-up in the 200 yard back stroke event. Coming down to the last event, the 400 yard freestyle relay, the Mermen were leading 55-30, but lost to the Crusaders by 2.2 seconds making the final score 55-37, and a fine victory for coach Joseph Rogers squad.

The Freshman team, minus the services of Ned Cloonan, their most dependable swimmer, was picked up by fine individual performances by Ron Cleaves and Paul Reynolds, as both men grabbed two first place finishes apiece. Cleaves easily won the 200 yard freestyle, and then came back to earn five more points in the enduring 500 yard freestyle. Paul Reynolds demonstrated his versatility by swimming to victory in both the 100 yard freestyle and the 200 yard breast stroke.

Charlie McAuliffe and Bill Davidson turned in outstanding performances and demonstrated that, although they might not have depth, the freshman team is not lacking in ablity. McAuliffe won the 200 yard individual and placed second in the 200 yard back stroke, and Davidson earned eight points for the team with a victory in the 200 yard Butterfly and a runner-up spot in the 200 yard breast stroke.

None of the freshman failed to earn at least one first place, and Terry Carney took the 50 yard freestyle and placed third in the 100 yard freestyle, to round out the individual scoring. In the 400 yard Freestyle Relay the Redmen picked up seven points with the team of Carney-Cleaves-McAuliffe-Reynolds to make the final score 51 - 37.

The Merman take a breather now and will soon begin to prepare for their next meet against Vermont on January 31. During the month of February the Varsity will hold four meets at the Boyden Natatorium and the freshman will swim three meets in the home pool. The better part of the schedule is still yet to come, and with a month to prepare for the remaining meets, the Redman teams should provide their fans with several more victories.

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

In its first away game of the year tonight, the UMass basketball team travels to Springfield for an 8 p.m. tilt with American International College, a small college powerhouse over the past two years and currently the owner of a 5-1 record. The game will be broadcasted on WMUA (91.1 fm).

After having played their first five games at the Cage, and having responded with three victories and two tough losses, the most recent of which was Tuesday night's 88-71 spirit-crusher to UConn, the Redmen must rise to the occasion against a talent-laden Yellow Jacket squad on the AIC home court, Butova Gymnasium.

AIC has earned four straight berths in the NCAA College Division regionals after posting records of 18-8, 19-6, 21-5 and 21-4 over the past four seasons. In '68 and again in '69, the Yellow Jackets copped the regionals title and advanced to the national tourney only to lose both times to the eventual winner, Kentucky Wesleyan.

Last year the loss to Kentucky came in the semi-finals and was a 83-82 overtime decision. In a consolation game that followed, the Aces nipped Ashland, 53-51, for third place in the tournament and a tremendous impetus with which to face their present schedule.

AIC has three experienced men returning from the '68-69 unit in the persons of Greg Hill, Bob Rutherford and Alan Bush, plus sophomores Mike White and George Kastrinakis, the former of which has the potential to become a bona fide college star.

Hill, a 6'4 senior forward is the most outstanding Yellow Jacket, having led the club in scoring and rebounding last season. Picked by the National Association of Basketball Coaches as an All-American, Hill boasted a 20.6 scoring average last winter that included a shooting percentage of 63. He pulled down rebounds at a 13-per-game clip. In AIC's most recent contest, a 90-73 conquest of Southern Connecticut, Hill came through with 21 points and 26 rebounds.

Rutherford and Bush are AIC's slick guards who should give UMass ball controllers veritable fits. Rutherford is listed in the Yellow Jacket brochure as "the most complete guard in the college's history." Co-captain along with Hill, the senior veteran owned a 16-point average last winter and directs the AIC offensive show.

Bush is a senior defensive whiz who stands at a mere 5'7 but who has the leaping ability to stuff the basketball. A sure-fisted ballhandler with lots of speed, Bush teams with Rutherford to form a superb backcourt tandem on both offense and defense. A third guard who sees a lot of action as Bush's spare is veteran Tom Doyle.

White is a 6'4 soph flash who compliments Hill at the other forward slot. He is considered to have unlimited potential and, as a frosh, tallied 71 points against the Springfield freshmen, a performance which included 55 points in the second half.

AIC ACES - RUTHERFORD, COACH CALLAHAN, HILL

At center for the Yellow Jackets will be George Kastrinakis, the second starting sophomore because of the unexpected loss of Al Carter, a seven-footer who put in a lot of playing time as a soph last year.

Although the just mentioned six players have been AIC regulars for the first six games, Ace's coach Bill Callahan has very recently indicated that he may start 2 taller quintet against the Redmen. Should that be the case, John Clendenin would play forward, pushing White to a guard spot and putting Bush and Doyle in reserve roles.

UMass coach Jack Leaman is concerned with AIC's offensive ability, but he is particularly wary of the Yellow Jacket defense. He feels that it is the ball-hawking ability of the guards, Rutherford and Bush, that sets the style of their attack.

Gannon Looms Tough at Gem City

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

UMass basketball players will have to cut their Christmas celebrating short this year, as they will be leaving December 26 for Erie, Pa. to be participants in the 3rd Annual Gem City Bowl. The Redmen will join Lehigh University, Catholic University, and the host school Gannon College in the tourney.

UMass meets Catholic in the first round, to be played Dec. 27, Gannon meeting Lehigh, with the championship and consolation games to be played Dec. 29.

Gannon has swept to victories in the two previous Gem City Tourneys, last year defeating Mt. St. Mary's in the championship game, 81-69. Gannon had previously routed St. Francis (NY) 106-63, while Mt. St. Mary's had surprised Manhattan 91-88.

On paper, probably not many have heard of the three foes for the Redmen. But, especially Lehigh and Gannon will be more than enough for UMass to handle.

This is meant as no slight to Catholic U. It's just that getting information about the Cardinals has been pretty difficult. They are coached by first year coach Bob Reese and are coming off a 10-15 record a year ago. The Catholic U. Athletic Director is former Maine basketball coach Brian McCall.

UMass coach Jack Leaman is concerned about his lack of knowledge of the Cardinals who he must face in a week. With this thought in mind, Leaman will travel to Buffalo this weekend to view Catholic's match with Canisius, and also Gannon's meeting with Niagara.

Lehigh is a young, improving unit that is recovering from a 7-17 mark a year ago, with the help of sophomores from what was the best freshman team in the school's history.

The Engineers are 2-3 thus far this season, defeating Bucknell and Washington & Lee, while being defeated by Army at the Cadets' torture chamber at West Point, being edged by Temple, the defending National Invitational Tourney winner by only three points, and losing to tough Colgate by 11.

The big gun for Lehigh is senior forward Bob Fortune, a 6'5 star that averaged almost 19 rebounds a game a year ago. The Engineers have a veteran backcourt in the persons of John Waters and Scott Benton.

Lehigh has played good competition this year and appear to have an improving team under fourth year coach Roy Heckman. But the Engineers will be meeting Gannon in the opening round and will be in for a rugged evening.

Gannon is presently the third ranked small-college team in the nation. Last year's Golden Knights were 24-6 and broke 10 school records. And that team has returned relatively intact, along with some talented sophomores.

The undefeated Knights, (5-0) who play Niagra this weekend are led by little All-American, 6'8 Glen Summors, who is averaging this year over 15 points and 17 rebounds. He has a lot of help up front in the persons of 6'6 Al Christman who is averaging 17 points, and 6'7 Ron Johnson, a 12 points scorer and garnering 11 rebounds a game. The backcourt is manned by Charlie Fisher, Bob Baker and Harry McLaughlin.

Gannon will be in front of their own fans, and will be aiming to maintain their quest for national small college honors.

Icemen Roll 9-2

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

UMass hockey could not have found a better opponent to break out of a slump against than Amherst College and that is what happened last night in frigid Orr Rink as the Redmen won 9-2 for their first won in four games. This Christmas gift evens UMass for the season at 3-3 while the hapless Lord Jeffs fall to 0-4.

The game was a laugher from the beginning as the Redmen outscored the Jeffs 4-1 in the first period. UMass extended their lead to 7-1 after two periods before outscoring Amherst 2-1 in the final stanza.

Amherst got first blood with Tom Brady's score at 2:45 of the first. Madore tied it up at 9:31 on a tip in from defenseman Brian Sullivan who had earlier taken a pass from Riley.

At 12:52, Edwards made it 2-1 on the power play, assists to McMann and Doug Powling. Madore was credited with what proved to be the winner at 18:49, again on the power play. Assists went to Sullivan and Whelden. It appeared from the stands however, that Whelden was the actual scorer banging in Madore's rebound.

Goalie Bruce Crawford was never really tested although he did make a couple of fine saves. At times he played like Ed Giacoman, coming way out of the net to direct errant passes. He had 14 saves while Jeff goalie Paul Koulouris had 41.

It is not fair to say whether or not the Redmen have actually improved certain aspects of their game which were previously lacking because Amherst did not provide a good test. The Redmen virtually owned Orr Rink last night.

The Little Redmen clobbered Yale frosh Wednesday 7-2 as Canadian import Pat Keenan continued his high scoring ways with 3 goals and 2 assists. In five games he has totaled 16 goals and 11 assists. Jean Bealiveau, watch out!

Fr. Cagers Face Rugged Aces

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN Staff Reporter

With a hope of evening their record at 3-3, the Little Redmen travel to Springfield tonight for a 3:00 contest with the freshmen from AIC. It will be the last contest of the semester for the frosh and could prove to be their toughest so far.

AIC comes into the game with a record of 4-1. They have proved themselves to be a high scoring unit which has scored up to 115 points in one game. Their wins have come over Leicester, Southern Connecticut, Central Conn., and Westfield State, a team which UMass will face later in the season.

Starting for the Little Yellow Jackets at center will be 6'7 Ron Hill from New York. Also opening up front will be Isaac Ayocx, a 6'3 native of Springfield and Al Alvarez, also of New York. Another sure starter should be 6'1 Jesse Spinks, another Springfield native.

UMass will have to play one of its better games of the season if it expects to stay with the high flying Aces. Any team which can score 115 points in a game can only be termed explosive. In their last outing, Wednesday night, Spinks came through with 21 points to lead his team past Southern Conn. 90-84.

As far as the Little Redmen are concerned, the season has not exactly been successful so far. Coach Broaca feels that the team has been plagued by two major problems. The first of these has been the inability of the frosh to put together consistent performances by all of the players in one game. It seems that whenever one player has a good night, the rest of the squad is only mediocre.

Another thing which has hurt the Little Redmen, according to Broaca, is their "weakness in the backcourt". The frosh have been unable to penetrate opposing defenses all season and, except for the first two contests, to mount any scoring threat from their guards.

However, despite the weaknesses, Broaca is "optimistic". He points to the "good play by the forwards" as one of the strong points of the team thus far, referring to the performances of both Chuck Olson and Scott Golden. Both have looked particularly impressive in the last two contests even though they gave away about three inches per man against Connecticut.

Broaca also sights the fact that the Little Redmen have improved game by game and he feels that this improvement should continue through the rest of the season.

The Great One Bombs

He had dreamed while laying starry-eyed and bushy-tailed in a convalescence home in Pelham that it would be a wonderful Christmas. He could bestow his gifts upon those he loved from his years with New England's largest.

He would have treated some of his favorites like Dandy Don, Dangerous Dan, Jumping Jackie, Happy Horace, Roughhouse Robby, Big Bad Bill, Victorious Vic, Wonderful Warren, and all of the other greats, with his usual array of puke.

But Metawampe suddenly was stifled. Spiro the Spaz censored the press. He was taken ill while basking in sunshine. His mighty pen was reduced to a rock Cornish Hen. And what was to be a shining moment was reduced to a rotten piece of Kielbasa.

Vacation Foes

After UMass' experience in the Gem City Bowl has been decided, the Redmen take time out for finals before hitting the road again for three intercession games against the University of Pennsylvania on Jan. 17 at 7:05 p.m., Fordham University on Jan. 21 at 8:00 p.m. and Iona University on Jan. 24 at 8:00 p.m.

The first of these three opponents, Pennsylvania, is currently undefeated with a 5-0 mark. Recently the Quakers beat Princeton by 20 points and will participate in the ECAC Christmas Tournament before hosting the Redmen.

Fordham and Iona, two teams which UMass defeated at home last year, will be waiting to ambush the Redmen in New York City. Fordham owns a 3-2 record, having recently lost to powerful Columbia by one point. It has seven games ahead before taking on UMass. Iona, 4-2, finds itself in seven tilts before facing the Redmen.

Asst. Coach Delaney Dies

Jack Delaney, Assistant Football Coach at UMass for nine years, died Christmas day at Wesson Memorial Hospital in Springfield following a massive cerebral hemorrage three days earlier. Delaney was 42 years old.

The popular top assistant to head coach Vic Fusia, graduated from the University of Cincinnati, in 1953, where he was a backfield standout under noted coach Sid Gillman. He also served at his alma mater as a freshman football coach for two years, and five years as offensive backfield coach, before coming to UMass in 1961.

Delaney was a native of Columbus, Ohio, where he was buried. Coach Delaney attended Columbus Acquinas High School, and then served a 18 month tour of duty in the Army before attending Cincinnati.

A John J. Delaney Memorial Fund has been created and is being handled by the First National Bank of Amherst. The fund will be used toward the education of the Delaney children.

Co-ed Living

By RICHARD C. HANSON

UMass, that great mass of red tape, cold winds and newly constructed mud, has spawned a unique living unit, the CO-ED dorm. More accurately, the residents of Greenough have struck out in an attempt at meaningful university community. They have worked hard. The fruits of their labor, although some will caution against hasty judgement, have been realized.

The "moving in" atmosphere of Greenough is intoxicating. Having been nurtured in the true spirit of an all-male dorm atmosphere, the first reaction of this reporter was one of jealousy. For all the cynicism one can mount against the CO-ED dorm idea, it has, at least initially, proved a success. From the dorm dinner Saturday evening to the carrying of luggage all day Sunday, "it was", as John Tierny, Head of Residence, said "something special."

Most of the activity in the dorm centered around the third floor, the girls' floor, with a constant commotion in the foyer. The trappings of a woman's presence chocked the third floor corridor; bundles and boxes served to make one wonder about the size the dent in traditional living the women could make just with their junk.

It takes a little while to adjust to the whole scheme of things. It seemed strange to hear a male voice over the intercom calling for "Janice"; then hearing a female voice asking for assistance with a coke machine. The atmosphere seemed easy. There were boys helping girls paint rooms. People were friendly. The dorm was friendly.

Fathers and mothers delivering their daughters into the grips of the CO-ED dorm, seemed concerned, mostly about small things. Like a mother saying goodbye to a son going to boot camp, asking if he had his toothbrush. The parents were parents. A father finding that his daughter was playing pool, "with the guys", threw his hands in the air and commented, "Maybe I'll take her out now." But he was resigned to the role of spectator. The CO-ED dorm was a reality. He could only accept it. He seemed to be smiling inside.

In spite of the reporters running around the dorm, there is actually no news. Save the fact that it finally happened. This reporter got the idea that what would seem to be news, ("FIRST COED DORM OPENS AT UMASS") was only a natural result of people facing a barren sterile life at the University. CO-ED is no cure all. It seems to have changed the outlook of some forty girls and seventy guys. It has changed Greenough into "something special."

REGISTRATION DAY 1970

"There is No One to Replace the Personable, Lively, Vibrant Guy"

by PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

The last time this writer saw Jack Delaney was in a muddy, steaming locker room in Chestnut Hill. It was bitterly cold outside, as only a late November afternoon in New England can be. The heat of the locker room was welcome relief. There was heat but no warmth.

UMass had just lost a football game to Boston College and all you could feel was the emptiness of losing athletes. And, by the doorway, Jack Delaney was in tears.

Jack Delaney cared for his athletes. He felt their joy when winning, felt their anguish in defeat. There was nothing phony about Coach Delaney. Those tears were real ones. In an emotional game, he was an emotional man.

The death of this man is so hard to understand. He was personable and friendly to everyone he came in contact with, whether it was a 250 pound tackle he was recruiting, his star quarterback, or a bothersome student newspaper reporter.

His football expertise will go unquestioned. He joined Vic Fusia at UMass, and together they built a mediocre football program into a New England grid power. They dominated the Yankee Conference, went to a bowl game, produced professional stars.

But more than that, Jack Delaney was a teacher, and a friend. I remember talking to a home town acquaintance who had been recruited by Delaney for UMass football. The friend decided on another school, but he still remembers Delaney. "He never tried to tell me anything but the truth. He always leveled with me, always told me what I could gain from UMass, not what the football program could gain from me. And when I told him I was going elsewhere, he still remained the same guy, wishing me luck, hoping I'd get the education I wanted. He was a different sort of man from the others that recruited me."

It's impossible to talk about the loss. From the strictly football angle, UMass has lost its top assistant coach and top recruiter during the main part of the recruiting period. But that is sort of unimportant. There are other football men around.

But there is no one to replace the personable, lively, vibrant guy, that wasn't too proud to cry, and wasn't too busy for anyone.

A QUARTER TO GO - Anchor man Al Mangan takes the baton from Dave Evans for the last quarter of the mile relay at Boston's K of C Meet January 10th. UMass finished third. THE NEWS IN BRIEF

OWERRI, Nigeria (AP) - The Biafran war has been over for more than a week now and no one really knows how many people died of starvation or how many are dying now.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's postal corporation plan has won postal union backing - contingent on an ironclad pay-raise agreement in return. This could clear the way for congressional approval this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's persistent prodding of the House Judiciary Committee on act on crime legislation is about to get results - but not the kind he had in mind.

CHICAGO (AP) - Two young deaf mutes who could not hear the cries of warning died of smoke inhalation Sunday in a fire at the Conrad Hilton Hotel. Eighteen other persons were reported injured.

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) - After a history of separate schools for black and white children Rapides Parish in central Louisiana - like many Southern communities - has been ordered to desegregate Feb. 1.

U.S. Spending Over $Billion In Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - The exact amount of money the United States has put into Thailand has not been disclosed by either government, but available statistics show Thai benefits have totaled about $1.6 billion since 1962.

Of this, $759 million went directly into the Thai economy. Much of this built six air bases that the U.S. Air Force has used to cover North Vietnam and Laos, as well as an air base at Khonkhaen that was never activated. An airfield for the Thai air force academy, communications networks and roads were also constructed with it.

The total also includes pay for 44,000 Thais employed by the U.S. military, spending by American servicemen stationed here, and $20 million a year spent by GI's on leave from Vietnam.

This figure does not include the U.S. military's direct imports of equipment for its own use, such as aircraft, vehicles, weapons and ammunition. Neither does it include the value of American-built equipment used by American contractors, nor their profits.

Cancerous Chickens May Become Legal

WASHINGTON (AP) - A government panel of scientists has recommended that chickens bearing cancer virus be allowed on the market as long as the birds don't look too repugnant.

The basis for the recommended change in inspection standards, according to Agriculture Department officials, is scientific evidence disputing any link between cancer virus in chickens and disease in humans.

Federal chicken inspectors presently condemn all of any bird carcass showing leasions or tumors, which have traditionally been accepted as a visual sign of presence of avian leukosis or Marek's disease viruses.

The two diseases, lumped together as leukosis in department records, are the largest single cause for rejection of frying chickens.

Of the 176 million fryers slaughtered under federal inspection in November 1969, inspectors condemned 2 million for leukosis.

The disease has a much smaller effect on older chickens and turkeys.

Specialists say virtually all chickens harbor the viruses in varying degrees in their bodies. When the virus gets out of control, the chicken's body fights back, and lesions and tumors develop although the disease usually passes.

But Agriculture specialists say tests have shown that the presence of tumors, or their numbers, bear no relation to the amount of virus in the birds' system.

The finding reported by a panel of eight veterinarians and animal-disease specialists would not stop the condemnation of birds whose internal organs shows active signs of the disease.

But chickens showing only signs of the virus which causes the disease would be declared no threat to human health. The panel recommended that condemnation of such birds be "only on an aesthetic basis," according to Richard E. Lyng, assistant secretary for marketing and consumer services at the Agriculture Department.

Thus, officials said, if tumors are detected on the wing of a bird, the wing could be cut off and used in a product like hot dogs and the rest of the bird sold as cut-up chicken - all without posing a threat to human health.

The recommendation is now under consideration by the surgeon general's office, which is expected to report back to the Agriculture Department within a week. Any change in inspection standards would be up to Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin.

Zodiac Strikes Again In San Francisco Murder

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A cab driver was found shot and critically wounded in the posh Pacific Heights area early Sunday. Police said they were investigating the possibility his assailant was the mysterious killer who calls himself Zodiac.

The cab, with its lights on and motor running, was parked just 10 blocks from where cab driver Paul Stine, 29, was shot to death last Oct. 11.

At that time Zodiac, in a letter to a local newspaper, enclosed a torn scrap from Stine's bloody shirt, and took credit for the killing. Zodiac has been linked by police to a total of five Bay Area murders.

In a recent letter to attorney Melvin Belli, Zodiac claimed eight murders and said he may take "my ninth and possibly tenth victim" unless he receives help soon.

The letter was postmarked in San Francisco Dec. 20, the anniversary of his first attack in a Vallejo lovers lane, where two teen-agers were fatally shot. It contained another swatch of cloth from Stine's bloody shirt.

Homicide Inspector William Armstrong said his office is investigating a link between the Jarman shooting and other Zodiac attacks "because of the area where it happened and the circumstances."

New Styles

Synthesis of the Sexes

PARIS (AP) - Dressmaker Jacques Esterel claims "virility is not a question of clothes," so this year he showed the same styles for men and women.

He calls his spring-summer collection "synthesis," a melding of the sexes. If they're the same size, they can trade wardrobes.

A lone wolf of the Paris fashion world, Esterel says he is searching for "a new equilibrium, free from false distinctions of dress."

Esterel uses jersey as the most supple medium, alone or with garbadine, poplin, crepe georgette and embroidered leather. The fabrics are in rich bordeaux, bronze and beige shades, or prints.

"Telescope" sleeves stop short on the arm to show longer printed cuffs. "Kangaroo" pockets form tubular pouches.

Handbags - for the women only - go with the longer length. They hang from shoulder to hem on oversized straps or are hooked to a belt by three suspenders.

Priesthood Dropoff Causes New Personal Initiative

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - Faced with a serious dropoff in candidates for the priesthood, Catholic theological seminaries are overhauling training methods to replace rote conformity with personal initiative.

"The priesthood is no longer a status symbol," says Rev. Lohis Puta, a member of the French resistance against the Nazi occupiers of France during World War II.

"Today's priest must be involved - he must have a specialty. He has to be a good pastoral man, a good financier or a good writer, for example. And, above all, he must be able to relate to people. The priesthood is not an ivory tower. It will no longer protect men who can't fit these criteria."

Typical of other major seminaries, Moreau, which Putz heads has instituted academic and personal training programs which stress maturity for asplrants to the priesthood.

To this end, smaller, so-called minor seminaries, which formerly took in candidates as they entered high school, are being eliminated. The emphasis now is on attracting college graduates who will receive a masters degree in theology on completion of four years of seminary study.

Campus News Roundup Across the Nation

At Western Maryland College, President Ensor refused to allow the student newspaper, the GOLD BUG to print advertisements of businesses which sell alcoholic beverages. From 1963 through 1967, the GOLD BUG had run such ads with no administrative qualms. The paper figures the president's sudden decision set them back about $50 an issue.

James Hammond, Fitchburg State College president (Salem, Mass.) shut down the campus newspaper by refusing to sign a check to cover printing costs of an issue of THE CYCLE if an article written by Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver was to be printed in that issue.

As a result, editors of five Massachusetts State College papers got together and decided to split the cost of printing one issue of the CYCLE so the Cleaver article would be run. They also decided to run the article in their respective campus newspapers.

Two editors of the Oregon State University BAROMETER resigned when the student senate resolved to fully investigate the paper. The editors protested that this infringed on their right to freedom of the press.

In Tempe, Arizona, the editor of the Arizona State University state press was fired by the board of student publications for "insubordination" in a dispute with two faculty board members who censored the paper. Five of the senior editors resigned in protest of the action taken by a board composed of five faculty members and three students.

The students claim the STATE PRESS should fill the needs of the student body which pays for the paper through activity fees. The faculty claims the newspaper should be a workshop experience for journalism majors.

At the Colorado School of Mines, in Golden, President Orlo Childs threatened to remove the editor of the school's newspaper, the OREDIGGER for printing what he regarded as obscenities in the paper.

The publications board questioned his authority to remove the editor and quickly assured Childs that the OREDIGGER was "outstanding, not obscene."

THE DIAMONDBACK, University of Maryland, College Park. The on-going controversy over ARGUS magazine's now famous burning American flag cover appears to be a classic struggle between constitutional rights and state laws.

Bob Korn, ARGUS editor, claims the University and certain state officials have violated his right to freedom of the press by censoring the cover before it was actually printed.

University officials refused to allow a printer to publish the material when they received an opinion from Francis B. Burch, state attorney general, saying the cover would violate a law against desecration of the flag.

A previous printer, Guthrie Lithograph, had refused to handle the cover when the firm's lawyers rendered the same opinion.

Korn claims that, under University policy and the federal constitution, his rights were violated.

The Faculty Senate Adjunct Committee on Student Communications and Publications has a stated policy that school officials will in no way exercise prior censorship of material in student publications.

By accepting the material back from Guthrie Lithograph and reviewing it themselves, as well as having the attorney general's office review it, Korn believes this policy was thrown out the window.

However, violation of a local policy takes second place in Korn's mind. He is more disturbed by what he considers a disregard for rights granted under the first amendment.

Korn is asking several lawyers to check into the possibility of initiating action in the federal courts over the controversy and expects to have his answer soon.

University officials do not see eye to eye with Korn on the policy violation. Walter B. Waetjen, vice president for administrative affairs, has said the University cannot use state funds in violation of a state law.

This opinion was upheld by a deputy attorney general, Robert F. Sweeney, who said he could "think of nothing more improper."

Both disregard Korn's contention that he should be allowed, as editor of a magazine, to directly challenge the state law he allegedly violated if it is unconstitutional.

Neither Vaetjen nor members of the attorney general's staff have much, if anything, to say about the freedom of press question.

The federal courts may be anxious to grapple with the problem, however. In recent years, with campus media becoming increasingly outspoken and critical, more and more attempts have been made by administrators to use censorship to help correct a decreasing public image.

Few, if any, precedents exist to guide editors and school officials in how much freedom of the press should be permitted in an institutional setting.

The ARGUS case may establish that precedent.

REPORTER, Rochester Institute of Technology, Rochester, N.Y. The case of a former college magazine editor and four co-defendants, involving the alleged desecration of the American flag, will be heard in Monroe County Court later this month.

The case stems from the publication of an anti-war satire in REPORTER, the weekly newsmagazine at Rochester Institute of Technology. The feature included pictures of a female (Wonder Woman), draped in a bunting that resembled an American flag. Three RIT students pressed charges against the editor, photographer, writer and the two models. A male (GI Joe) was the second model.

The idea for the satire was originated by Robert Keough, a decorated Vietnam veteran, then an RIT photography instructor. He did the photography and suggested the feature to Robert Kiger, an Air Force veteran and former editor of the magazine. Neil Shapiro, formerly editor-at-large of the publication, wrote the accompanying text. Richard Shaeffer (GI Joe) and Elizabeth Carter (Wonder Woman) were the models.

The five were indicted last June, after having the case transferred from the Nenrietta Town Court to the Monroe County Court. Defense attorney Julius Michaels had withdrawn the not guilty pleas for the defendants and entered a demurrer, a legal objection that questions the legality of the law and its application to the case. The demurrer was refuted by the Court in December.

Michaels feels that the case is one of selective prosecution. He claims that freedom of the press and the definition of what constitutes an American flag is at stake.

Following the charges, the majority of the staff resigned in protest of censorship, charging that the Institute was not supporting the students' case. The publication has been rebuilt and continues to publish every week. Student feeling ran high in favor of the charged and the student senate voted backing, even though it decided against posting bail.

Michaels has been gathering material for the defense, with support coming from interested citizens, including the picture of a Rochester city trash can, painted to resemble an American flag.

THE DIAMONDBACK, University of Maryland, College Park, (1-25-69) Controversy over an attempt to present a concert by the cast of "Hair" was reborn yesterday when almost 200 faculty members petitioned University President Wilson H. Elkins for a statement on censorship policy.

In a petition signed by 193 faculty members from almost every academic field, the professors told Elkins they were disturbed by several statements made by two University administrators in denying the moratorium committee use of Cole fieldhouse for the concert.

Both Jim Kehow, athletic director, and George O. Weber, physical plant director, vetoed the committee's request for use of the fieldhouse on the evening of Nov. 14.

The faculty petitioners said in their document, which was dated yesterday, that they are concerned over Kohoe's referring to "Hair" as "immoral" and over two references to the morality question by Weber.

In a letter to Ralph R. Swinford, student activities director, Weber said, in part, "There should be, in my opinion, some guaranty that there would be no nude actors."

Weber, although he claimed the reason for not granting the permit was a lack of clarification on "many items," also suggested the University should have an office of review "to protect human decency."

The petitioners, with Edgar F. Beall, physics professor, acting as spokesman, said in the petition, "We believe it to be essential to the integrity of an academic institution that the personal tastes of individual members of its staff not interfere with freedom of expression."

The faculty members asked Elkins for a "clarification of the University policy concerning who

Self-limited hours for all women residents was made necessary by the transformation of trailers into coed living units, Associated Women Students President Gayle Capozzalo indicated last night. (9-29-69).

Curfew enforcement there was difficult because the key to a coed's room was also the key to the outside. About 80 per cent of the women residents in the trailers were freshmen.

The housing office wanted to eliminate curfews for women living in the trailers on an experimental basis, said Miss Capozzalo who argued that the proposal would be unfair to coeds in other housing areas.

The final decision to eliminate curfews for all women after a recent survey taken by AWS in which 933 freshmen responded "yes" to the question: "Are you in favor of eliminating freshmen curfews as soon as possible?" One hundred responded negatively.

In August, J. Winston Martin, vice president for student affairs, approved such a proposal. But the unexpected placement of women in the mobile units, hastened the move.

Two years ago, all women were required to sign in at times ranging from 10:30 p.m. for freshmen to midnight for seniors. The weekend curfew for all was 1:30 a.m.

Violations resulted in AWS judicial action including further restrictions on curfews or prohibitions against going out on weekends.

But AWS pressure led to abolition of curfews for seniors in January, 1968; for juniors in September, 1968, and for sophomores in January, 1969.

THE DAILY REVEILLE, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge. (9-23-69) "The new hours are great," and grace minutes "are the fairest thing the dean of women ever did."

These were typical comments of women students questioned recently concerning later closing hours that have been in effect for a week.

Hours for freshmen women were changed from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 12 to 12:45 a.m. Friday. Saturday remained 12:45 a.m. and Sunday remained 11 p.m. Freshman women are now allowed 10 midnight lates, and five 1:30 a.m. lates.

For upperclass women the new hours are 12 midnight Sunday thru Thursday and 1:30 a.m. Friday and Saturday. The late system for upperclass coeds has been abolished.

Grace minutes, a new addition to women's regulations this year, allows dormitory residents 15 minutes before regular penalties are incurred. Grace minutes do not apply to late permissions.

THE TRAILBLAZER, Vincennes University, Vincennes, Indiana. (9-18-69) A number of VU women students were asked their opinion by the TRAILBLAZER on women's hours. Most of them agreed that hours should be extended on weekdays and on weekends. Only a few found the hours satisfactory.

Present hours are 10:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday, and 11 p.m. on Sundays.

COLLEGE HEIGHTS HERALD, Western Ky. U., Bowling Green. (11-15-69) Several changes in dorm rules and regulations have gone into effect this semester.

Women who have completed two or more semesters of college work on a full-time basis or who are over 21 have 12 p.m. privileges Sunday through Thursday.

Freshmen have 11 p.m. privileges Monday through Thursday and 12 p.m. privileges on Sunday.

All women have 2 a.m. privileges on Friday and Saturday. Previously, women had to sign in at 1 a.m. on these days.

The change came about through the efforts of the Women's Residence Hall Association which conducted a survey of women's dorms last semester and found that an extension of hours was desired.

The results were presented to the office of student affairs and adopted.

Residence hall check out cards have been modified. Women are no longer required to give their destination when they sign out for the evening or weekend.

A blanket permission card has been introduced. This card gives written authorization by parents that gives consent throughout the year for their daughter to be away from the hall overnight on Friday or Saturday and make out-of-town trips without further clearance from them.

DAILY BEACON, University of Tennessee, Knoxville. (9-25-69). An experimental open hours program for selected UT women which began here spring quarter has become permanent this fall.

The program allows 21-year old coeds and others with parental permission who have completed 83 hours of academic credit to make individual decisions concerning curfew hours.

Eligible coeds who decide to remain out of the residence halls after closing hours are required to declare this intention in advance (sometime before closing hours), give the approximate time of return and state where they are going.

A detailed evaluation conducted by the Dean of Women's office and the AWS during spring and summer quarters showed that 67 per cent of the coeds who participated in the experiment have maintained or improved their academic averages.

The study also found that relatively few eligible coeds used the privilege and that discipline problems were minor. Of some 1,200 women who participated, an average of 10 to 14 used the privilege on week nights and 15 to 20 on the week-ends.

THE ORACLE, University of S. Florida, Tampa (10-24-69) A new change in women's hours will be effective this quarter, according to Raymond C. King, director of Housing and Food Services.

Women resident students will be able to come in and leave the dorms at any hour of the day or night, after leaving a courtesy card in the lobby rack.

"Dorm end doors will still be locked at 7 p.m. as usual," King said, "but lobby doors will be opened by clerks after midnight, Sunday through Thursday, and after 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday."

King added that men will still be asked to leave the lobby at 11 p.m. as requested by the women residents and that women will continue to leave the courtesy cards when leaving the dorms.

The purpose of the courtesy cards is to have a contact place in case an emergency arises. No changes are to be made in male visitation procedures at the women's dorms. The hours for visitation will still end at midnight Sunday through Thursday and at 1 a.m. Friday and 2 a.m. Saturday.

In order to gain admittance to the dorm after the lobby doors have been secured, women must present ID cards. Women who have not signed out and return after dorm closing, must present ID cards and must fill out a standards board referral slip.

THE CHASE, Eastern New Mexico University, Portales. (9-12-69) "An experiment in living" might be the best description of the self-regulatory dormitory hours for women.

The new regulations will allow a coed to stay out after the normal dorm closing, provided she meets the following criteria:

1. She has completed 29 semester hours of college work or is 21 years of age.
2. She has a cumulative GPA of 2.0 or better.
3. She is in good standing both socially and academically.
4. If under 21, she must have written parental consent. If over 21, consent is requested.

Girls are requested to sign in at the dormitory within 12 hours after signing out. Students who are not participating will maintain the former dorm hours: weeknights 10 p.m. for freshmen and 11 p.m. for upperclassmen, Friday and Saturday, 11 p.m. Sunday midnight.

Participating coeds will receive color-coed identification cards to allow them free access to the dormitories.

Night hostesses will be employed to let girls into dorms after closing hours. These hostesses will be junior and senior girls who meet requirements similar to those of resident assistants.

Vietnam Pullout to Include Nine-Months Leathernecks

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) - U.S. Marine sources said Sunday most Leathernecks with nine months or more of service in Vietnam will be included in the coming withdrawal of 12,900 members of the corps from Vietnam.

This means men with that much time accumulated on their present tours will be transferred into Marine units slated for the pullout to be completed by April 15.

Members of the units being pulled out with less than nine months service in Vietnam will be shifted to other units not scheduled for withdrawal. This practice has been followed in all U.S. troop pullouts that began last July.

But the nine-month cutoff limit represents a change from the 11-month cutoff figure used when the first major Marine unit, the 3rd Marine Division, was withdrawn from the war zone last summer and fall.

The reduction reflected the general cutback in strength of the Marine Corps in Vietnam - currently at 54,200 men.

The 12,900 to be withdrawn under President Nixon's phase 3 redeployment will be about 25 per cent of the total.

Some Marines with nine months or more of service will stay behind in the Phase 3 withdrawal. These, the sources said, will be persons with critical skills - mainly in aviation.

Also excluded will be Marines who recently have extended their regular one-year Vietnam tours by six months.

This unit is a regimental landing team of about 8,000 men.

Other leatherneck units to be withdrawn by April 15 are to be announced soon by U.S. command headquarters in Saigon.

The other major units marked for the 50,000 - man withdrawal are the 1st Infantry Division and the 3rd Brigade of the 4th Infantry Division.

Hijacked Plane Arrives

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao (AP) - A Netherlands Antilles airliner with 32 persons aboard arrived in Curacao at midnight after being commandeered to Cuba by a young hijacker, armed with a pistol and grenade and accompanied by his family.

David Taber, skipper of the ALM line plane, told newsmen the hijacker, said to be a Cuban, threw a hammerlock on stewardess Rose Marie Marchena, pointed the pistol at her head and ordered the plane to Havana.

The hijack was staged soon after the plane had left Santo Domingo in the Dominican Republic en route to this island in the Netherland Antilles.

GM Resumes Production

DETROIT (AP) - Newly styled Chevrolet Camaros are rolling off General Motors assembly lines some 3-1/2 months later than most of the new season's automotive models.

General Motors also delayed introduction of the Pontiac Firebird, which has a similar body style as the Camaro.

GM did not announce the reason for the delays, but informed industry sources pointed to sagging sales and said GM was simply stuck with an abundance of body parts that would have to be scrapped once the new styling was put into production.

Police Chief Was Driving Stolen Carr

GEORGETOWN, Mass. (AP) - Police Chief James T. Niland, who helped investigate a stolen car ring specializing in Cadillacs, has learned that he has been driving a stolen Cadillac since November.

He bought the car from a dealer who took it in trade in from a woman last year. A routine theft check when the car was purchased came back negative.

Last week a policeman in Danvers stopped Niland for driving with a damaged headlight. Niland produced his license and registration but did not further identify himself.

A routine check showed the 1966 model car Niland was driving was stolen in Brookline three years ago, he said Sunday.

The first check on the car was negative because of a clerical error, Niland said.

"The insurance company owns the car and the dealer will give me another one," Niland said, "so I'm not out anything - except it is a little embarrassing."

Georgetown is a rural community about 30 miles north of Boston.

The Mini-And-Maxi Era

Who Needs Them?

ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON -- The American railroads may be behind the times when it comes to serving passengers, but as far as their public relations are concerned, they are literally in the Space Age.

Some months ago, the American railroads hired Wally Schirra, the astronaut, to do their radio and television commercials for them. Schirra, in his sincere voice, tells us what a great job the American railroads are doing for each and every one of us and always ends his commercials with the same statement: "The American railroads -- who needs them? -- you do."

I'm quite sure Schirra wouldn't make a commercial unless he believed in the product, so the only thing we can assume is that he hasn't taken a ride recently on a passenger train.

I would like to imagine what would happen if one of our astronauts took a ride from Stamford to New York during the morning rush hours.

"This is Penn-Central Control. We are 87 minutes late into takeoff and holding. How do you feel, Wally?"

"I'm freezing my tail off. Where's the train?"

Twenty minutes later: "Hello, Penn-Central. I am now in the cabin of the train and holding."

"Wally, our engineers advise us that the lack of heat will not hurt the train, so we're proceeding with all systems go. 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1- BLAST OFF!"

Static, noise, explosions, static.

"Wally, where are you? Give your exact position."

Twenty minutes later, Penn-Central Control: "Wally, we're going to try it again. Here we go 4-3-2-1 BLASTOFF!"

"Hello, Penn-Central Control. We're moving, we're moving! It's beautiful."

"What do you see, Wally?"

"Nothing, the windows are all fogged. But what a feeling. It's the most wonderful feeling in the world to be on a train and actually moving."

"Hello, Wally. We're going to go through Larchmong in the next hour or so. We want you to drink some water."

"Penn-Central, there is no water on the train."

"Wally, the doctors advise us if you stay on schedule you may not need any water. But don't use up much energy. Can you see Larchmont yet?"

"I think so. There seem to be frozen carcasses of passengers piled all over the station."

"That's Larchmont. Get some photographs so our people can study them."

For the next 40 minutes Penn-Central Control lost contact with the train and, when they raised it again, asked, "Wally where are you now?"

"Somewhere in Harlem on a siding. Can you give me an estimated touchdown time at Grand Central?"

"Our computers indicate you should be in the terminal no later than 12:15 p.m. Do you know what you're going to say when you put your foot down on the platform at Grand Central?"

"I'm going to say 'The American railroads - who needs them? - you do.' "

Amherst Dean Reports Admissions, Defends Test Scores as Criteria

Coeducation among neighboring colleges could have an effect on the number of students who apply to Amherst, according to a report on admissions recently issued by Eugene S. Wilson, the College's Dean of Admission. Amherst's enrollment is 1,200 males, and this year, for the first time, 23 girls from Smith and Mount Holyoke have enrolled on an experimental basis.

Wilson found that applications for Early Decision at the College were down 10 percent over last year, but he could not say that this represented any new trend because Amherst's regular applicant group stood at about the same number as it did at this time a year ago.

In 1969, Amherst received more applications than ever before, and Dean Wilson believes that "last year's statistics on admission indicate a possibility that a college for men may have a place in the future, especially one so near Smith and Mount Holyoke." Last spring 292 Amherst students took courses at neighboring institutions, including U-Mass.

In another part of his report, the Dean defended the use of marks and test scores for selecting students. Test scores, such as College Board scores, have been under fire recently at many institutions. The attackers claim that these are faulty measures of intellectual ability, especially for minority groups.

The Admission Department has also recommended that students who have won advanced placement in certain subjects be granted credit toward a degree and credit for fulfilling the distribution requirements at Amherst. Many colleges instituted this policy some time ago, but according to Dean Wilson, "in the past there has been a fear that students who took advantage of this opportunity would shorten their stay at Amherst." He has suggested that a committee be empowered to decide each case on its own merits

A Free Summer in Europe By ASIS Scholarship Fund

A free summer in Europe - except, of course, for transportation - is being offered to American students by the American Student Information Service. This unusual innovation is made possible by the new ASIS scholarship fund which this summer at least, will pay for a student's placement in a paying job in Europe, testing, registration and enrollment in a language laboratory in Europe, full health and accident insurance, orientation tours including hotel accommodations and meals, language records course and many other services necessary for a summer in Europe including working papers and permits.

Students only register with and join ASIS which is open to all students. However, interested students should write immediately requesting the new Handbook containing registration forms, photos of American students in Europe, maps, charts, European train schedules and prices, clothing lists and student discount card application. Each inquiry must include $2.00 to cover the cost of overseas handling and airmail postage and be addressed to Dept. IV, ASIS, 22 Ave. de la Liberte, Luxembourg City, Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

Poetry is Alive and Well

Two books of poetry by Donald Junkins, assistant professor of English at UMass were published last week.

"The Graves of Scotland Parish," published by The Heron Press, Boston, 1969, contains a group of ancestral poems previously published in "The Massachusetts Review" as a special poetry signature, and which won the Jennie Tane Award for Poetry for 1968. One of the poems, "The Inheritance," also won a National Endowment of the Arts Award and is reprinted in "American Anthology/2," Random House, New York, 1969. Many of the poems in the collection are set in New England in such places as York, Maine and Amherst, Massachusetts, and range in scope from poems about pheasant hunting and bluefishing, to poems about distance and separation. Sometimes reminiscent or historical, sometimes current or biographical, the poems concentrate on the narrative line and the metaphor of action.

"Walden, 100 Years After Thoreau," published by Yorick Books, Boston, 1969, contains a foreword by Robert Francis, "Thoreau Angry and Unangry," and woodcuts by Gillian Tyler. Of his poem, Mr. Junkins says: "For two years in the early sixties I lived close by the Assabet River in West Concord, and spent many hours by its banks and the banks and woods of Walden. During the second year, as the seasons changed, I began the poem. What began at Walden itself, was later finished in California."

X. J. Kennedy has said of the poem, "Surely 'Walden, 100 Years After Thoreau' is a sequence that belongs in any good contemporary anthology." In the foreword, Francis writes: "Like Thoreau, Junkins has a sharp eye. His poem is all significant detail, whether observation or metaphor . . . Junkins not only sees sharply, he writes sharply, to an extent that Thoreau never achieved in his poetry. Sharpness in poetry was not in the air a hundred years ago as it is today."

Donald Junkins' earlier volume of poems, "The Sunfish and The Partridge,' " Pym-Randall, Cambridge, 1965, was named by The National Observer as one of 12 books chosen as "the season's best." He has also published poems in The New Yorker, Poetry (Chicago), The Sewanee Review, The Minnesota Review, Choice and many other magazines. An alumnus of UMass who was born in Saugus, he lives in Sunderland with his wife and three children.

The City of Fort Lauderdale Wishes to Welcome You But

The City of Fort Lauderdale wishes to clarify its policies regarding visiting collegians during the annual spring vacation period.

In order that neither you nor the City incur any unpleasantness, the following suggestions and policies have been instituted and will be adhered to unequivocally.

1. Do not come to Fort Lauderdale unless you definitely have a confirmed housing reservation. Our policies and ordinances prohibit sleeping in cars and/or sleeping in the open. Campers or trailers are not permitted to park on the beach. If this type vehicle is to be used as living quarters it must be parked in a trailer park specifically licensed for this purpose.

2. All the laws that govern the conduct of the individual will be enforced. A person must be 21 years of age in order to purchase or consume alcohol. Persons guilty of intoxication, (it should be noted that drinking in the open is not permitted) narcotics, use of false identification, or any other form of disorderly conduct and any other unlawful act will be arrested and prosecuted. Violations of the traffic code will result in apprehension and prosecution of the offender.

3. Parents and school officials of any and all students arrested during this period will be officially notified.

Students should be aware of the fact that persons who are arrested and convicted on any charge will have established a permanent, and sometimes criminal record against themselves which could have a detrimental influence later in life.

It is the feeling of the City Commission, this office and all of the City departments involved that if your conduct while in Fort Lauderdale follows your personal guidelines while on campus, your vacation will indeed be a pleasant and memorable experience.

See You in Toronto

A Little Tax Information From You're Friendly Internal Revenue Service

Most major state and local taxes can be deducted on Federal income tax returns if you itemize your deductions, but some of the miscellaneous taxes cannot be, William E. Williams, District Director of Internal Revenue, said today.

The deductible taxes are real estate and personal property taxes, state and local income taxes, state and local gasoline taxes, and general sales taxes.

The taxes that are not deductible include liquor and cigarette taxes, most auto license fees, water service charges, hunting and fishing licenses, and dog licenses. Mr. Williams said Federal taxes are also not deductible on individual income tax returns.

Right-A-Wrong is a non-profit organization composed of thinking adults working within established legal procedures to effect the legalization of marijuana. Right-A-Wrong believes that adults should have the freedom to choose or reject marijuana.

The controversy around marijuana is complicated by many aspects of life other than actual medical knowledge on the composition and effects of the drug. Prominent political, religious, and social leaders have taken rigid positions based on their own individual attitudes with little, or no, attention paid to the wealth of available information. In the same way, professionals have used their status as experts in whatever field to advise society on its moral, ethical, and philosophical attitudes towards marijuana.

Society is moving toward greater individual freedom in regard to marijuana use. Marijuana does not involve any actual or potential dangers. It is not addictive, as is heroin. It has no after-effects, as do alcoholic beverages.

Right-A-Wrong is working to inform the general public. We are touring the southern United States with an educational caravan, addressing congressional committees in Washington, D.C., meeting with state legislatures, and producing educational brochures for distribution to P.T.A. groups, Lions, Rotary, and Kiwanis Clubs.

On Monday, February 2, 1970, representatives of Right-A-Wrong will address the Rules Committee of the New York State Legislature in Albany, at 2 o'clock p.m.

RAW, which is working entirely within established legal procedures to effect the legalization of marijuana will address the Committee on the legal, medical, social, and economic aspects of marijuana use and the effect legalization will have on the general public. Of particular emphasis will be the enormous amount of tax revenue that legal sale of marijuana will net for the government.

Among the speakers will be Roger Lowenstein of the New Jersey Public Defenders Office, the Reverend William Glenesk of Spencer memorial Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn, New York, Peter Lewine, National Legal Director for RAW, and RAW Chairman, Edward Arrow.

The Rules Committee meeting will be open to the public and all interested citizens are urged to attend.

Police Arrest Governor's Son On Narcotics

Police who stopped his sports car in South Philadelphia after it was spotted circling a corner of some time said they found one marijuana cigarette and a vial containing 15 grams of the drug.

The governor, in a statement released from his home, said he and Mrs. Cahill "feel the same distress and sorrow that any other parent would feel in the same situation and naturally we plan to do anything we can to help John."

The governor said he and his wife feel that authorities must treat John "the same as any other young man would be in similar circumstances."

Cahill, who was sworn in last Tuesday as New Jersey's first Republican governor in 16 years, has eight children.

In his inaugural address, Cahill said, "I share the alarm of all thinking citizens at the awesome increase in the use of narcotics by our youth in all areas of the state, in city and suburb. . .by rich and poor. . .black and white."

Cahill said several times during his campaign that he discussed drugs with his children. He had advocated that penalties for use of marijuana by youngsters be lessened on grounds it was a social problem rather than a criminal matter.

"Because marijuana, although not addictive, is too often the first step on the ladder to addiction I believe its use should remain illegal as it is now under state law," he said in a campaign white paper.

"However," it went on, "I am convinced that the answer to the threat of marijuana is not an inflexible policy which saddles youngsters with lifetime criminal records. I therefore would not be opposed to legislation."

At the same time he called for an all-out war against narcotics pushers and advocated stiffer penalties for them.

The Cahill campaign biography described John as a graduate of Bishop Eustace High School in nearby Pennsauken and said he had taken a job as a construction worker. He faces military draft, according to a friend.

John was released on $200 bond, after an arraignment. He faces a court hearing Feb. 4. The bond was posted by New Jersey Secretary of State Paul Sherwin, a longtime friend of the family.

We seem to be the only bank in town that thinks $7,000 of your money is worth investing.

That's about all you need to open an Equity Management Account. (Ask anywhere else and you'll be likely to find they're not very interested in anything under $25,000. In fact, don't be surprised if they think of $75,000 as a modest starter.)

What's more, once you've come up with the first $7,000, you can add as little as about $1,300. On the first day of any month.

What's not a mutual fund—your money is invested in about 20 stocks which are actually carried in your name. This means that if, for any reason, you decide to withdraw, you can take your stock in kind or you can elect to take cash, instead.

This is a very unusual idea, so there are probably some questions you would like to ask before you entrust us with your money. Like if we're a man who'll be pleased to answer them all—Bill Leith. Call 593-6192. Or write him at our Trust Department, 750 Park Ave., New York, New York 10017.

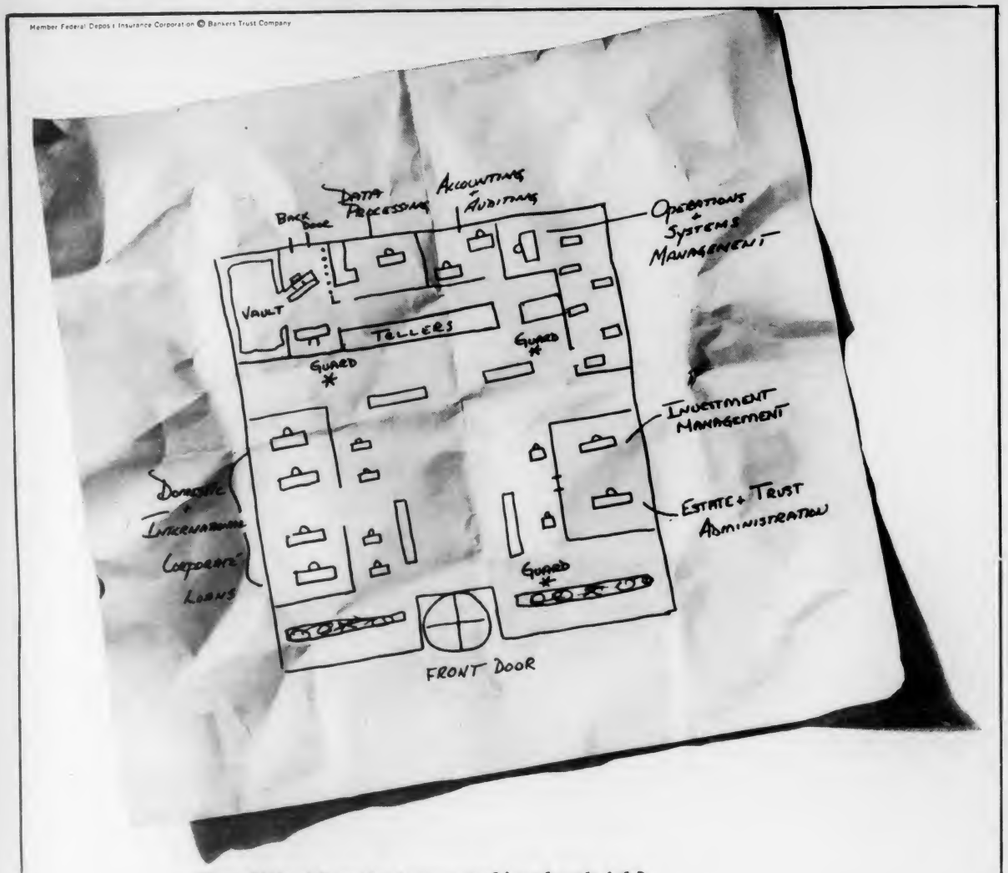
Welcome Back . . Welcome Back . . Welcome . . Back?



Pssst! Would you be interested in a bank-job?

It's not a simple little caper.

Bankers Trust has grown faster than any of the 10 largest commercial banks in the country. We now rank seventh in size, and we want to rank sixth, then fifth, and so on.

But we want to do this without becoming a rigid corporate monster.

So we need people who can step right in and contribute to the areas that concern us.

Areas like metropolitan, national and international banking; the management of personal and corporate investments; the economic problems of the minorities, and the growing crisis in the cities.

Which brings us to the way we feel about you, and the way we feel about ourselves.

Today, the old cliché about uncommitted youth is shattered. And in the pieces lay the ruins of another: the one about all bankers being stuffy.

Bankers Trust is not alone in the belief that this is the brightest generation yet.

We're anxious to meet you.

But just as important, we're anxious for you to meet us.

We might have just the plan you're looking for.

(You can arrange an on-campus interview through your Placement Officer. Or write to Mark Sicinski, 280 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y.10017.)

Businesses will Pay To Clean Pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) - Businesses that pollute the air and water will bear much of the cost of President Nixon's campaign to clean up the environment, Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel said Sunday.

"The polluters will have to pay," Hicket said. "But it will be the cost of doing business."

The levies will be in the form of a tax on polluters, plus government - required equipment for waste treatment, administration sources have indicated.

Hickel, Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Health Education and Welfare, and White House counselor Daniel P. Moynihan discussed the environmental crisis on the CBS television radio program "Face the Nation."

Hickel and Finch pledged that pollution will be markedly reduced by 1980.

"This urging is going to eliminate the foot-dragging that admittedly went in past years," he said.

Moynihan suggested pollution will never be solved until the nation slows down rapid consumption of natural resources.

"The big issue of American society is whether in fact we might slow this down a bit and move to a culture where we constantly don't increase what we have to consume," he said.

The officials declined to discuss any specifics of the administration anti-pollution program.

Hickel hinted President Nixon might spend a portion of the $586 million Congress added to his $214 million budget request for waste treatment this fiscal year. He termed it only rumor the President would not.

"He does understand this problem and will address himself to it," Hickel said of the President.

Ex-Sergeant Sanders Returns Home; Plans No More Anti-War Speeches

WASHINGTON (AP) - Michael Sanders, the Army honor-guard sergeant who claimed his shipment to Vietnam was punishment for publicly opposing the war, is a civilian again and still against the war. But he's planning no speeches, though free of Army restraints.

Honorably discharged here in mid-December after about five months in Vietnam, Sanders is back with his wife and 10-month daughter. He works in a bank and studies nights at the University of Maryland.

Asked whether he is active in the antiwar movement, the Kentucky-born ex-sergeant said "not yet, but I will be shortly."

Sanders said "there are a few young Democratic organizations I am going to look into." And he added he probably would campaign for Sen. Eugene McCarthy if the Minnesota Democrat should try again for the presidency.

Does he intend tomake any anti-war speeches?

"I don't think so," Sanders replied, indicating he will devote spare time to such projects as teaching music to young blacks.

Last May, when Sanders was fighting Army orders sending him to Vietnam, he asserted the action was " punishment for my exercising free speech." He contended his assignment to Vietnam was in retaliation for an interview in The Louisville Courier-Journal in which he was quoted as saying "I am very much opposed to our Vietnam involvement."

The Army denied this was so and said Sanders was ticketed for Vietnam because he hadn't been there before.

At that time Sanders was attached to the famous Army Old Guard, ceremonial unit which provides sentinels for the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

One ofSanders's contentions was that he should not have been assigned to Vietnam because he had only about seven and one half months remaining in his three-year enlistment.

Kentucky's two Republican senators, John Sherman Cooper and Marlow W. Cook, intervened and Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor reviewed the case before affirming Sanders's orders.

Season Isn't Over Yet

Probably some of you faint-hearted, casual UMass hoop fans think now that the Redmen are 6-5, the season is all over and it can be chalked up as a big disappointment. Well, forget it fans, There's a lot of time left. Enough time to make it the season we all dreamed about (and granted, enough time to make it a disappointment.)

A lot of people overlooked some serious problems faced by the UMass cagers when they entered the season. There was the lack of an experienced center, created by the graduation of Peter Gayeski. There was the lack of an experienced ballhandler and leader, left by the graduation of Joe DiSarcina. And there was the fact that over half the squad that started the season had never had college varsity experience.

All these problems have been evident in the five losses. There were three heartbreaking last minute losses to Rhode Island, A.I.C. and Fordham. Lack of veterans hurt obviously. And, against Pennsylvania, the Quakers just had too many big men.

UMass has been further hampered by a ridiculous schedule that had them playing five straight at home against three of their toughest opponents and their two most important Conference foes. A loss here would put the Redmen squarely behind the eight ball, which two losses have done.

Thus, there were a helluva lot

AIC Sends Redmen To Heartbreaking Defeat....

SPRINGFIELD - UMass' first road basketball game proved to be a spirit shaking experience as the Redmen lost a tough 73-72 last minute skirmish to American International College here on Dec. 19, 1969.

A combination of hot Yellow Jacket shooting by Mike White and Greg Hill, a clutch basket and free throw by Bob Rutherford and a few blatantly lousy calls by the officials led to the eventual downfall of the Redmen.

White had 26 points and Hill tallied 24 while shooting at a 64% and 59% clip respectively from the floor. Hill was also a big man off the boards with 20 rebounds.

The Redmen's scoring was more balanced as Ray Ellerbrook had 17, Julius Erving and John Betancourt had 16 and Ken Mathias had 15 points. However, while Ellerbrook and Betancourt were able to shoot 50% or better from the field, Mathias hit a low 35% and Erving an unthinkable 23%. UMass' overall shooting percentage was 39%; AIC registered 48%.

As for Rutherford, three of his seven total points came in the very last minute and turned a 72-70 visitor lead into a 73-72 Ace victory.

With 1:22 to go in the affair Mathias had battled three Yellow Jackets to put in what would turn out to be the last Redman hoop. He was fouled on the play but failed to tally from the line, thus giving the ball to AIC.

The Aces quickly lost control of the ball and UMass embarked on a key fast break only to have Erving miss a tough layup. Given a second chance, Rutherford threw in a 20-footer with 53 seconds remaining to knot the score.

The Redmen then took time out to set up the last shot, but erratic ballhandling turned the ball over to AIC with 19 seconds showing on the clock. The Yellow Jackets took a time out seven seconds later to set up for their last shot.

The basketball was worked into the 5'10 Rutherford who drove to the bucket and drew a fifth foul from Erving. As the UMass sophomore sat dejectedly on the bench, Rutherford stepped to the line and sank one of his two foul shots with 0:08 lingering on the scoreboard.

The visitors pulled down the rebound after Rutherford's miss and quickly fed it to Dennis Chapman who, under heavy pressure, put up a 15-footer from the corner which fell short. The buzzer sounded before the Redmen were able to get off another shot.

In evening out their record at 3-3, the Redmen swallowed their third tough loss of the season, tough because the officials, Charles H. Diehl and Lawrence Mitchell, had off nights to say the least. One is not very surprised when the officiating is crummy at a UMass-New Hampshire contest, but when the officials blow four or five calls in a tightly matched affair like the Redmen-AIC game, one is left frustrated and angry.

AIC took a quick 5-1 lead in the first two minutes of play. The Redmen swiped their first advantage, 15-13, with 10:48 to go in the half when Betancourt hit the third of five straight baskets he canned in relief of Dempsey.

However, strong shooting the rest of the half by Hill and White enabled the Aces to leave the floor at intermission with a 40-33 edge. UMass came back quickly in the second half, scoring five straight points and finally tying the game at 42-42 on a Chapman drive with 17:30 to go. Two long bombers by Ellerbrook gave the visitors a 46-45 advantage with 15:59 left.

From here on out, neither team could break the game open. AIC held leads of 62-58, 68-65 and 70-67 with 2:25 to go. The Redmen were in front at various times by 63-62, 65-64 and lastly by 72-70.

HOOP NOTES - The Yellow Jackets converted 23 of 29 free throws while UMass was awarded only 15 charity attempts and made ten of them . . . The Redmen took 79 shots from the field and hit on only 31 as compared to their opponents' 25-52 percentage . . . All of the tickets that were made available to UMass students were purchased in advance; and the UMass rooters were very vocal and spirited in their support of the Redmen.

UMass Then Excells But Fall To Mighty Penn.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. - In the setting of Philly's famous Palestra, the UMass basketball team paced the University of Pennsylvania at halftime, 38-35, only to lose out in the end, 75-65, to the highly ranked Quakers here on Jan. 17.

Julius Erving and Ken Mathias powered the Redmen to their halftime advantage with 21 and 11 points respectively. The key to the Penn win can be found in the fact that their defense stiffened to hold Erving and Mathias to only four points each in the second half.

Penn took the lead in the very early goings and, after two minutes and twenty seconds had elapsed, was ahead, 7-2. UMass came right back and, a minute later, were out in front, 9-7, on two Ray Ellerbrook hoops sandwiched around a three-point play by Erving.

From this point on, Erving and Mathias took over the first half offensive chores for the Redmen. Six field goals and six foul shots by Erving, four fields and one foul by Mathias plus one Ellerbrook hoop accounted for the visitors' scoring up 'til halftime.

On the Quaker side, Bob Morse and tough little Steve Bilsky were the first half scoring leaders with 11 and nine points.

The complexion of the game changed completely in the second half. While Erving and Mathias were being shut off, John Betancourt came on the scene to pace the Redmen scoringwise. Morse and Bilsky, with help from Corky Calhoun, led the balanced Penn attack.

The Quakers struck quickly for six points and a 41-40 advantage with 17:21 showing on the clock. Bob Dempsey tied the score at 41-all 13 seconds later with a free throw. Penn's Dave Wohl and Ellerbrook matched 20-foot jumpers over the next two minutes and, with 15:23 to go, the score stood at 43-43.

Pennsylvania then tallied five straight points to set the stage for Betancourt's entrance into the fray. Over the next six minutes, the sophomore guard sank five long-range arches from around the key and along the baseline and added a foul shot to give UMass a 59-58 lead with 6:25 to go.

Again the Quakers climbed ahead. After Calhoun hit three of four charity hoops for a 61-59 home advantage, Bilsky provided the straw that broke UMass' back. Calhoun had missed his fourth free throw but the rebound got knocked around, Bilsky picked up the loose ball and drive for the bucket well guarded by the Redmen. He answered the situation by turning his back to the basket and blindly flipping ball over his head and into the hoop.

Thus, with 5:14, left, the home team was up 63-59. Over the next minute, Betancourt traded two foul shots with a Bilsky driving layup to make the score 65-61. At this point Penn employed a four-corner offense and put the affair on ice with some deft passing and fine foul shooting.

Much to the credit of the hard fighting Redmen, an Erving bucket with just under a minute left made the count 71-65 and kept them within striking distance. But the four-corner setup of the Quakers forced a Mathias foul with 0:23 to go. As Morse hit both ends of the one-and-one foul situation, UMass' upset hopes vanished.

HOOP NOTES – The Redmen effort in this tilt must be praised.. They entered this first game of the Palestra doubleheader as 21-point underdogs but battled the then 12th ranked Quakers down to the last minute . . . Penn's forecourt of 6'7 Calhoun, 6'8 Morse and 6'8 Jim Wolf had height advantages of two to four inches over their UMass counterparts yet the Redmen topped their foes in bounds, 33-30. . . .The bulk of the defensive work on Erving in the second half was performed by Calhoun. . . .Betancourt finished the game with 14 points as he hit all five of his shots from the field and every one of his four foul attempts. . .Bilsky and Morse were the Penn scoring leaders with 21 points apiece . . . In the second game of the doubleheader, St. Joseph's collapsed all over Mike Maloy and limited him to 13 points in upsetting previously unbeaten Davidson. . . .In defense of Maloy he was extremely unselfish under the circumstances as he refused to force his shots, most often feeding the ball to his teammates instead. . . .Ever seen $8,000 worth of Gatorade?. . . .Well, Penn has just that amount of the stuff tucked away under the stands of the Palestra, a gift from some alligator in Florida or something like that.

Many have moved... but the Paulists Stay On...

The Paulists arrived on the West Side of New York City in 1858. In 1895 they moved into San Francisco's Chinatown and into the fringes of Chicago's Loop in 1904. They're still there.

Cagers Sparkle In Dull Gem City

ERIE, Pa. - UMass put together two different kinds of wins in garnering the Gem City Bowl, Dec. 28, 1969. One was an easy but dull win in the opener, the other a rugged, exciting victory in the final.

The Redmen opened up the 3rd annual Gem City Bowl, with a comfortable 70-51 win over Catholic University. UMass did not shoot or play exceptionally well, but they were aided by their cold-shooting opponents, who could manage only 28% from the floor. UMass also employed their big height advantage in controlling rebounding with a 67-53 advantage.

The game was close, only through the first five minutes when Catholic had their only lead of the game at 6-4. UMass took the lead for the rest of the game with a Ray Ellerbrook bucket at the 14:45 mark and the Redmen were off and running.

Julius Erving canned two hoops, Ellerbrook one, and the six straight points gave UMass a 14-7 lead at 11:50. From then on it was just a question of how big the lead would grow. The Cardinals were taking poor outside shots that weren't connecting and were unable to get inside for second shots.

Erving, Ken Mathias and Jack Gallagher, who in his first starting role of the season, put in a steady performance, controlled the boards. The Redman offense, meanwhile, while not overly consistent, picked up a lot of inside points, while slowly upping the lead to a comfortable 36-18 lead at halftime, as Mathias, Dennis Chapman, Erving, and John Betancourt combined for eight straight points to close the half.

The second half was virtually the same. After the teams traded hoops to open up the half, Mathias and Erving with two hoops each, and Gallagher with one, gave the Redmen ten straight points and the largest lead of the game, a 26 point, 46-20 bulge.

Erving led all scorers with 25 points and added 22 rebounds. Ellerbrook hit for 16 points, while Mathias chipped in with 10 points and 12 rebounds. Gallagher also helped out on the boards, pulling down nine caroms.

UMass withstood a second half scare from Gannon College, before pulling away to a satisfying 72-63 win over the Golden Knights and capturing the 3rd Annual Gem City Bowl.

It was Gannon's first home defeat in 21 games and broke their streak of five straight wins in the tourney. Gannon was ranked third in the country among small colleges, prior to the game, and had lost only one game, that to Calvin Murphy and Niagra College.

UMass was facing a much bigger team, as Gannon was 6'8, 6'7 and 6'8 up front. All three were fine offensive players, and all three were not afraid to use their weight under the boards. Gannon did have a surprise in not starting their All-American Glen Summors, but after five minutes Summors was in the rest of the way.

The first few minutes were nip and tuck, with UMass leading by four after ten minutes, 14-10, chiefly on strength of the scoring of Julius Erving and Ken Mathias. The Redmen never were behind, but constantly had to withstand pressure from the persistent Knights.

The Redmen had a six point lead on strength of hoops by Ray Ellerbrook and John Betancourt midway in the half, but Gannon came right back with Ron Johnson and Harry McGlaughlin doing much of the damage.

Ken Mathias picked up his fourth foul at the nine minute mark of the half, but Dick Samuelson came on, along with Dennis Chapman and the two seniors each got a pair of hoops to give the Redmen a 36-29 halftime lead.

A big factor in the half, and throughout the game, was the defensive job underneath done by Erving and Jack Gallagher. The two forwards did great jobs rebounding, and constantly intercepted the looping inside passes employed by the Knights.

UMass opened up the second half by racing out to a 17 point lead within the first six minutes. Chapman, Ellerbrook, and Erving, did most of the scoring, while Gannon, not used to a disciplined offense or defense, made numerous floor errors.

However, as quickly as UMass raced out to their big lead the game turned around. Gannon threw out a harassing press, that pressured the ballhandler with two and sometimes three defenders. The result was UMass turnovers.

Gannon quickly scored eight straight points, and after a Gallagher bucket, and an Erving score, the hometowners scored twice more to cut the lead to six.

Erving scored on a jumper at the six minute mark and Betancourt also had a hoop but Gannon then poured in eight straight points, and what was a 17 point lead dwindled to two points.

Johnson led Gannon with 21 points, while Bob Christman had 13. McLaughlin added 12 points. All-American Summors was held to seven points due mainly to the job done by Gallagher, Chapman and Erving.

In the consolation game, Catholic U. walloped Lehigh, 78-58.

of obstacles in the way of UMass as they started the season. And things weren't helped by a rash of injuries and illness that prevented a full squad from practicing during the pre-season.

All there aren't excuses, just facts. It's also true that the Redmen have often been inconsistent atrocious shooters at times, ineffective in the clutch. Sometimes they have been their own worst enemy.

Still, this is a very capable basketball team. And it is now entering the stretch of its schedule that will determine its New England standing.

The rest of the schedule is virtually all area opponents. Therefore, if the Redmen seek New England supremacy, the Yankee Conference title, and a post-season berth, they can hardly afford to lose another game.

It sounds impossible. But it is in the realm of belief. Dissecting the remaining games, (this is always a ridiculous thing to do, but a column like this is ridiculous anyway, right?) there is the Boston Trio of B.U., N.U. and B.C. They are all tough to figure. B.U. has been in and out, N.U. steady but lacking in opposition, and B.C. has had a poor year for them but still have excellent talent and will be on their home court.

Against Rider and Vermont, U-Mass has to be considered the favorite, but not by much. Rider has been streaking of late, with a big win over St. Joseph's, while Vermont is always tough in Burlington, as is shown by their recent five point loss to UConn.

Then come three biggies, Holy Cross at home, Rhode Island and UConn away. 'Nuff said. Then there is dangerous Springfield, hapless Maine, but always tough in Orono, streaking St. Anselm's in their snakepit of a gym and New Hampshire.

UMass has its work cut out for them But this is a talented team capable of playing Penn., the 12th ranked team in the nation, to a standstill, and on occasion, over powering other teams.

It's sort of foolish to give up just yet. There are a lot of things to be optimistic about.

There is Julius Erving, the best player in New England, barring no one. There is Ray Ellerbrook who may be back in the shooting groove, off a big second half at Iona. There is the stability of the juniors and seniors, and the huge supply of sophomore talent that must be tapped.

This team is still a good one. They may be ready to finally prove it.

Rough Journey To Erie

It wasn't an easy road for the UMass basketball team to scenic Erie, Pa. The Redmen reported back to the Amherst campus on Christmas day and were scheduled to leave the day after for Bradley Airport at 8 a.m.

The Redmen were welcomed on December 26th by a blizzard that paralyzed Western Mass. However, the dedicated (or insane) hoopsters, made their way by car to Bradley, in hopes of taking their scheduled flight. They were to be disappointed.

The airport was closed, and was to be closed for most of the day. Therefore what to do? At this time they still thought the tourney was to begin on Saturday, and here on Friday morning they were stuck in Bradley with the Erie blues again.

After a long wait that was highlighted by a passing drill in the terminal, the decision was made to bus to New York City, stay there the night and leave the next morning for Erie. It was a good idea if it had worked.

An 8 a.m. flight was to take UMass out of LaGuardia Airport Saturday, but this plan was foiled. It seems that the New York airport was closed due to ice and wind and a blocked runway. Thus the Redmen had another wait on their hands, this one of about six hours, and still thinking they had a game that night.

Finally the news came that the tourney had been moved up to Sunday. And finally UMass was airborne.

All this trouble to get to Erie, which is one of the alltime bad cities. And when they finally had settled down in Erie, the team learned that their locker room was broken into and sneakers and basketballs were stolen.

ErvingGarnersMVPTourney

Julius Erving was named the Most Valuable player in the 3rd Annual Gem City Bowl, by the tourney coaches and press. The UMass sophomore scored 48 points and had 37 rebounds in the two games.

Erving was joined on the All-Tourney team, by Redman captain Ray Ellerbrook, who had 30 points in the two games, Gannon's Harry McLaughlin and Glen Summors and Catholic University star Jim LeBuffe.

Skiers Dominate Middlebury Races

After finishing the second of two one-week training camps at Killington in temperatures that dropped to 106 degrees below zero, the tired but determined UMass ski team travelled to the Middlebury Snow Bowl in Middlebury, Vermont for their first two races this past weekend.

Saturday Boston College hosted the first slalom of the season. This was the race that spelled disaster for the Redmen last year. Because of their poor finish, they never could quite catch first place Amherst and settled for a hard-fought second in the New England Inter-collegiate Ski Conference.

This year was a different story. At the end of the first run the UMass skiers appeared to be in control. Co-captain Jim Garstang led the team with a 32.2 time and held fourth place overall. Jim Latimer, a rookie this year, started in the number one spot for the Redmen and was second for the team after the first run. John Gray, another rookie, was third, and co-captain Ted Martin was a solid fourth. Jerry Curran and Chuck Walker, two veterans of the racing circuit, followed with strong team performances. The Redmen team held first place at this point.

In the "A" division of the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference, each of nine schools (UMass, Amherst, Tufts, Boston College, Boston University, Bently, W.P.I., Babson, and Northeastern) race six men. Four to six men race on the "B" team. The best four of the six "A" team times are totaled to determine the winner.

The UMass "B" team, comprised of Steve Kurkoski, Mark Corville, Mark Fisher, John Gennari, and Gordon Speed, posted a time low enough to beat all of the "A" teams at the end of the first run.

The second run proved costly as two of the top four UMass skiers had trouble. Gray missed a closed gate and had to climb back for it, costing him ten seconds. Latimer also missed a gate, but managed to finish fourth for the team.

Garstang turned in another fine run, placing sixth overall and first for UMass. Experienced Curran turned in a good run and finished third for the team. Martin, starting last for the team, fired through the course finishing second for the team and tenth overall.

At the final tally, the Redmen skiers took second place, losing to Northeastern by six seconds.

Sunday the ski team captured first place in the W.P.I. giant slalom, also at Middlebury, displaying the finest skiing in the history of the UMass team. Garstang put together two quick runs to finish first for UMass and fourth overall.

After the timekeepers missed his time on the second run, Latimer showed the league just why UMass is so strong by flashing through the 30-gate giant slalom in 51 seconds. His time was worth second place for the team and fifth overall.

Gray turned in two fast runs to put him in sixth place. Martin finished fourth for UMass and eighth overall after experiencing trouble on the upper part of the course. Walker and Curran took tenth and eleventh places, giving the Redmen an amazing six of the top eleven positions, a first for the UMass team..

The UMass varsity and freshmen teams represented themselves well in the annual Knight s of Columbus track meet held Saturday Jan. 10 in the Boston Garden. Outstanding for the Redmen was junior Ron Wayne's victory in the New England college mile. Running in his first major indoor competition of the season he came from behind to win in 4:13.8.

The field in Wayne's race was both large and fast, containing among others UConn's John Vitale and Craig McColl. When asked about his race Wayne said he was surprised it came so easily so early in the season. In December Wayne won, for the second year in a row, the mile and half mile runs in the yearly indoor meet held in the Fargo Building in South Boston. In all three of these victories Wayne negotiated the curves wearing spikeless marathon shoes.

The varsity two mile relay team also won in 7:53 due to the last leg sprint by anchor man Larry Paulson. Bill Donalson lead the first half mile leg and handed off to Al Mangan for the next 880 yard segment. At this point a Boston State runner was challenging for the lead Mangan handed the baton to senior Dave Evans who ran the fast half mile time for Redmen, but still could lose the pursuing Boston State runner.

Most of the spectators in the Garden were rooting for the Boston State runner and he kept pressing the last Redman runner, Paulson until the green-clad Boston State runner passed Paulson on a straight-a-way. Paulson responded quickly and sprinted into the lead again, but the crowd still shouted for the Boston State runner.

In the last lap on the backstretch he sprinted past Paulson and led going into the final turn. Paulson, on the curve, mightily muscled past the Boston runner to break the tape a step ahead of him.

The UMass team of Dave Marble, Gerry Spellman, Dave Evans and Al Mangan placed third in the mile relay in 3:30.6.

UMass Hoop Fortunes in New York

NEW YORK, N. Y. - A brilliant 37 point performance by Julius Erving was not enough for UMass January 21, as a basket with 21 seconds left gave Fordham a 62-61 victory. The Ram win, before 2700 home fans, was their fifth in 13 games, while the Redmen dropped to 5-5.

The contest was Fordham's first home encounter in over a month, and the Rams, in the midst of a long losing streak, responded with a last minute win. UMass was leading 61-60 when Fordham took the ball with a little over a minute remaining. The Rams killed the clock down to 25 seconds when guard Bill Mainor took a wild 25 footer that missed everything. However, forward Bob Cassou took the rebound amidst a scramble and laid in the winning hoop.

UMass called time, worked one play that misfired, and got the ball again with five seconds left, but the inbounds pass was stolen by Ram guard John Burik, and the Redmen suffered another last minute defeat.

The visitors had only themselves to blame for the loss as they shot a meager 38% from the floor and 57% from the foul stripe. And they had only Erving to thank for being even close at the end.

The 6'5 sophomore, who had the critical New York basketball crowd raving, scored the final 12 UMass points of the game, the last three coming on a length of the court drive and layup along with a foul. This gave the Redmen that one point lead with a minute left.

Erving, in addition, had 20 rebounds, to remain among the nation's leaders in that all-important category.

The first half was a see-saw

20 minutes, as the game was tied six times. Erving and fellow soph Rick Vogeley, making his first start, were the entire Redman offense in the first ten minutes, while Fordham was led by surprise starter John Zanzalari, who along with Charlie Yelverton and Mainor sent the Rams out to the first substantial lead of the game late in the half, seven points, with three minutes remaining.

However, Ray Ellerbrook chipped in with a couple of free throws Dick Samuelson added a field goa' and a charity toss to bring UMass closer. Then Erving reeled off six straight points in the dying minutes of the half, giving the Redmen a halftime 35-33 lead. Erving had 20 points in the half.

The second half was virtually the same. Fordham would edge out to a lead, then fall back as either Ellerbrook or Erving got heated up. Their last big lead was six points with eight minutes to go. Then Ellerbrook hit a jumper, and Erving started his 12 point string to tie things up.

But Erving's late heroics that saw him can five field goals and two free throws over the last six and a half minutes, were ruined by the opportunistic New Yorkers.

Ellerbrook with 11 points was the only other Redman in double figures with Erving. Vogeley picked up six points, all of them coming in the first ten minutes of the game while Jack Gallagher gave Erving some help on the boards with 7 caroms.

Zanzalari led Fordham with 20 points, while Yelverton had 17 markers and 11 rebounds.

But Bounce Back to Beat Iona 86-82

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y. - Led by the hot second half shooting of Ray Ellerbrook and Julius Erving, UMass broke an eight-point halftime deficit to defeat Iona, 86-82, here on Saturday night.

The Redmen played terribly in the first half and ten points from Iona's John Carey and Arthur Wiggins, plus eight and seven respectively from Joe Mazzella and Bill McGugins were enough to put the Gaels on top, 43-35, at intermission. Ten points by Ken Mathias and eight by John Betancourt paced UMass, but it was the fact of three Ellerbrook hoops at the end of the half, including one at the buzzer, that was an omen of things to come.

The visitors started the second period slowly and, after two minutes and 13 seconds, were down by ten, 49-39. Dennis Chapman, who also played a key second half role, hit a hook shot for his team's 40th and 41st points, setting the stage for some torrid shooting by Ellerbrook.

The senior Redman captain tallied the next six points of the contest as he converted a fast break, swished a 15-footer and canned a short jumper from five feet away. A Ned A'Connell long bomber put Iona in front by four but another Ellerbrook jumper sliced the lead to 51-49 with 15:37 left.

Ellerbrook began to cool off slightly and Erving came through to take up the slack. The 6'5 soph tallied 20 of his 24 points in the last 15 minutes of the game. His five-footer with 14:52 to go knotted the score at 51. For the next six minutes though, the Gaels maintained small leads of four and two points.

With 8:55 left Erving canned a turnaround jump shot and was fouled. He made the charity hoop to inch UMass to within one, 65-64. The visitors got their hands back on the ball and Betancourt, another strong Redman performer in the second period, threw in a 22-foot jumper for a 66-65 UMass lead.

Iona managed to momentarily tie the score at 67-all but an Ellerbrook jumper, an Erving tap-in and a Dick Samuelson layup put UMass in front, 73-67, with 5:46 remaining. Solid play by Erving, Samuelson and Betancourt the rest of the way allowed the Redmen to record their sixth victory and push their season's record back over the .500 mark at 6-5.

HOOP NOTES - The game was played in the 1,000 capacity gym of Iona Prep because the Gaels have no suitable facility at Iona College . . . Almost all of the seats were full and among the crowd were a few exceptionally boisterous hecklers who mysteriously shut up when the Redmen took control of the tilt . . . For UMass it was a team effort . . . Aside from the standout performances turned in by Ellerbrook and Erving, key roles were played by Samuelson, Mathias, Chapman and Betancourt . . . Sam Provo saw a few minutes of action in the first half as Ellerbrook's replacement and did a commendable job in the limited time he was in . . . He netted two points but barely missed on two other attempts from the field . . . McGugins was high pointman for the Gaels with 19, 11 of which came from the foul line . . . The most knowledgable and most colorful Iona fan was the guy who sold homemade pretzels, ice cream bars and orange-ade in the gymnasium lobby . . .

UMass Icemen Quaked by Penn. 7-3

THE SPOILERS-Jack Edwards (top) and Erick Scrafield were the only Redmen who could find the scoring range in Sunday's loss. Scrafield's marker came with UMass shorthanded one man.

Coach Jack Canniff's icemen were rudely awakened from the slumber of intersession by a University of Pennsylvania sextet which beat the Redmen 7-3 in a hockey game played Sunday night at Penn. The loss drops UMass to a 3-4 mark for the season.

Despite a 2-8 record in tough Ivy League competition, the Quakers, who belie the non-violent connotation of their namesake on the ice, had averaged 3.5 goals per game. Only a lack of depth has prevented them from possessing a brighter record.

The Quakers jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead. At 5:47, Tim Cutter, who along with Mike Casey and Sam Gellard, contributed two scores, lit the lamp from in close. Assists went to linemate Tom Davis and defenseman Chris Larson.

Casey scored at 13:13 from Paul Morrison and Cutter scored again at 14:33, assists to Davis and Larson on the play which had both sides playing a man short.

UMass finally broke the ice at 18:27 as Jack Edwards scored following passes from center John Hartnett and defenseman Brian Sullivan. On the play, Sullivan fed Hartnett breaking into the zone from where he flipped it to the speeding Edwards on the wing.

Penn dominated the second period, scoring two goals. Casey scored again at 8:27, assists to Gellard and Larry Bader. At 17:04, with UMass' Charlie Donovan off for cross checking, Morrison scored on the power play from Casey and Gellard.

Edwards got credit for his second goal at 6:54 of the third as his shot went in the net off a Penn defenseman. Gellard got his two at 7:12 and 10:16, both on assists from Cutter and Davis.

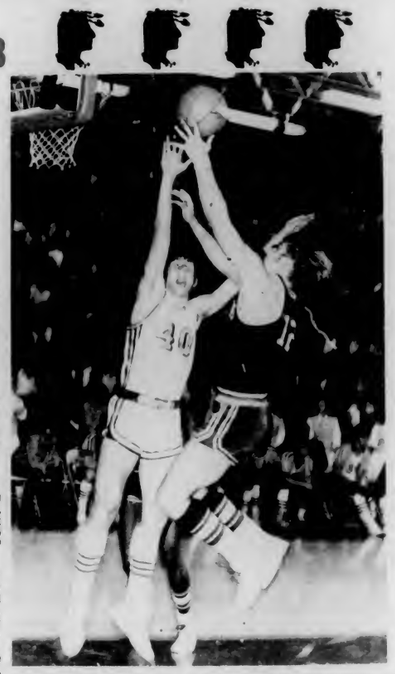
Over the last eight minutes of the contest, UMass forced play in the Penn zone but had only three shots on net to show for its efforts. Other shots were either blocked before they reached the goalie or were wide of the mark.

Eric Scrafield notched the Redmen's third goal, and the last of the game, in a penalty killing situation. Scrafield broke in all alone, took a pass from Dan Reidy and pumped it into the net.

Canniff felt that the Redmen contributed to their own downfall. "We made key mistakes, gave up the puck in key situations. They turned our mistakes into goals."

Penn was not be slighted for its efforts, however. "They kept the pressure on in defense and broke out of the zone quickly. Penn was the faster squad and their speed created advantageous situations."

ICE CHIPS - On the night, the Quakers outshot UMass, 32-24. . . Penn's top line of Cutter, Davis and Gellard accounted for 12 points. . .Cutter hails from Milton. . only two lines saw action for the Quakers all night. . .the Redmen face tough Hamilton, tomorrow at Orr Rink. . . .special thanks to Tom Peters. . .



CAPTAIN ELLERBROOK-Redman basketball captain Ray Ellerbrook drives for two points against AIC's George Kastrinakis. Ellerbrook had one of his best shooting games of this season in Saturday night's win over Iona and all indications point toward more of the same from the senior guard over the remainder of the campaign.

Thousands Throng to Boyden Gymnasium

By RICHARD HANSON, Staff Reporter

Approximately 20,000 "Drops" and "Adds" will be made before the University settles back to the routine of another semester. Once again the registration course change day proved itself one of large crowds, confused students, and mixed up schedules.

According to Registrar Ralph Jones, this registration day was "not as bad" as the fall fiasco. Jones said there were still a "high number" of course over-enrollments mostly in the areas of Psychology, Education, and Sociology. Jones put the number at a "couple thousand."

There were the normal problems with missing grades. Jones explained that some teachers hadn't filed grades within the alloted 48 hours after the final exam period, as required by a Faculty Senate ruling. These grades and any other missing grades will be reprocessed, and the corrected grades should be available within three weeks. Any grade discrepancies should be taken up with the individual instructor.

There are rumors that students are unfairly being flunked out by computers because of missing grades. Registrar Jones reassured students that he "personally reviewed" all computer decisions concerning flunking out. Jones said that he had already reinstated about 15 students and that he will continue to correct any errors as quickly as possible.

Jones recalled one student, who during the registration period, added and dropped a total of thirty-two courses.

Nixon's Veto May Cause Closing of Some Schools

BOSTON (AP) - State Education Commissioner Neil V. Sullivan said today some Massachusetts schools may be forced to close because of the veto Monday by President Nixon of the Health, Education and Welfare funding bill.

He said communities such as Bourne could lose two thirds of their funding, and Ayer and Chicopee might lose half their money because of the veto.

Sullivan said the veto, if sustained, will cost the state about $21 million, including $10 million to area s like Bourne supported by the Impacted Areas Law. Under this law, communities where residents work at military installations such as Westover Air Force Base, but whose children attend community schools, receive federal funds to pay education costs.

If the veto is upheld, he said, "We'll have to dismiss 20 people in this building alone," indicating the State Department of Education building.

Prayers In Leyden School Hit By Educ. Commissioner

BOSTON (AP) - The state asked a Suffolk Superior Court judge Tuesday to declare illegal the continuing before-school prayer sessions at the elementary school in the tiny western Massachusetts town of Leyden.

Smith set Feb. 10 as the date for a preliminary hearing.

Named as defendants were the three members of the Leyden School Board, which approved guidelines for the prayer sessions last fall.

The suit contends that the committee's authorization of the prayers is unlawful and that the prayers themselves are unlawful. It cites as the basis for this contention the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court ruling on prayer in public schools and the constitutional provisions of church-state separation.

Hurley acted at the direction of Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn, who had been trying to persuade the Leyden School Board to stop the prayers without court action. The committee members had steadfastly refused, however.

The prayer sessions, which are voluntary, affect only Leydon's 77 elementary pupils, who attend class in a four-room schoolhouse. The town's high school pupils go to a regional school in a community nearby.

Under the school committee's guidelines, one bell rings at the beginning of the school day to signify the start of the prayer sessions, which may involve Bible readings, actual prayers, or merely silent meditation. Those pupils who do not wish to take part are allowed to wait outside.

A second bell rings when the session is over, and a third rings to signal the start of the school day.

Mrs. Allen R. Snow, one of the three school board members, told a newsman in anticipation of the suit that if the court rules against Leyden, the town will abide by the decision.

"After all, we are law-abiding up here, regardless of what anyone else thinks," she said.

Of Quinn's involvement in the case, Mrs. Snow said: "He's only doing what the law says he has to do."

But she added:

"It does seem as though they could put their time in somewhere where it would do more good."

Swingshifters Find UMass "Changed"

Returning swingshift Freshmen were reunited last night at a coffee hour sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, the service fraternity. About 100 attended.

All the swingshifters showed a strong closeness as they sat around and renewed acquaintances from the summer. Many seemed to feel as if they were attending a different school. Several expressed dismay over the difference in size between summer sessions and regular semesters.

"It's so big," expressed Laura Gordon.

Jane Nagle said that she is really glad to be back but that people were more friendly and helpful during the summer.

"It's not like the same school it was last summer," said Maggie Mekallen. "It must be the snow!"

Red Tape Hampers U.S. Red Cross Nigerian Aid

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) - Political wrangling is tying up a U.S.-financed airlift of vital supplies from Lagol to a million refugees in what once was Biafra, informed sources said Tuesday.

The International Committee of the Red Cross had intended to use four 14-ton C97 Stratofreighters made available last year by the U.S. government, plus two or three DC6's chartered with U.S. donations.

Federal authorities maintain strict control over the relief operation to make sure that it is basically a Nigerian effort.

A report from Geneva on the airlift said the Red Cross has insisted that the planes carry Red Cross markings and have an official delegate on board.

This was understood to have disturbed Nigerian coordinators who had apparently not been informed of the conditions, sources said.

An informant close to the Red Cross said the all-Swiss committee was determined that the aircraft be used only in accordance with the Geneva convention.

He said: "Food and drugs to Enugu and not Port Harcourt, no problem. Wounded soldiers, no problem. Repatriating refugees, no problem. But girl friends, no. Soldiers on leave, no . . ."

Nigerian authorities took over from the Red Cross last June in relief operations after growing bitterness.

Meanwhile, two U.S. C141's are to start an airlift from the United States to Lagos Wednesday. They are to bring in 50 trucks and other emergency supplies in 21 flights.

U.S.Command Sends More Marines Home

SAIGON (AP) - The withdrawal of 50,000 more American troops from Vietnam will begin Wednesday with 3,000 Marines from 19 units leaving over a five-day period, the U.S. Command announced Tuesday.

The announcement came as allied headquarters reported half a dozen clashes with enemy forces ranging from the southern Mekong Delta to jungles near the Cambodian border north of Saigon.

The announcement said 59 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed. Allied casualties were three Americans and five South Vietnamese killed and three Americans and 18 South Vietnamese wounded.

Withdrawal of the 3,000 Leathernecks will be followed before April 15 by the remainder of the 50,000 ordered out by President Nixon in his third troop cutback.

The withdrawal will raise to 110,000 the number of troops pulled out since Nixon announced the first manpower reduction last June.

Settlement May Soon Be Reached On G.E. Strike

NEW YORK(AP) - Tentative settlement of a three-month, multi-million-dollar General Electric Co. tieup appeared Tuesday to be in the offing, with general agreement reported on wage issues affecting 130,000 strikers.

The government's top labor conciliator, J. Curtis Counts, director of the Federal Mediation Service, summoned key officials from 12 striking unions to a special meeting, amid a news blackout of developments.

The last wage offer on the bargaining table was made Dec. 7 when GE proposed an immediate 20 cents increase in the average hourly wage of $3.25. In addition, a three-year contract called for a three per cent increase in the second and third years, plus a cost of living escalator of up to 5 per cent a year.

Spearheaded by GE's two largest unions, the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers and the independent United Electrical Workers, the strikers sought 35 cents an hour, with a cost of living formula to protect the increase.

GE's annual $8-billion production schedule was slowed to a trickle in plants in 135 cities, although an estimated 180,000 non-striking employes kept most of them open.

Loss of wages to the strikers ran over $200 million in the longest tieup in the history of the nation's fourth largest industrial giant.

Company losses were less easy to capsule, in view of an AFL-CIO national boycott of GE products that began Dec. 28. There was disagreement on its effectiveness.

Throughout the strike, the Pentagon declined to assess its effect on defense production, which comprised 20 per cent of GE's business. However, some defense plants were among the few where at least a percentage of production continued.

The walkout began Oct. 26, the first companywide strike of GE employes since 1946. Picketing generally was peaceful after some skirmishes and arrests.

Soviet Leaders Torn Between Ghosts, Reality

By WILLIAM L. RYAM
AP Special Correspondent

The Soviet political barometer appears to be falling, and if so there seems a good chance that efforts to negotiate basic world issues with Moscow will run into stormy weather.

The Kremlin has made gestures indicating it seeks agreements which might tend to ease tensions in some areas sufficiently to take the strain from the internal economy. But ghosts are getting in the way.

So much fear and suspicion of all things foreign are being expressed that the reader of official statements may be moved to wonder just how stable is the current collective of leaders.

The picture one gets is of an uncertain leadership, pulled simultaneously in two directions, unwilling to risk dangerous international crises yet fearful of the sort of horse trading that might require compromise.

The Americans, speakers said, place "special hopes" in Red China as an instrument for demoralizing the entire Communist movement.

Exchange Program Provides Look At US Educ. Patterns

The Domestic Student Exchange has been established at UMass to provide students with an opportunity to become acquainted with social and educational patterns found in different parts of the U.S. Possibly the most valuable aspect of this experience will be the opportunity to meet and exchange ideas and experiences with people who have different value systems and cultural backgrounds.

UMass students who wish to do so may incorporate into their undergraduate program a year of study at another major university. At present there are 13 schools from which UMass students may select. Students who participate should be sophomores or juniors during the current academic year and should have a 2.5 cumulative grade point average.

For UMass students who do not choose to study at another university, DSEP provides an opportunity to meet and exchange ideas with students from other university campuses in different parts of the country who will be spending a year at UMass.

For those interested in the program, there will be a meeting on Monday, February 2, at 6:30 p.m. at SBA 120. All those students who have been on the exchange program or are here on the program are asked to attend to tell of their own schools.

Snow Policy

Don't Expect Snow To Cancel Class

Since a majority of the students live within walking distance it is incumbent on the University to hold classes at all scheduled times, except under the most extraordinary circumstances. However, it is recognized that many students, and most faculty and staff drive to campus. For this reason it is essential to have a clearly stated set of policies for those rare occasions when it appears that roads and parking lots will be unable to accomodate cars arriving on campus. The following policies will therefore be in effect.

1. Classes and all other scheduled academic and cultural activities are called off, certain essential services will have to be maintained (plant operation, maintenance, custodial, security, food service, farm service, health services, library, etc.). If they have not already done so, heads of these departments should formulate their emergency plans and communicate these to the Personnel Office as soon as possible. Included in these plans should be the provision for unlocking ALL building entrances if classes are held.

2. If classes are held on a day when some faculty find it impossible to reach campus, these faculty members should call their department offices to leave appropriate instructions for students who will be calling those offices. In the event that a department office is unmanned, the faculty member, and students inquiring about specific courses should call 545-1515 (student information number as listed in the Amherst Town Telephone Directory) after 7:45 a.m.

3. The decision to call off classes will be made after ascertaining that either road travel is too hazardous or that insufficient parking space will be usable. If circumstances require calling off classes during the day, this information will be transmitted to departments through schools and colleges.

5. Insofar as possible the following lots will be cleared first:
Lot #1 - (Whitmore)
Lots #10, 11, 12, 13 - (Large lots South of Whitmore)
Lots #2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8
K, F, N, V Lots - (Student Lots)

Every attempt will be made to operate the student buses which circulate on the campus.

Helping The Hard Core Unemployed

UMass faculty member, Laurence A. Johnson, has completed a book on efforts made by companies across the nation to give employment opportunities to the so-called unemployables.

Johnson, assistant dean of the School of Business Administration at UMass in Amherst, prepared the report, entitled "Employing the Hard Core Unemployed," for the American Management Association.

Johnson demonstrates in his study that the hard-core unemployed are employable, and profitably so. The book is aimed at helping potential employers of the hard-core unemployed to organize programs that will be beneficial to both the company and their recruits.

According to Johnson, the study was undertaken to "find out what industry is doing to recruit, train and retrain the hard-core unemployed, to report the most successful methods and also to discover how these company efforts are being received by residents of the urban ghetto."

Johnson says that, "Although in recent years there has been no shortage of programs for the poor, there has been a shortage of useful results. In certain ways it is clear that many individual hard-core training programs are suffering because the nation as a whole has not yet decided to do the entire job. Companies across America must make honest efforts to eliminate the discrimination that is so largely responsible for the economic plight of America's non-white population."

"I am a Southerner by ancestry, birth, training, inclination, belief and practice, I believe that segregation of the races is proper and the only practical and correct way of life in our states. I yield to no man as a fellow candidate, or as a fellow citizen, in the firm, vigorous belief in the principles of white supremacy, and I shall always be so governed."

-- G. Harold Carswell

Carswell said this in a speech to an American Legion meeting on Aug. 13, 1948. Carswell is Nixon's new nomination for Supreme Court Justice.

That Carswell repudiated the statement at a recent news conference sheds very little light on what the man really thinks and believes. His statement seems to be rather definite, and it doesn't appear as though he really believes in the constitution of the United States (How many Americans do?) A. Hitler believed in the principles of Aryan Supremacy. What does it mean to have Mr. Carswell serving on the highest, most just, most objective court in the country?

Perhaps Mr. Carswell was simply telling the Legion boys what he thought they wanted to hear so they would vote for him. If this is the case, still what kind of man is he? Certainly not one I would have preside over my liberty.

I really wonder what our fine president Nixon is up to. I am also very afraid that I already know.

Voluntary Fee?

You never read about Uhuria, because it is a subversive country, dangerous to our national security. It wasn't always subversive, however. There was a time when it preached and proclaimed freedom and systematically denied it. But it 1797, a new ruler, Quoxien, came to power. So chauvanistic and blind was he, that he devised a plan to prove to the world that Uhuria truly was the freest nation that ever was. He abolished that nation's draft. "When Uhuria is next attacked", he wrote in a letter dated September 9, 1798, "the citizens will willingly defend their country without being forced to, for the people love their freedom." Two years later, Uhuria surrendered to invading Prussian forces without firing a shot, without presenting a soldier. Quoxien, now a bitter, defeated man, wrote in what was to become the now surpressed HISTORY OF UHURIA:

... given true freedom of choice, the people chose not to defend their country. What I, Quoxien, thought was worth saving, the people thought wasn't worth the effort...

Wouldn't it be a laugh if the athletic fee was made voluntary, and it turned out that what the administration and alumni "thought was worth saving, the people thought wasn't worth the effort"?

Man's Environment: A Vital Issue

We need to deal with this major problem in several ways. We must define it in international, national, state, local and campus terms, educating students to the immediate and long-range effects of pollution on all of these levels. We must discuss the cases of the problem, in part from a technical level if we can do this without getting bogged down in drawn-out specifics, but more importantly from an economic and sociological level. We must present methods of attacking the problem which are usable by a broad spectrum of the population, especially methods which small groups can carry out themselves, developing their own leaders, and without needing to have a vast store of technical expertise. Finally, we must initiate some program or programs ourselves through which people can learn to take action and develop their skills so they can branch off into other activities with slightly different directions.

It is important to constantly emphasize, in any discussion of pollution, that the ultimate effect of continued nonchalance is the destruction of the earth's ability to support human life. This eventuality is not something which looms in the far distant future--it is a clear and immediate danger. Reputable scientists have estimated that the process may reach a stage of irreversibility in as little as two to five years. Richard Nixon, in a speech given in early January, went so far as to put a ten year time limit on the problem. There is no time for extensive studies to determine whether we have four years or four year, three weeks, two days, eleven hours, and twenty-one minutes. On this problem, as in no other except the possible use of the bomb, there is an urgency which, if ignored, threatens the actual existance of the human rade in its entirety. The time for action in NOW, and the action must be direct and forceful.

There is a nation-wide teach-in on the environment scheduled for April 22, 1970. We should become actively involved in the planning of this campus' participation in that teach-in. More important, we should put forth a major effort to make the protection of our environment a vital issue on this campus and in the surrounding communities before April 22.

There are several areas which can be dealt with by local effort. The power plant is polluting the air. The campus dump, used by the Chemistry Dept. for disposal of toxic chemicals, is polluting ground water and possibly the stream which runs through the west end of campus. The Holyoke Power Plant just south of Northampton is a major air polluter. The Connecticut River is polluted, and both Greenfield and Northampton contribute heavily to the problem. Construction on campus is usually carried out with little or no regard to ecologocal factors. The proposed shopping center along University Drive will destroy valuable fields and swampland, adding immeasurably to local ecological upset. All of these are problems which can be dealt with by local activity.

There is much to be done in terms of educating people to the problems of pollution and ecology. We can develop programs using members of the International Club talking about problems in their homelands to show the universality of the situation, people from the Poverty Committee totalk about the relationship between poverty and environmental pollution, from the anti-war groups to talk about ecology and defoliation in Vietnam, etc. As issues are raised, we can attend classes wearing gauze masks and steer class discussions to the questions of the causes, effects, and control of environmental destruction. We can produce articles and programs for the local media concerning pollution. We can prepare to confront the state democratic convention, which well be held on campus early this summer, with a demand for a strong relevant stand on environmental control and improvement.

We must try to develop an enforcement group which will work independently of federal or state agencies to bring charges against companies and institutions violaint anti-pollution laws, and attempt to obtain jail sentences for the Directors and upper-management of obstinant offenders. We must seek ways of stopping the construction of the Vernon Atomic Electric Plant in Southern Vermont, and of closing the atomic plant in Rowe, Mass., until thermal pollution and the threat of atomic pollution can be completely overcome.

These ideas are more than suggestions--they are imperatives! Our world is being destroyed, and we have no choice but to act to save it.

Pluralism and Pressure Groups

Much has been said about the existence of the so-called "silent majority", who is in it, and whether it exists at all. Its critics claim that its occasional political impotence is deserved because of the very fact that it is silent. Unfortunately, this is too often true. It is a fact of history that the extremes of the political spectrum have always been more vocal than the middle. Does this mean though, that we are destined to be ruled by extremists?

Also, can the average man be expected to form valid judgements and to act on them if the media does not present him with sufficient facts? It is here that the press has a tremendous responsibility to present things as they are and to confine opinion to the editorial page. What is needed is a truly "free and responsible press", as the Collegian likes to call itself.

However, I take issue with the Collegian over its coverage of the appropriation for The Drum, the new black magazine. I believe that John Dubois' article was an attempt to conceal some of the unusual features of the bill, and to whitewash the ludicrously violent presentation of it. What he termed "vigorous presentation" was in my belief a strange amalgamation of disruptiveness, intimidation, and confusingly irrational logic. Time and time again there were unrecognized and unbidden "speakers" disrupting the meeting.

Also, the claim was made that the senate "owes" the black community of this campus a certain sum somewhere in the neighborhood of $9000, I assume that this figure was arrived at by multiplying the student activities tax by the number of black students enrolled. Now if this type of absurd economics is carried to its illogically logical extreme, then we would have a campus segregated in all but name.

The concept of pluralism, pressure groups, etc., are an old and vital part of the American political tradition. I respect the people involved with this magazine in the sense that they wanted something, fought for it, and won. Also, I will not judge the magazine itself until sufficient time has elapsed to form a rational opinion. But I cannot support any "demand", from anybody, based upon some spurious multiplication. Nor do I consider it exercise of "free speech" to prevent a legislative body from conducting its work in an orderly and dignified manner. In conclusion may I express the hope that in the future, the Collegian will try to present a more balanced presentation of the facts, and avoid the fate of becoming the left-wing counterpart of William Loeg's virulently rightist Manchester Union Leader.

No-Warning Raid Clause Kept In Narcotics Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate voted today to retain in a pending drug control bill a clause allowing federal narcotics agents to stage no-warning raids.

The action came as the Senate approved, 70 to 15, an amendment offered by Assistant Republican Leader Robert P. Griffin of Michigan.

The Griffin amendment to the administration-backed drug control bill permits issuance of such "no-knock" warrants, but adds some restrictions to ease doubts some senators have expressed that no-knock raids violate the Fourth Amendment's guarantee of privacy and protection from unreasonable search and seizure.

Moments before, the Senate beat back an attempt by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., to allow no-warning raids only if officers at the scene determined that without them vital evidence was certain to be destroyed.

Lab Equipment Stolen, UMass Crime Rate Rises

By RICHARD C. HANSON

Approximately $6000 worth of laboratory equipment was stolen from the Hasbrouck laboratories during the week-end before finals ended.

According to Chief Blasko of UMass Security, State Police have been working on the still unsolved case.

The stolen equipment was being used by a UMass Graduate student working towards his Doctorate. Chief Blasko said that the loss of the equipment could keep that student from completing his work.

The Chief expressed concern during a recent interview over the general rise of theft on campus. He termed this year's rise as "the worst in his career." Chief Blasko has been on the campus security force since the mid-thirties.

The people who broke into the lab apparently did not use force. Police suspect that a key was used.

Amherst College Will Hold Nuclear Hazards Conference

A conference on the Environmental Hazards of Nuclear Power will be held Saturday, December 20, 1969 at Fayerweather Hall, Amherst College, from 10:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. under the auspices of Save New England - Anti-Pollution League, Committee for Survival. It will be conducted by Dr. Irving Lyon Ph. D. Biology of Bennington College, with scientists and conservation resource people participating.

The conference in Amherst is open to the public and all interested persons are invited to attend. There is no registration fee. The Anti-Pollution League was organized in 1966 to prevent further pollution of the environment by citizen education and action programs. It is supported by voluntary contributions and makes no charge for Bulletins, literature reprints, speakers or consultation.

Time Change

Nuclear Energy 117 (Physic Dept.) has been changed from MWF 9:05 to MWF 2:30. The original classroom had a capacity for only 30-40 students, and because of the large number of enrollees was changed to a larger room (134 Hasbrouck). There is still room in the course.

King Council Establishes Committee on Environment

At a meeting held last Sunday, the Steering Committee of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council authorized the formation of a Committee on Environment, giving it an initial budget of $850. The committee proposal was submitted by Eugene Petit and Paul Spigel, with a formal support statement from Gil Salk.

The Committee on Environment will hold its first open meeting Thursday, February 5, at 7:00 p.m. in the New Hatch. Its advisor is Mr. Stanley Mikelk, who is chairman of the Executive Committee of the Western Mass. Group of the Atlantic Chapter of the Sierra Club. He is also the Amherst representative of Friends of the Earth.

One of the prime activities of the committee will be to set up UMass' participation in the nation-wide teach-in on the environment to be held April 22. The King Council has already contacted Environmental Teach-ins, Inc. in Washington, the national co-ordinators of the April 22 program, and Sen. Gaylord Nelson, the originator of the idea and long-time crusader for conservation.

Spigel, Peter Hawes, and Kenneth Mosakowski visited their offices on a recent trip to Washington, and Salk has been in contact with Andy Garling, NE Coordinator for Environmental Teach-ins, Inc.

"PURPOSE: The purpose of the Committee on Environment is to clarify and inform the students and citizens of Western Mass. of the disastrous consequences of the continuing rape of the world environment by private interests for the sake of personal profit. Somethings more is needed than a dose of American know-how: something more profound than sanitation is at stake. We boast of our affluence while we choke on our effluence. There is smog in San Francisco, sewage in the Hudson, DDT in our food, and decay in our cities. We can put a man on the moon, yet we may not breathe on earth.

"EDUCATION: We intend to distribute information on as many problems as possible through use of the mass media, lectures, pamphlets, newspapers, movies, and any other suitable means. On April 22, 1970 will occur a National Teach-In on the Environment and we will attempt to co-ordinate the activities throughout the area.

We will present the findings of our research to the student body and attempt to create participatory actions such as cleaning up a badly littered recreation area, forcing the University to install pollution devices on the power station refusing to allow autos on campus without pollution devices, etc. . ."

People interested in joining the Committee on Environment should either come to the Feb. 5 meeting or contact co-chairmen Gene Petit or Paul Spigel at the King Council office. The telephone numbers are 545-0648 and 545-0649.

The technology of moving things

That's right! Grumman's real business is the technology of moving things . . . men and machines in purposeful patterns within a great diversity of origins, destinations and tactical situations. Speed is often, but not always, the answer. Performance reliability—in spite of many interfaces—is the thing.

In areas of enemy activity—an aircraft with track and search radar that can locate, identify and lock on to the target, even in zero visibility . . . the A6A Intruder, and advanced versions.

In early warning emergencies—an aircraft that can extend the eyes and ears of a Navy task force at sea through radar and computers that alert interceptor aircraft to impending enemy attacks . . . the E2A Hawkeye, and advanced versions.

Far above the earth, a satellite that can discover more about the evolution of the universe . . . the Orbiting Astronomical Observatory.

Add Deep Submersibles, Hydrofoil seacraft, High-speed Ground Transportation systems, Corporate aircraft and Lunar Surface vehicles, and you get some idea of how Grumman is extending the perimeters of the technology of moving things.

Grumman Representatives will be on campus Feb. 3, 1970.

Reservists "Absent" For Long Hair; Restraining Order To Be Sought

BOSTON (AP) - Judge Anthony Julian has set Friday in U.S. District Court for a hearing to decide whether to issue a temporary restraining order against the Army Reserve for marking two reservists absent from meetings because they wear their hair long.

Michael J. Albano and John L. McLean, both 22 and both of Agawam, filed suit Tuesday claiming the Army reluctance to allow their long hair and moustaches violates their constitutional rights.

The men claim in their suit that as operators of a Pittsfield music store - The Newwave - they need a so-called mod appearance to attract customers.

The men have been marked absent on four occasions although they have actually attended reserve meetings and a fifth absence could result in their being called to active duty for two years, according to their attorney, Daniel Klubock of Boston.

He said the men will seek a declaratory judgement ordering the Army Reserve to allow them to remain in the unit without getting haircuts.

The men have been members of he 187th Infantry Brigade at Springfield for the past four years.

They claim they were told by the Army that if they could prove that 30 per cent of their income resulted from long hair then they could wear it.

The first meeting of Education of the Self, 222-522, sections 3 & 4 meets Thursday evening, January 29, at 7:30 in Mark's Meadow Auditorium; sections 1 & 2 meet Tuesday, February 3, at 7:30 in Mark's Meadow Auditorium.

The Octoputer

RCA's many-tentacled computer does time sharing plus regular computing. It's a generation ahead of its major competitor.

Once there were only monster computers that did big batch jobs like payrolls.
Then came the whirling dervishes of time sharing that let a lot of people work at once.
Now there's a new kind of creature that does time sharing and batch work together. So lots of people can use it—efficiently.
It's the Spectra 70/46. The Octoputer. There's nothing else quite like it on earth or under the sea.
The Octoputer's arms are long and strong. It sits in the middle of your company and reaches helping hands out in all directions. Suddenly, your company works harder. More of your people use the computer—solving more problems, finding more facts, writing more programs.
And it does your big batch jobs in its spare time.
The Octoputer does a real armload of work for a handful of change. Check the bills from your time-sharing services.

See if it's not more efficient to do the same work on your own Octoputer. And get batch processing, too. One more thing. The Octoputer concentrates on remote computing because that's what you're going to need—that's where the industry is going.
We got there first because communications is what RCA is famous for. It'll keep us ahead of our competition.
It can keep you ahead of yours. Step up to the Octoputer and shake hands hands hands hands hands hands ..

NU Students Protest Against GE Recruiters

BOSTON (AP) - An orderly group of about 200 youthful pickets demonstrated for about three hours outside a Northeastern University building today against the presence of General Electric Co. recruiters.

The protesters, paraded about the Northeastern campus for nearly three hours in defiance of a court order, then disbanded.

The pickets quit shortly before 1 p.m. They had carried signs criticizing GE because of a current national strike spanning 14 weeks.

From time to time they chanted such slogans as "strike-breaker; smash GE," and at one point a few demonstrators produced an American flag with a GE symbol where the field of stars should be. There were no arrests.

The protesters gathered first in the university quadrangle, then marched a short distance to the building housing Northeastern's placement office.

A picket line was set up, but no attempt was made to prevent students from keeping appointments with the GE recruiters inside.

Nearly 70 police officers, most of them off-duty Boston patrolmen hired by the university, kept watch. At one point an officer was hit with a snowball.

Later, the protesters marched to Northeastern's School of Criminal Justice, where police officers are trained. They returned afterward to the quadrangle, where they dispersed.

The court order was obtained by Northeastern last week after learning that several activist student groups planned to try to block the appearance of the GE recruiters as well as a speaking visit by San Francisco State College President S. I. Hayakawa Thursday night.

It enjoined six persons, identified by the university as leaders of the student groups, from proceeding with the protests.

Another hearing on the suit that produced the court order was held in Suffolk Superior Court Tuesday then was continued to Friday after a spokesman said some of the six hadn't been served.

Amherst, Mass. -- The University of Massachusetts art gallery, under Miss Roslyn Walker, its new director, has opened its first show and will run through Feb. 2.

The exhibit is Art Acquisitions 1968, works from the University's permanent collection. It is open to the public without charge, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

The 50 or more works, most of them drawings and graphics, were added to the University's permanent collection during 1968 by art acquisitions director and professor of art Walter Kamys, assisted by Dagmar Reutlinger. They were acquired by gift or through purchase from the Fine Arts Council and other trust funds. The gallery is in Room 123, Herter Hall.

The show has been assembled by the University's new art collection curator and gallery director, Roslyn Walker, who will teach the University's first course devoted exclusively to African art during the coming semester.

African art is Miss Walker's special field, one that's absorbed her since she was an undergraduate at Hampton Institute in Virginia. There she worked at the Hampton Institute Museum and came in contact with its extensive African art collection. "I found African art very exciting and quite different than anything I had studied," she said.

It is only in the most recent decades that African art has been studied in its full psychological, social, historic and aesthetic meaning, Miss Walker said. Basic to this meaning is the African's attempt to express in image form the unknown forces with which he has to deal in his daily life.

"It's never art for art's sake," she explained. "There's always another motive such as placating the ancestral spirits, culture heroes, or the founders of the tribe. It's also a religious kind of art and often one that can be made to support a political system. Miss Walker is working on an exhibit of African art, scheduled for the Herter Hall gallery at UMass in April.

Miss Walker left Hampton Institute in 1966 with a B. S. degree and went to Indiana University to work and study with Roy Sieber, a leading scholar in the field of African art. She holds an M.A. degree in Art History from Indiana.

In the summer of 1967 she helped plan a traveling exhibit on African art and culture in Detroit under the sponsorship of the Internation Afro-American Museum, Inc.

BOSTON (AP) - "I'm really tickled," Bruce Taylor said happily yesterday. "Honest, I couldn't be happier, not at all."

Taylor, at 6'1 and 190 pounds, was a Little All American defensive back and punt return specialist last season for Boston University. San Francisco, which had two first-round picks in the draft, selected him second.

Reached by telephone at his dormitory room a few minutes after the announcement, Taylor said being picked by San Francisco took him completely by surprise.

"I was thinking more in terms of the New York teams," he said. "I knew they needed defensive backfield help. I hadn't even thought about San Francisco."

Asked whether he thought he'd be happy playing for the 49'ers, taylor replied: "Yes, yes, definitely!"

Taylor is also regarded as an outstanding baseball player, and some of his friends have said in recent months that he was considering trying his hand at pro baseball, rather than pro football.

"Well, maybe so, at one point," he said yesterday. "But I've thought it out very carefully and I don't think baseball is in the picture anymore. I'm certain I'll be much happier playing football."

Pilots Try Once Again

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) - A unique plan for community ownership of the Seattle Pilots as a nonprofit corporation was presented to American League owners yesterday by city and Washington State officials, making a last-ditch attempt to keep the baseball club in Seattle.

The Seattle delegation said that the American League owners had asked no questions and made no commitment to them during an hour-long presentation in a resort hotel here.

Making the presentation was Edward E. Carlson, a Seattle hotel owner who heads the committee of business men that is seeking to turn the club into a nonprofit corporation.

He was joined by Gov. Daniel J. Evans of Washington, Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman, Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton, and King County Executive John Spellman.

Under the plan, all profits from Pilots' operations would be distributed to local and state cultural, educational and community service institutions.

"Any motive of private gain by the new ownership would be eliminated," said Carlson.

"Baseball would be treated as a sport, not a business."

Icemen Seek Rebound Against High Scoring Hamilton

Hoopsters Face Terriers Under Cage Bright Lights

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Hamilton College invades the homey confines of Orr Rink today for a 4 p.m. hockey match with coach Jack Canniff's Redmen. U-Mass will be seeking to bounce back from Sunday's 7-3 loss at the hands of Penn.

The Continentials, as they are known in the backwoods province of New York, figure to pose a stern challenge to the beleaguered Redmen who have yet to hit their proper stride for the season.

Kennedy added 40 assists to his point total to rank only three points behind the Division II leader. Overall, Hamilton ranked third in division scoring.

Mike Thomas, Bob Ridder, both juniors and soph Brian Morin form an experienced second line. Because Hamilton, by a peculiar quirk of fate, is allowed to skate freshman, Morin and several other sophs already have a year of varsity experience under their belts.

Three frosh are expected to play on the third line. Doug Janes, Rick Santa and Bob O'Connor, the lone American on this assemblage, are all fast skaters.

The defense, a weakness last year, reportedly has improved somewhat. In '69, Hamilton was third in most goals surrendered in the division.

Canniff was reticent in discussing the second half prospects for the young Redmen. "We can't look beyond this game but I am hoping for a rebound". Sophomore laden UMass presently carries a 3-4 record.

He is well aware of the offensive power of the Continentials. "They beat Vermont 8-2 and we lost to Vermont 3-2 in overtime. So where does that put us?"

P.J. Flaherty will probably get the starting nod in the nets for UMass although Canniff usually does not decide who will play until just before game time. At Penn, Bruce Crawford went in for Flaherty midway through the third period.

The Continentals should prove to be UMass' toughest opponent to date. In order to win, the Redmen will have to put it all together - play their best game of the year. They will have to cut down on their mistakes, play a solid checking game and clear the zone efficiently. A win would mean a lot in terms of prestige and morale.

UMass' award winning basketball schedule takes the Redmen into Curry Hicks Cage for their first home game in over a month tonight, when UMass meets Boston University at 8 p.m. The frosh preliminary between the two schools starts at 6 p.m.

Redmen hoop fans will welcome their favorites back for the first time since Dec. 16. And they will be viewing the game under newly installed lights that destroy that old time Cage murkiness. Such are the casualities of progress.

The Terrier-Redmen clash has all the features of a great contest. There is the revenge factor. (U-Mass got beaten up and raped at their loss in Boston a year ago.) It has the appearance of a family feud. (UMass coach Jack Leaman played his college ball at B.U.) There will be an individual battle between two of New England's biggest stars. (Julius Erving, 25 pts. 19 rebounds vs. Jimmy Hayes 27 pts and a national leader in field goal percentage.)

And in addition to all that, it will be a battle between two teams that have been in and out all season, but have the potential to be New England's best. In other words a battle of extreme importance to both teams.

SOPHOMORE guard John Bettancourt dribbles around pick set by no. 32 (guess who!) in Dec. 19 action at AIC. Bettancourt played well, scoring 16 points, but UMass lost heartbreaker, 73-72.

B.U. comes into the game with a 6-6 record, coming off a tough 90-81 loss in overtime to UConn. Hayes was injured during most of those losses, but the sparkling senior is back in form, as witness his 29 against UConn.

Hayes has a solid supporting cast with him. There is Marty Schopefer a bruising 6'5 forward, who leads the Terriers in rebounds, and has been an extremely accurate shooter when called upon by coach Charlie Luce. Schoefer is remembered well by UMass players who a year ago were belted all over the lot by the physical B.U. star.

Manning backcourt will be veteran Steve Gladstone, a dangerous scorer and sophomore and former Boston school boy star Lou Graham, who has scored in a couple of games in double figures.

UMass will be missing starting center Ken Mathias. The 6"7 junior is still feeling the effects of a flu attack and will have to sit out tonight. He will be replaced by senior Dick Samuelson.

Erving, will continue his quest for national rebound honors at one forward. Senior Jack Gallagher will start at the other corner post.

Captain Ray Ellerbrook and sophomore John Betancourt will start in the backcourt. Ellerbrook showed signs of coming out of his shooting slump with a big second half last Saturday night against Iona.

B.U. opened its season with a win over one of the New England biggies, Boston College. The Terriers have hopes of joining the area hoop elite and a win tonight could help them on their way.

UMass will have to shed its inconsistency to stop the tough Terriers.

NFL Holds The 'Good Draft'. Patriots Tab Olsen, Giants Choose Files

NEW YORK (AP) - Terry Bradshaw, a blond 6-foot-3 inch Little All-American quarterback from Louisiana Tech, was the No. 1 pick in the pro football draft yesterday while Steve Twens, the Heisman Trophy winner from Oklahoma, was 19th on the list.

Bradshaw was grabbed by the Pittsburgh Steelers who had a sad 1-13 won-lost record in the National Football League in 1969.

Three of the first round draftees were from Oklahoma - Steve Zabel No. 6, a tight end selected by Philadelphia, Jim Flies No. 13 a linebacker taken by the New York Giants, and Owens, the running back who led the major colleges in rushing and scoring and gained 3,867 yards and scored 56 touchdowns during his career. Detroit took Owens 6-2, 215, as an inside runner.

Mike MCoy, the 6-5, 270 pound defensive end from Notre Dame was the second man drafted. Green Bay got McCoy as a result of their trade of running back Elijah Pitts, linebacker Leroy Caffey and center Bob Hyland to Chicago for the Bears' first round pick.

Cleveland's surprising deal with Miami Monday night in which the Browns sent Paul Warfield, their ace wide receiver, to the Dolphins for a first round draft pick, resulted in the Browns' selection of Mike Phipps, Purdue's All ' American quarterback who threw 23 touchdown passes last season.

The Boston Patrios, who don't know where they will play in 1970 now that Harvard has turned down their bid for use of its stadium, selected Phil Olsen, 6-5,255, an All-American defensive end from Utah State and brother of Merlin Olsen of the Los Angeles Rams.

Three running backs were drafted before Owens. St. Louis took Larry Stegent, 6-1,196-of Texas A & M. Denver went for Bob Anderson, 6-0, 208, Colorado's All American. Baltimore grabbed Norm Bulaich, 6-0,216, of Texas Christian before Detroit picked Owens. The other running back in the first round was Duane Thomas of West Texas State, taken by Dallas.

Chicago appeared to have decided to rely on veterans and traded away both their first and second round rights.

Three teams had two picks in the first round. The Packers wound up with McCoy and Rich Mc George, a Little All-American tight end from Elon College in North Carolina.

Cleveland picked Phipps and Bob McKay 6-5, 245, an all-American tackle from Texas.

San Francisco, which had Washington's No. 1 from last year's deal for Walter Rock, took Bruce Taylor, a defensive back from Boston University, after using their own pick for Cedrick Hardman, a 6-3, 240 defensive end from North Texas State.

The first wide receiver drafted was Ken Burroughs of Texas Southern, 6-5,215, who went to New Orleans as the 10th pick in the first round. The first line-backer was John Small of The Citadel, 6-4, 230, by Atlanta as No. 12 in the first.

Guard Doug Wilkerson of North Carolina Central went to Houston, a tribute to the intensive scouting system now in vogue.

Mike Reid, Penn State's 6-3, 240 defensive tackle went to Cincinnati as the seventh pick shortly after Buffalo had created a mild surprise by taking Al Cowlings, 6-5,245, defensive end from Southern California.

Pats Not Long For Boston

BOSTON (AP) - The homeless Patriots will not be in Boston next year unless there is a suitable football stadium available by March 15, the club president, William H. Sullivan Jr., said Tuesday.

"Time is running out and we have to be realistic," Sullivan said as he asked the state legislature to "explore any course" which might lead his National Football League team to a big enough stadium.

Sullivan spoke at a hearing of the Federal Finance Assistance Committee, on a bill which would authorize the state to take Harvard's stadium by eminent domain.

Harvard sent a letter to the Patriots Monday saying it would not lease its stadium to the team because of the "fundamental incompatability which results when professional and amateur athletic activities use the same facility."

Meanwhile, Gov. Francis W. Sargent told a news conference that Harvard's decision was "very unfortunate," and he hoped it could be reversed.

But he said he did not see how we could sign legislation calling for taking of the stadium by eminent domain.

"I don't see how you can justify taking the stadium for public purposes with the Patriots using it 8 or 10 or 12 days a year," he said.

He said he favored using persuasion on Harvard "short of using the heavy arm of eminent domain."

House Upholds Veto Of Spending Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon won his budget battle with Congress Wednesday when House Democrats failed to override his veto off a $19.7 billion health and education money bill.

The White House promptly let it be known that it would be willing to accept increases totalling $448 million over Nixon's budget request in place of the $1.2 billion added by Congress in the vetoed bill.

The 226-191 vote in favor of overriding the veto was 52 votes short of the two-thirds majority needed, far more than even Republican leaders had forecast. The result was final, with no Senate action needed.

Nixon's position that the bill was inflationary was supported by 156 Republicans and 35 Democrats. Only 27 Republicans voted to override, along with 199 Democrats. Last month 86 Republicans voted for the increased spending despite a warning the bill would be vetoed.

The action left Congress with the task of acting quickly on a substitute bill to provide funds for the Departments of Labor and of Health, Education, and Welfare for the current fiscal year which has only five months to run.

At the White House, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon was very pleased at the support he received.

"He also was pleased that a substantial number of members of the House were willing to stand up and be counted on a major national priority - getting prices under control," Ziegler told reporters.

To demonstrate his gratitude to the 191 members who voted to uphold his veto, Nixon invited them to the White House so he could express his appreciation in person.

Ziegler said there would be a reception for the presidential backers Wednesday evening in the presidential quarters - a private reception with no news converage.

In order to forestall another attempt by the Democratic majority to beef up the bill beyond Nixon's budget, Republican leaders proposed a simple solution: leave the money figures as they are and add language saying Nixon doesn't have to spend any more than he wants to.

The idea, suggested by Nixon himself in his veto message, found support among some Democrats, including Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that will have to bring out another bill.

Flood, who plans to convene his panel Thursday to decide what it wants to do, said he will propose such a solution then. The ranking minority member, Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., also endorsed it.

One of Nixon's major arguments in his veto message was that formulas fixed in the education aid laws require him to spend the money. Previous administrations have held that Congress cannot compel the executive branch to spend money and other presidents have frequently impounded funds appropriated by Congress.

The key to acceptance of any plan to give Nixon discretion over spending levels would be a firm understanding by the members of just what he would be willing to spend.

Caswell Approval Appears Assured

WASHINGTON (AP) - Supreme Court nominee G. Harold Carswell completed his Senate testimony Wednesday, hailed as a "legal scholar" and apparently assured of confirmation.

Disavowing again any racial prejudice, the federal appeals court judge glided through his second and final day as a witness before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Two persistent committee liberals, Sens. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., caused what little difficulty Carswell experienced. They kept asking him why he had bought a share of stock in an all-white country club in Tallahassee in 1955.

Carswell doodled on a scrap of paper while they probed. Replying with only a trace of heat, he said he did not have racial segregation in mind when he contributed $100.

"What I put in was for no racial purpose." And, he said, the private group quickly folded returning $76 to him. Finally Hugh Scott, R-Pa., rallied to Carswell's aid.

Setting aside the heavy pipe he had smoked placidly through the exchanges with Bayh and Kennedy, Scott declared:

Kennedy insisted that he and Bayh were pursuing a "legitimate line of inquiry."

But they had no more questions. The committee chairman, Sen. James O. Eastland, said, "Call the next witness."

The next witness was former Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida, an admirer and former law associate of Carswell.

Collins, who is from Tallahassee, told the committee he also contributed $100 to the country club and that he didn't feel he "was doing anything wrong."

"Judge Carswell is no racist," Collins said. "He is no white supremacist. He is no segregationist. I am convinced of this."

Senate Passes Drug Bill, Some Penalties Lessened

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Wednesday overwhelmingly approved a comprehensive drug control bill after defeating attempts to change its dominant law-enforcement character.

Final passage came on an 82 to 0 roll call vote moments after the Senate rejected a bid to reduce federal penalties for persons convicted on a second or subsequent charge of possessing marijuana.

Earlier attempts to place more stress on the scientific and medical aspects of drug addiction were beaten back by supporters of the bill.

The Senate defeated, on a 58-24 roll call vote, an amendment which would have cut by half the severity of prison sentences for the second and subsequent convictions for possession and distribution of marijuana.

It rejected, on a 56-32 roll call vote, a bid to allow the secretary of health, education and welfare, not the attorney general, to have the prime role in naming members of a new marijuana research commission.

And it turned back, 44 to 39, an attempt to give HEW scientists a stronger voice in determining which drugs should be classified as dangerous under schedules which outline control procedures and penalties for use and distribution.

The administration-backed bill already contains penalties for certain drug abuses less severe than existing law.

For the first time it would allow a judge the option of placing first and second offenders on probation.

Some Senate observers say this marks a realization that drugs are infiltrating middle class neighborhoods and suburbs where they are used by normally law abiding persons.

But it sharply differentiates between the relatively casual users and the criminals who profit from the drug traffic.

Draft Director Named

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House said Wednesday that Charles DiBona a naval analysis expert in private business, has been offered the post of Selective Service director.

But a final decision, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters, has not been reached.

Senate sources reported earlier in the day he had been chosen.

He would step into a post, if the appointment goes through, which retiring Gen. Lewis B. Hershey has held since World War II. Hershey is stepping down Feb. 16.

DiBona already has discussed the appointment with the senior members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which would consider his nomination by President Nixon.

Price Increase in Early 70's

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government's first price report of 1970 showed a sharp jump in wholesale prices in January, offering little support for Nixon administration predictions for an early slowdown in inflation.

The Labor Department reported Wednesday a rise of seven-tenths of one per cent in its Wholesale Price Index measuring farm products, processed foods and feeds and a broad range of industrial raw materials.

It was the largest monthly jump in eight months in wholesale prices, which generally show up later in higher living costs, and continued 1969's worst inflation in 20 years. It was the second highest one-month rise in some four years.

War News

"We Must Not Expect Too Much"

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of the Air Force Robert C. Seamans Jr. reported Wednesday the South Vietnamese will be able to take over half of the air war in Vietnam by the end of next year.

The South Vietnamese currently fly 25 per cent of the allied air sorties, he said, and will be capable of doubling this rate "in the next year and three quarters."

Seamans, who recently returned from a 10-day inspection trip to Southeast Asia, told reporters the South Vietnamese are progressing satisfactorily in making the first major improvements to their 15-year-old air force.

"We must not expect too much," Seamans cautioned, "there may be setbacks from time to time."

But Seamans praised the quality of South Vietnam's pilots, saying some have flown more than 3,000 sorties. He said the Vietnamese air force's operational readiness compares favorably with that of the United States.

The Air Force chief said he is further encouraged by South Vietnam's plan to assume full control this summer of its own air control center, a facility located in IV Corps, the southern most region of the country.

Pentagon officials said Seamans was speaking both of a doubling of aircraft as well as pilots in South Vietnam.

The South Vietnamese now have operational 20 air squadrons with approximately 17,000 pilots, mechanics and other personnel.

Squadrons have about 20 planes. The United States provides the aircraft as well as the training for the air crews.

Seamans said the South Vietnamese will be getting additional quantities of aircraft they already possess, mentioning the relatively simple-to-operate F5 fighter, the subsonic A37 bomber and the propeller-driven A1.

The secretary did not indicate how many of each type plane the United States would be providing.

About 4,000 U. S. airmen have been withdrawn from Vietnam by the Nixon administration, leaving around 56,000.

Seamans acknowledged that the U. S. Air Force will have to be flying support missions for South Vietnam for some time in the future but he declined to predict if and when bombing attacks by the big B52 bombers would end.

U.S. Denies Charges Of Viet Censorship

SAIGON (AP) - The U. S. Command issued a denial Wednesday of charges that unfavorable news reports are censored by the Armed Forces Vietnam Network.

At the same time, American officials disclosed that two U. S. government agents posing as newsmen had withdrawn from the Saigon press corps after their identity had been revealed. The U. S. Military Assistance Command for Vietnam said those responsible for issuing press credentials to the two agents "have been admonished concerning the proper procedures to follow in accreditation."

In a summary of an investigation of the censorship charges, the command said the only reports banned from AFVN programming are those which either would give information of value to the enemy or offend the South Vietnamese government.

This is not censorship, but rather "editorial selection" based on a "prudent exercise of judgment," the command said.

It added that such a practice does not preclude the use of items unfavorable to South Vietnam, the United States or the armed forces.

Landlord - Tenant Relations Group Proposed for Amherst

Members of the Rent Control Study Committee voted unanimously Monday night to present to the March Town Meeting a warrant article to establish a Committee on Landlord-Tenant Relations and to "raise $500 for the use of that committee as specified in the by-law." The action followed a rather tepid public hearing on the issue, as residents and members of the study committee expressed their hopes for the grievance board as a public forum for mediation of rental disputes.

Most of the more than 25 residents attending the session expressed some uncertainty about the effectiveness of the proposed board, in light of its complete lack of invested judicial powers. Chairman Arnold Collery, who expressed similar doubts, emphasized that the promise of the committee lies in the possibility of solving landlord-tenant problems openly. Another member of the study committee, Denison Jones, endorsed the proposal as a means of bettering public relations, and he indicated that the strength of the committee could lie in the power of its public nature.

Tenant David Berliner of 50 Meadow Street, and UMass graduate student Paul C. Killam, also lent approval to the proposed measure. Berliner indicated that grievances could be settled amicably before the committee, "rather than with public hostilities," and that legal actions might thus be avoided.

Killam, who is chairman of the Graduate Student SENATE Housing Committee, said the value of the committee might lie in "very quickly proving just how great the problem is in Amherst," and in its ability to solve disputes involving security deposits, damages or services. He told the hearing, however, that the real problem in Amherst is not the rents being charged for the kind of housing being built, but rather the lack of low-cost housing.

"Students don't need tennis courts, swimming pools, dishwashers and air conditioners," Killam said, "and most students don't want these things. The market is not meeting the real need for low-cost housing. Perhaps the grievance board will be able to re-direct the type of housing being built in Amherst."

Jones joined Patrick Kamins in replying from the apartment owners point of view that not only do Amherst laws prohibit construction of apartment complexes without such recreational facilities as Killam mentioned, but also "most Amherst residents do not want lower-priced projects, such as the units being built in Sunderland."

Jones differentiated between "low priced" and "low-cost," the latter term meaning high-quality apartments renting at low cost because of rent subsidies.

Some discussion revolved around the study committee's recommendation that the committee include "five members plus two alternates to be appointed by the Board of Selectmen.

"One member shall be a landlord, one member will be a tenant, and three members shall be neither tenants nor landlords, but representatives of the public interest," the by-law reads.

Berliner argued for two tenant representatives, to ensure that both the long-term tenant body of professionals and workers, and the transient tenant body of students, would be represented on the committee.

William A. Ezbicki, on the other hand, called for specifications to ensure that the three "representatives of the public interest" be property owners.

Members of the board replied to Berliner that to create two positions for tenant representatives would mean enlarging the committee to permit two landlord representatives as well, "in the interest of fairness."

Ezbicki was told that the by-law specification is adequate in delineating the categories of committee members for advancement of the public interest.

At the recommendation of Attorney Winthrop S. Dakin, the study committee specified that each member's term would be of three years, and that these terms would be staggered by the Board of Selectmen.

The warrant article would establish the committee for a "trial period" of one year, and the subject of the committee's further existence would be placed on the warrant for next year's town meeting. The study committee members stated that the requested $500 appropriation is for clerical and postage expenses, and that the amount would probably not be used up in the course of the committee's first year.

NES Provides Tutoring For Children in Spfld

The Northern Education Service program for UMass volunteer tutots will start Feb. 2. N.E.S. provides a tutorial service for children in economically deprived areas of Springfield.

The N.E.S. bus will be picking up volunteers Monday thru Thursday at 2:30 and 6:30 in front of the Whitmore Administration Building. Tutors from last semester are encouraged by NES to continue in the program adjusting their tutoring session to their new schedule.

Volunteer tutors who were not assigned last semester can participate in the program. There are several reasons why these tutors were not used. There is an overabundance of tutees needing elementary math and reading tutoring in the afternoon. Many tutors have signed up for evening sessions and subjects different from the need. Volunteers are asked to update their registration data with the above in mind. This problem and an often nonfunction bus has hampered the program.

The new semester does not promise to eliminate these problems but add new ones. Now administrators are being sought for the program at the university. These bureaucrats will be confronted with a transportation, recruiting, publicity and possible money problem.

Volunteer tutors and organizers can stop by the Martin Luther King Council Office in 207 Hampshire House or call 545-0648 or 545-0649.

New and unassigned tutors may take the initiative and go to Springfield for a tutoring session if they are not contacted in a few weeks. Other volunteers may leave their name at the King Council office. They will be contacted in the immediate future.

Law School Applications Up

The new draft lottery system is just one reason why law school admissions will become even more competitive in the 1970's, according to an admissions consultant.

William Henderson, consultant for the Law School Placement Service in Hartford, Conn., predicts that the lottery, combined with the withdrawal of troops from Vietnam and a reduction in the over-all size of American armed forces, will result in a substantial increase in law school applications in the early 1970's.

"Not only has the lottery removed much of the uncertainty about the draft for a substantial number of students but the draft call has been reduced by 25,000 for 1970," Henderson said.

"One well-known law school," he said, "reports that the number of applicants rose from 2,000 in 1963 to a projected 5,500 in 1970."

"That kind of competition," he said, "is responsible for an increase in the level of quality of pre-law students who look for assistance from an organization like the Law School Placement Service.

Airlines Issued Summonses, Must Stop Pollution

NEW YORK (AP) - Eighteen domestic airlines serving Kennedy and LaGuardia airports were issued summonses Wednesday by the state attorney general's office, charging them with polluting the air.

Allan N. Smiley, assistant attorney general in charge of the special prosecutions' bureau, said the summonses asked for temporary and permanent injunctions against all the domestic airlines. The summonses are returnable in State Supreme Court within 20 days, Smiley said.

Action Lab to Hold Confab For Education of Dropouts

ACTION LAB for the Education of High School Dropouts has called a conference at Mahar Auditorium, SBA, this weekend on the topic "University and Community."

The purpose of the meeting is to explore concrete programs of action and service where university people can work with community organizers and Shakers from the area.

Edward F. Carpenter, Headmaster of Harlem Preparatory School, will talk on "Community Like It Really Is," and Peter Wagschal, Schl. of Ed., UMass., will offer ideas about "The University in Community Service." Representatives from community organizations in Holyoke, Springfield, Northampton, Boston and Pittsfield will speak in seminars with committee and organization representatives from within the UMass community.

Record Number Of Babies Born In Volkswagens

Thirty-one babies helped set a new record last year when they turned their parents' Volkswagens into mobile delivery rooms by being born in them on the way to hospital maternity wards.

The previous record high was set in 1968. Twenty-eight VWs were turned into fast-moving baby carriages then as the same number of harried fathers-to-be aimed their cars for maternity wards only to find that they had started their trips anywhere from a few hundred yards to several miles too late.

Last year's 31 victories in VWs baby sweepstakes not only set an all-time record for "Mr. Stork," but brought to more than 150 the number of little ones who arrived before their parents' VWs did.

ACTION LAB, motivator of the conference, is a dozen-member group of graduates and undergraduates that came together in the fall semester of 1969 with a desire to create and further programs for the education of high school dropouts. Already they have become involved in several programs: members made study trips to the New York City street academies and one worked at the Harlem Preparatory School whose student body consists only of high school dropouts.

ACTION LAB is presently investigating means of establishing street academies in Holyoke and Springfield with the cooperation of local community organizations and the UMass Schl. of Ed.

Prisons are another program objective for some members of ACTION LAB. There is a high percentage of high school dropouts among the people behind bars, and educational opprtunities are either entirely lacking or grossly inadequate in most prisons.

ACTION LAB is looking for students and faculty who are interested in action to educate high school dropouts. All students are welcome to attend the conference and join a program.

U.S. Troops Find 4 Tons Of Ammunition

SAIGON (AP) - U. S. troops searching through a huge enemy arms cache in the jungles north west of Saigon, uncovered another 2 1/2 tons of arms and nearly 250,000 rounds of ammunition, American headquarters said Wednesday.

The new find raised to more than four tons the amount of weaponry dug up in the area in the past two days. The stockpile, along with two other big ones unearthed north of Saigon earlier this week, increased suspicions that the enemy is building up for a new offensive during the Tet festival of the lunar new year on Feb. 6.

President Nguyen Van Thieu indicated Wednesday he will proclaim a cease-fire for the Tet holiday. Allied sources said the stand-down probably would be for 24 hours, but the presidential statement said a decision had not been made because the government "still needs to observe the situation."

This was an apparent reference to the anticipated enemy attacks. The Viet Cong already has declared a four-day cease-fire starting Feb. 5. The enemy broke its own cease-fire during the 1968 Tet to launch its biggest offensive of the war, catching the allies off guard.

Amherst Dean Writes Letter to Students

At Amherst College, a student died by falling 70 feet off the roof of a dormitory; he had earlier taken a trip on LSD. George Mountcastle was a Harvard University sophomore from Baltimore who was visiting an Amherst friend Oct. 11. State police have arrested another Amherst student on charges of selling the LSD to the visitor. But to Amherst's dean of students, Robert A. Ward, there was a particular agony about the tragedy that was personal. In a letter to his students, Dean Ward tried to express it. His letter follows:

He was not an Amherst man; he was a visitor. But his death occurred in our community, and we shared in the loss. We were shocked by the tragedy and stunned by the senselessness of it. He was young and bright - too bright to surrender his life in the foolish madness blighting a generation. In a week in which we paused to reflect on the waste of life half a world away, it may have been a strange irony that we were starkly faced with meaningless death on our own campus. But that week is nearly gone - and memory fades.

I will rehearse the statements made in the past about drugs. Many of us for some time have been apprehensive that a tragedy would come - and last Saturday night it did. Repeated warnings had gone unheeded; it couldn't happen here. I only wish those who ignored those warnings could have spent part of that horrible night waiting in Cooley Dickinson Hospital while the student's life ebbed or part of Sunday afternoon in my office while his parents struggled to comprehend the reality of that day.

I did not become a dean to watch a generation of students pollute their sanity or distort their lives, and I confess to a numbing and depressing sense of helplessness. Words are inadequate and deeds seem fruitless. More than ever students have taken on themselves the individual responsibility which shapes their lives in all areas. It should be so, but the judicious exercise of such responsibility demands wisdom. I see no wisdom at all in the growing and indiscriminate use of drugs. I also see a danger that one major tragedy may obscure other tragedies, smaller perhaps but no less frightening. On a beautiful Saturday afternoon which was in itself a natural stimulant, why the need for some artificial or uncertain drug? And where were we all on that night or on any night and when will we awake to the need to replace a disinterested privatism with a sustained concern for troubled people in our community? And why do we tolerate in our midst the profiteers of poison? And by what moral right do we pass into the hands of others substances which can threaten their well-being.

BILL COSBY...
IS A VERY FUNNY FELLOW — RIGHT!

Run, Run, Run

Yesterday this nation's internal well being was callously threatened with the U. S. House of Representatives failure to over ride President Nixon's veto of the Health, Education, and Welfare bill.

The effects are obvious and anxiety producing. The President's political image got a shot in the arm after the disastrous Haynsworth nonsense. This victory coupled with the expected confirmation of the Carswell appointment to the Supreme Court can only strengthen Nixon's and Attorney General John Mitchell's "Southern Strategy."

This is the major source of anxiety. The continuation of this strategy can only mean that this country's most pressing problems (which are mostly urban related) will continue to be "ignored."

Apparently Mr. Nixon is looking forward to 1972. And as Herblock whose cartoon appears on this page, charges the HEW bill just wouldn't have produced the votes. Perhaps Herblock is too harse but Mr. Nixon's continued devotion to campaign pledges to the South and West (which some people like myself thought, hoped, he would forget one in office) seem to resemble running for office mo e than discharging of duties.

Mr. Nixon has been running for the Presidency, in one way or another, since at least 1958. Maybe this is the only thing he knows how to do.

In The Night

Law n'Ordure is here, kiddies. Your wonderful, wise, forsighted Senators and Congressmen have moved once again for your protection. And they have taken away yet another segment of your private rights and freedom. If THE LAW suspects that you have some nasty, horrible drugs in your little housie, and if they think you're malicious enough to try and protect yourself from the enforcers, by flushing it down the toilet, then they want to come right in and look for it without even politely asking at the door.

It seems they can enter by stealth, or even when you're not there. It means they can get a warrent if they merely suspect that drugs may be present.

I have a question: What determines adequate evidence for the friendly narcotics officer to obtain a warrant to enter and search your house? Could it be long hair, a party, flowers on the window panes, or "disorderly persons" entering the premises? If a policeman doesn't like some activity that's going on in a neighborhood then it's likely he can lie to get a warrant and an excuse to enter and destroy("accidentally in searching") an underground news - paper, a neighborhood organizing center, or some political group.

Immunity against unauthorized searches used to be one of our fundamental rights. It was instituted because the people didn't like British soldiers entering their homes and searching. That was just after the first American Revolution.

Stay in Line, Or . . .

Nothing comes as a surprise anymore, at least (and I mean at least) registration. But what unnerves me are the masses of people moving across streets into lines, up stairs, flowing into more lines, and filtering out into chairs to write their names on cards for further filing. They want to become part of the system. They ask for it, this system. Their fathers and mothers or they themselves pay for it, fight for it, push for it, shove for it, and finally sign for it. For What?

I want to know why people come to the University. I want to be told or better yet, not told, but see why they come; why they should come. I want to be silent and observe the faces smiling in long lines, and knowing what they wait for is worthy of their waiting. I want to have a sense of happiness in these crowds at school I want to hear purposeful questions, questions which go beyond cumulative averages and grades, beyond competition, and perhaps, into other lives, into their worlds. I want to feel no anxiety in waiting to begin the term, but only assurances of purpose as one waits.

But at registration, I can only smell the ink of ditto papers and IBM cards. I can only see frowns on worried faces. I only hear remarks of better grades than others or lost reports and computer mistakes. Overcome by people fearing a possibly cruel system, wanting to turn and shout "Back" one moves quietly through the lines. And no one could hear you above the noise anyway.

I am silent as I sign my name, silent perhaps from four years' waiting in lines, silent because of "questions" and no one asking other questions or giving other answers, silent because of too many mechanical helloes and no time for more, silent because of plastic relationships and paper ideologies, silent because of the other "silent majority" and silent because conformity is safe, secure and mindless.

Nixon!?

Well, well, well. President Wallace - er, I mean Nixon - has done it again. He wants to have copies of editorials about Him and His Administration sent to the White House for perusal by His enforcers - uh, advisers. Why, you ask, would He, the omniscient President of the United States of America, want to read what people say about him. Good question. Especially since He has chosen to disregard the voices of dissent, be they in a minority or (perish the thought) the majority. Perhaps you think He is an egomaniac. That is absurd. Just because He has remodeled His office with two hundred and thirty-two square feet of mirrors and is writing a book entitled WHY AMERICA NEEDS NIXON to be published in 283 languages and 5,8 billion first-run copies is no reason for thinking of Him as an egomaniac. The explanation offered is that He wants to control the media. That argument is absurd. Only the military-industrial complex controls the media. Nixon may control the military-industrial complex, but obviously He believes in free speech, free press, and the right to dissent from the majority, as He recently did Himself when he opposed the majority on the Vietnam question. Therefore, He could not possibly want to control the media.

The answer is simple. All He wants is to be left alone to be King of the Realm of America, and is interested in reading occasional blurbs from the Peasant Press.

Trained Student Firemen

Work for Campus and Town

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

Remember back in the days when you were a kid and you wanted to be a fireman. Little known on campus is the fact that the University of Massachusetts Volunteer Fire Department, staffed exclusively by UMass students, is the first defense against fire for the University and the backbone of the Amherst Town Fire Department.

Fighting fires, without pay, is only part of the job taken on by the 21 students who man and officer two of Amherst's four fire engines. Their duties range from running fire drills in all the University dorms and checking for fire hazards therein, to standing by at all football games, basketball games, concerts, and performances at University halls with rescusitators and first aid.

To become full fledged members of the fire department the students must undergo intensive training. Some training is handled by the students themselves with overall supervision by the University Fire and Safety Officer and the Amherst Town Fire Chief.

The students act as call men for the permanent town force. When a serious fire occurs, Amherst will first send its regular pumper. The next two engines to be called are those manned by the UMass students.

The headquarters for the UMass volunteers is in 107 Chadbourne House. Interested persons are always welcome to join. The training period for becoming a full member of the force is sixteen weeks, but even trainees fight fires. The job is not entirely without compensation. Full members receive parking privileges and are paid for working concerts and performances in University halls.

Federal Grant Supports Wetland Study, UM Specialists to Prepare Guidelines

A team of researchers from the University of Massachusetts has begun a study designed to establish working guidelines for public management of freshwater wetlands.

"The State Legislature in Massachusetts has recognized the importance of wetlands in man's environment by passing laws which restrict and regulate man's uses of wetlands," explained study chairman Joseph S. Larson, associate professor of forestry and wildlife management. "The problem is how to make decisions on wetland management given four or five different factors. We're hoping to come up with a framework for logical decision-making in view of the many factors involved," Dr. Larson added.

To deal with these factors, the project will call on specialists from a number of University areas. Water supply specialist Ward S. Motts of the geology department will investigate the relation of fresh water wetlands to present and potential water supplies.

Two environmental planners from the landscape architecture department, Walter Cudnohufsky and Julius Fabos, will study esthetic values - what recreational and visual factors must be weighed in wetland management.

The problem of finding a set of specific guidelines on how wetlands support wildlife will be studied by Dr. Larson and William P. Mac Connell of the forestry and wildlife management department.

John H. Foster, a resource economist from the department of agriculture and food economics, will study the economic considerations - the value of wetlands to people through such uses as waste disposal and landfill, plus water, wildlife and esthetics.

The project is supported by a $62,000 grant from the federal government through the UMass Water Resources and Research Center, plus additional support from the Massachusetts Department of Natural Resources, Water Resources Commission and Division of Fisheries and Game.

It will concentrate on Massachusetts freshwater wetlands but is expected to have implications for a large area of the country. "The whole question of the value of wetlands and public regulation is one that applies to all of the eastern states," Dr. Larson said.

Band Service Group Invites New Members

A new fraternity formed at the University of Massachusetts to promote the welfare of the University Bands program will soon celebrate its first anniversary. Dedicated to unholding and improving the high standards of musicianship and leadership of the band members, twelve men were initiated last spring into the Epsilon Nu chapter of the national honorary band service fraternity, Kappa Kappa Psi.

Although the chapter is less than one year old, it has made great strides promoting band and campus spirit. Kappa Kappa Psi's most active period occurred during the football season when the Marching Band performed. Last fall, Epsilon Nu chapter provided services to the band which contributed to its high spirit at the stadium. Epsilon Nu's sister chapter of Tau Beta Sigma, made up of women from the bands, joined Kappa Kappa Psi in many essential projects to help the bands.

Now that Kappa Kappa Psi has established its identity on the UMass campus, members have decided to expand their chapter. So that prospective new members may become acquainted with the goals of the fraternity, a smoker for all eligible bandsmen will be held Friday, February 6, at 7:30 p.m. in Old Chapel Auditorium.

Randolph Kicks the Habit And Pays for It to Boot

RANDOLPH, MASS. (AP) - "Light up a student's future, not a cigarette," says the sign on the main road into town.

It heralds a community-wide campaign to get local residents who smoke to quit for a day and donate the money they would have spent on cigarettes to a college scholarship fund.

The idea was that of Arthur P. Mullaney Jr., guidance director for the public school system here.

"Everything I've heard indicates there will be less federal money for college loans available this year," he said recently, a cigarette in one hand.

"I tried to think of something that might help offset this, and I thought of the 'smoke-out'."

Mullaney, a Rotarian, got the local Rotary Club behind him, then approached school officials. Everybody liked the idea.

Seniors at Randolph High School enthusiastically took up the project and decided to hold the smoke-out Feb. 18 during a school vacation.

"On the morning of Feb. 18," Mullaney said, "the students will go from door to door with smoke-out buttons and containers to collect money.

"They will ask people to take the buttons and give up smoking for the day and contribute to the scholarship fund. There will be other students on the streets, passing out buttons and asking for contributions, and there will be containers in all the stores."

"We've got 25 team captains," he said, "and all the students want to participate."

They already are diligently making signs advertising the campaign as well as the collection containers, Mullaney said.

The goal is $7,000, but Mullaney said he's making no predictions on whether it will be reached.

While there are about 30,000 residents here, no one knows how many of them smoke, so nobody knows if the $7,000 can be collected even if the drive is 100 per cent effective. The money that is collected will be banked for use by college students from the community.

Mullaney said that after completing their appointed rounds the night of Feb. 18, the pupils will report to the high school auditorium, where their collections will be tallied.

"It will be like announcing election returns," he said.

"We even hope to have the high school band there, and our theme songs that night will be 'On a Clear Day' and 'Smoke Gets in Your Eyes'."

Upcoming Free Lectures

N.E. Economy To Expand More Slowly

BOSTON (AP) - The New England economy almost certainly will expand more slowly than the national average in 1970, but the result should not be crippling, says New England Council President Gilbert H. Hood.

Writing in a special economic review supplement in Wednesday's Boston Herald Traveler, Hood said one of the sectors where the regional outlook is most dismal this year is home building.

However, he added, "the beginnings of an oil refining industry and associated petrochemical operations in New England is now a very real possibility, something our consumers - both family and industrial - have badly needed for years."

He pointed specifically to the proposed construction of an oil refinery in Machiasport, Maine, and the opening of the hereto - fore unnegotiable Northwest Passage last year by the mammoth tanker Manhattan.

Both, Hood said, bring "great promise for New England in the '70s."

Movies Change Rating System

Because the public seems to be confused about the meaning of the word "mature", the motion-picture industry has changed its year-old rating system.

A survey of some 2600 people, conducted by the Opinion Research Corp.of Princeton, N.J., revealed that about one person in thirteen actually understood the admissions policy for "M" rated films. This category seemed to be the least-understood of the system.

As a result of this survey, the Motion Picture Association decided that revision was in order. The "M" category, which was defined as "for mature audiences, parental discretion advised", has been dropped, and in its place will be a new category, labeled "GP". This rating means all ages will be admitted, with parental guidance suggested.

Another change, which will not affect Massachusetts moviegoers, raises the age restriction on "R" and "X" pictures from 16 to 17. in Massachusetts, the age restriction on these films is 18.

Organization spokesmen said the basic system will not change.

The purpose is to rate films for children, to furnish guides to parents to decide on the movie-going of their children. The system does not rate films for adults nor does it pass on the quality or artistry of a film."

The new ratings, which will go into effect March 1, now read:

G. All ages admitted. General audiences.

GP. All ages admitted. Parental guidance suggested.

R. Restricted. Under 17 (18 in Mass.) requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

"Godot" Comes to UM

The Roister-Doisters, who have in past years presented plays like "A Man for All Seasons" and "Barefoot in the Park," are now rehearsing their next production, "Waiting for Godot". The Nobel prize winning play by Samuel Beckett will run February 4-7 in Bowker Auditorium, curtain time 8:30 p.m.

This student-run organization has chosen one of the first absurd pieces of the theatre as their yearly project. Most of the cast members are theatre majors. They hope to present Beckett's play in a natural, straightforward manner to get the playwright's messages of Life, Death, and Salvation across to the audience.

Pedro Silva, the director, feels that the play is a "microcosm of man's condition on earth", and raises many questions about life. It is a play with "no real statements, but contradictions and questions, ambiguities."

The admittedly theatrical presentation, containing both serious and comic moments, has a cast well-known to University Theatre audiences. David Zucker (Pozzo), Joel Wilkins (Vladimir), Bill Over (Estragon), and Brian Marsh (Lucky), have been seen in many UT productions, including the recent "Good Woman of Setzuan" and "Danton's Death". Playing the part of the Boy is Dan Silver, the 9-year-old son of Isadore Silver of the UMass faculty.

The play, which first opened in 1952, has played to a wide variety of audiences, and received mixed reactions. The Roister Doisters will be interested to see how local theatre-goers accept it next weekend.

BU Downs Little Redmen, 77-61, With Second Half Spurt

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Despite being obviously outmanned and out-rebounded for the entire game, the Little Redmen showed great desire and effort before falling to Boston University last night, 77-61. The frosh were constantly being held to one shot at the hoop while the Little Terriers dominated the boards and this proved to be the difference throughout.

However, the Little Terriers pulled into a seven point lead at 15-8 as Brock scored again with a little under eleven minutes left in the half. Jim Garvin, BU's 6'7 center, was dominating the game with his blocked shots and rebounding and he constantly intimidated the Little Redmen into taking bad shots.

The Terriers stretched the lead to ten with six minutes left before UMass started to move. They employed a full court press which forced two straight BU turnovers resulting in hoops for Olsen and Joel Saperstein. McSharry then made a hoop and a charity toss to close the lead to 24-21 with 4:17 remaining.

The half ended with BU up by five, 32-27, as Polly hit a jump shot with eighteen seconds left and it looked as if UMass still had a chance.

But this hope was short-lived as the Little Terriers came close to blowing the Redmen out of the Cage at the start of the second half.

Guard Mike Sheehan hit three hoops in the first fifty seconds to stretch the BU lead to eleven. Then Garver came through with two more and Bob Keene chipped in with a basket and UMass trailed by seventeen, 44-27, with only two and a half minutes gone in the half.

During this two and a half minute span, the Little Redmen were unable to get even one shot at the hoop and in fact didn't get the ball over half court.

From this point on it wasn't much of a contest. However UMass tried to fight back and with 4:30 left the gap was down to five, 60-55. This spurt was paced by the outside shooting of Polakoff who scored 14 of his sixteen points in the second half.

BU was not to be denied and they used their superior rebounding to boost their lead to a high point of eighteen points, 77-59 with sixteen points. Polakoff hit another jumper with 0:08 left and the final score had the Little Terriers ahead, 77-61.

The defeat was the third straight for the slumping freshmen and dropped their season mark to 2-5. The Little Redmen will try to get on the winning track Saturday evening as they entertain Chamberlayne Junior College in a game slated to begin at 5:30 in the Cage.

Berquist Honored

Bergquist guided the Redmen to the Yankee Conference and championships in 1969 and a berth in the College World Series in Omaha. At the World Series UMass defeated So. Illinois, then ranked as the nation's top team, before losing to NYU and eventual champion, Arizona State.

UMass compiled a 22-10 record in 1969 that included a 9-1 record in the Yankee Conference. Bergquist has been head coach for three years and has a 51-31-1 record with a 23-7 mark in league play. , He won the Conference title in 1967 also.

Bergquist is a 1957 graduate of UMass. He became freshman baseball coach in 1959, and moved up to the varsity position upo n Earl Lorden's retirement in the Fall of 1966.

DiSarcina Signs

Joe DiSarcina, an outstanding athlete at UMass for the past four years, has signed a substantial bonus contract in baseball with the San Diego Padres of the National League. He will report in March to Yuma, Arizona where the Padres conduct their minor league training camp.

DiSarcina is the third member of the 1969 District One Champions to sign a bonus contract. Slugger Bob Hansen recently signed with the Seattle Pilots and pitcher John Kitchen played for the St. Louis system after UMass returned from the College World Series in Omaha last summer.

DeSarcina was a standout in basketball as well as baseball. He was captain of both sports during his senior year and received All New England honors in both. Joe was selected to the All Yankee Conference and All District One baseball teams for three straight years and last summer was chosen to the All American third team. He was a third-round draft choice by the Padres last June.

Redmen Ahead at Midpoint,61-28

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

The long awaited UMass basketball explosion finally arrived last night at a jampacked Curry Hicks Cage, as the Redmen swept to a 61-28 point first half lead, and went on to crush Boston University 103-68. The win was UMass' second in a row and upped their record to 7-5, while the Terriers dropped to 6-7.

In an awesome 20 minutes, the Redmen shot 62%. Julius Erving set a school record, scoring 29 points and pulling down what must be a record 18 rebounds, Ray Ellerbrook poured in 20 points, and Jack Gallagher harassed Terrier star Jim Hayes into an atrocious shooting half and four fouls. It was immense.

It was calm for four minutes. Then the barrage began. UMass got six in a row beginning at the 12:20 mark. Then after three minutes, the Redmen outscored the Terriers 11-2, with Gallagher putting in three hoops, and Erving adding five points.

Then came the deluge. Ellerbrook and Erving, with an assist from Chris Coffin, ran in, over the last 3:41 of the half, rattled in 14 straight points, and made what was a healthy lead, into a rout.

Gallagher meanwhile shut off Hayes' vaunted outside shooting game, and only some generous calls in Hayes' favor by referees prevented Gallagher from dominating even more. Gallagher was forced out of the contest at 6:57 of the half with four fouls.

Hayes followed him out at 2:27 also with four personals.

Erving broke his own record set in the season opener against Providence with his 29 markers. The super soph was 10 for 14 from the field, 9 for 9 from the foul line in the first 20 minutes. Ellerbrook was just as hot, canning 8 of 14 from the floor and 4 of 4 from the foul stripe.

The decision therefore was decided at halftime. But there was still a lot of indecision for the second half. Erving was within 12 points of a school scoring record, within 11 of a school rebound record. And there was the question of when the Redmen would break the 100 mark.

Unfortunately Erving did not approach the point mark. The first ten minutes of the second half were slow and sloppy and Erving missed a couple of foul shots, a couple of outside shots and misplayed the ball all alone under the basket.

So (and this gives you an indication of what he is capable of) Erving had to settle for only (?) 34 points and 27 rebounds.

Hayes, meanwhile, who was touted by Boston writers and Sporting News as the best in New England, fouled out at 17:36 with 14 points.

The ballgame meanwhile, continued dully the rest of the half, as compared with the breathtaking, fastbreaking first half.

Steve Gladstone was the only bright spot for the Terriers, firing some long range jumpers. Dick Samuelson, meanwhile, who started in place of a flu-ridden Ken Mathias, popped in ten points over the second 20 minutes.

Dennis Chapman had eight in the half, as did Rick Vogeley.

The lead fell below 30 on a couple of occasions, but UMass was easily in control throughout and just coasted in to the win.

However, it took almost a minute before finally Bill Greeley was fouled and at the line with a one and one situation. The junior guard canned the first foul shot but missed the second. Vogeley got the rebound however, and, after 11 seconds, Mike Pagliara canned a 20 foot jumper and, at 1:18, UMass had gone over 100 points for the 13th time in school history.

Ellerbrook had 25 points to go along with Erving's 34. Samuelson chipped in with 14 and added nine rebounds. Gladstone had 15 points for B.U., Hayes 14.

Yes, the explosion was a long time coming. But maybe, this obviously talented team has turned the corner.

REDMEN RANTINGS - There should be little question now who is the best player in New England....Referees called one in UMass favor, midway in the second half, when Erving went through the hoop to block a B.U. shot, in what looked like a certain goaltending....UMass had their best shooting percentage of the season, hitting at a cool 53% from the floor....Dennis Chapman thrilled the crowd with his forays onto the floor that had his uniform dirtier than Maury Wills'.... The New Cage lights make it actually bright at the "Court of the Last Resort".... Coach Jack Leaman said after the win, "We have a lot of talent and were bound to break out, sooner or later."... Said Leaman about Erving's shot at the 41 point scoring record, held by Bill Tindall, "Remember he is still young. I don't think he was thinking about it in the second half. He'll break that record before he leaves this place.... And making an appearance in the packed stands was a former MDC Sports Editor, released from the service, and reportedly ready to assume the reins of a world famous intramural basketball team.

Redmen Pucksters Nip Hamilton, 8-7, on Last Second Goal

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Displaying a definite flair for the dramatic, hockey coach Jack Canniff's Redmen upset Hamilton College, 8-7, yesterday on a last second goal by Jack Edwards in as stirring and bizarre a finish as has ever been witnessed within the hallowed walls of Orr Rink.

With only three minutes remaining, the Redmen held a 7-5 lead and, with Hamilton short one man, the lead seemed a safe one. But not in this contest as subsequent events were to prove.

At 17:58, Mike Carter scored his third goal of the day in the shorthanded situation, breaking directly at UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty and beating him with a nice move. Assists went to Brian Morin and Bob Ernst.

With only 1:25 remaining, Canniff inserted five defensemen in an effort to stop the pressing Hamilton hordes. It was to no avail.

With six skaters on the ice, goalie Kennedy having been lifted, frosh center Doug James scored at 19:30 off a scramble in front. Assists went to Pete Kennedy and Morin.

Then came Edwards' beautiful goal and ensuing confusion. In the belief that the game was over, the Zamboni machine rolled out to clear the ice as the players started heading towards the locker room.

But the ref ruled that the remaining second which was not on the clock due to a malfunction, must be played. Finally, it was. It had to be the longest second in history. Unofficial counts had it as long as 10 seconds.

UMass dominated the Continentals by a slight margin in the first period, outshooting them 14-9. Hamilton goals were by Kennedy, assists to Ernst and Greg Batt and by Morin, assists to Jim Knodel and Thomas. Redman goals went to Brian Sullivan, assists to Charlie Donovan and Edwards, and Mike Waldron who played a fine game, assists to Bill McMann and Doug Powling.

The second period was a riproarer, with the Redmen outscoring Hamilton 5-3. McMann scored twice within 33 seconds, assists to Powling, Edwards and Hartnett. The others were by Bob Bartholomew, assists to Hartnett and Edwards, Dennis Grabowski, assists to McMann and Al Nickerson, and Waldron, assist to Grabowski.

Hamilton got goals from Batt, assisted by Dave McCart, Thomas from Morin and Knodel, and Thomas again, unassisted. In the period, the Redmen skated and hit exceptionally well, but fell prey to lapses on defense.

The decision which evened U. Mass' record at 4-4, and Hamilton's at 5-5, should prove to be a great morale boost to the Redmen who played with more verve and stamina than in recent outings. They used a solid checking game and skated very well. They made mistakes, but any young team must commit its share.

The win gives them a respectable 4-3 record in Division II play and primes them for Monday's revenge match against Vermont at Orr. UMass lost to the Catamounts, 3-2, in a frustrating match at Burlington during December.

They also demonstrated in this win, a certain amount of grit, coming back from 2-0 and 4-2 deficits and eventually winning s they did. These are encouraging signs.

BLUE LINE BANTER - Doug Powling resembled Leo Boivin of the old Bruins at times, with some bruising checks...Canniff used four lines throughout, including a combination of Dan Reidy, Eric Scrafield and newcomer Fran Mulcahy....Mulcahy had a rude debut, leaving early for stitches with a gash....total saves were 23 for U-Mass, 26 for Hamilton....Donovan fashioned the latest hat styles.... game time with Vermont is 7:30 p.m.

History Department Strife Seen Renewed

By RICHARD S. KLINE
Special Force MDC

The UMass History Department, last year embroiled in confusion and controversy, has again factionalized and is once more headed toward a possible major intra-departmental conflict.

Since June of last year, when controversial department head Professor Robert Potash suddenly resigned his position under heavy fire from most History Department members, the department has been somewhat calm. Suddenly last month, things again flared when Associate Professor Gerald Gruman decided to fightfor his tenure, denied by Potash a mere two days before his resignation.

After the Executive Committee of the History Department had approved tenure for Dr. Gruman by a narrow margin of votes late in May last year, Potash took the initiative as Department Head to veto the recommendation. When visiting Professor Archibald R. Lewis became Acting Head of the Department last fall, he refused to reconsider the Potash action.

Appeals by Dr. Gruman for reconsideration by Professor Lewis having been denied, The Associate Professor decided early in January to take his case to his colleagues for support. Since then eighteen members of the department have risen to his aid, urging Professor Lewis to take another look at the earlier action. Supplementing the faculty support has been an undergraduate student petition also urging reconsideration.

Dr. Gruman was hired by the Department in 1966 and was promoted to Associate Professor in 1967 upon the publication of a book which received a favorable reception in scholarly reviews.

Dr. Gruman

He received a B.A. from Cornell (Phi Beta Kappa), an M.D. from University of Pennsylvania (State Senatorial Scholarship), and a PhD from Harvard University where he was a Teaching Fellow for two years. Dr. Gruman served as a Medical Officer during the Korean War, reaching the rank of Captain. He has taught at Johns Hopkins University and Lake Erie College where he was honored with a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1964.

With the Departmental members polarizing for and against the Gruman tenure situation, the History Department Faculty again is becoming preoccupied with politics and personalities. Among the elements confusing the situation are false rumors about Dr. Gruman that have been spread through the Department. For the last two years Dr. Gruman had been one of the outspoken supporters of reforms in the Department of History, some of which have been able to be implemented since the resignation of Professor Potash as Department Head.

Tenure, according to the UMass "Faculty Personnel Policy" booklet, "is the most important of all personnel actions within the power of the University." It is "not only...security for the individual at his institution, but a recognition in him of those qualities, both personal and professional, which the academic profession in general accepts as being indispensable for an academic career." Dr. Gruman's case has now gone to the highest level of appeal for tenure review within the University, the University Tenure and Grievance Committee.

The Tenure and Grievance Committee is a completely closed, secret board consisting of nine distinguished faculty members (representing each of the nine schools within the university) that is authorized to review the evidence in cases such as that of Professor Gruman. Action by the board may quell the current department controversy.

Tippo Reported Close To Chancellor's Post

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Staff Reporter

Indications are that the Board of Trustees are near to naming Provost Oswald Tippo to the newly-created position of Chancellor for the Amherst campus in spite of a procedural objection raised by representatives of the undergraduate Student Senate. Under the recently-adopted administrative reorganization plan, the Chancellor will become the chief administrative officer for the Amherst campus, with the President, located in Boston, charged specifically with public and legislative relations. This system is similar to that at other multi-campus state universities.

The Board's Executive Committee met over intersession with graduate, undergraduate, and faculty advisory committees on the appointment. The faculty representatives, in keeping with previous Faculty Senate instructions, voiced support for Provost Tippo's candidacy, as did the graduate representatives, while the two undergraduates able to attend Senators Dawn Dudash and James Albert, objected to the presumption that the Provost will be named to the post, urging instead, in keeping with Student Senate legislation passed last November, that a search committee be established to seek out other candidates in addition to the Provost, contending that only the means of a tripartite search committee which will compare the Provost's qualifications with other candidates can the entire community arrive at a well-balanced decision. Objections raised to such a procedure included a lack of sufficient time, and the fear, often expressed by faculty and administrators, that to name anyone other than Provost to the position would result in his departure.

Chairman Joseph Healy has expressed a willingness to meet soon with the Student Senate to discuss the disagreement.

"Action-Lab" on Community Set for Mahar Saturday

Edward F. Carpenter, Headmaster of the Harlem Preparatory School, will speak at 4:00 p.m. tomorrow on "Community Like It Really Is", in Mahar Auditorium. He will address an ACTION–LAB organized conference on University and Community. The conference is opened to the public.

Carpenter is the brilliant impressario of urban education who made Harlem Preparatory School not only one of the most successful schools for dropouts in the country, but also one of its finest secondary schools. He explains that, "The kids have an innate intelligence and they're aware of themselves and the world; what they need are teachers who believe in them." This faith in the students combined with prodigious teaching efforts has been fruitful: all of the 135 students who have graduated since the school began in October 1967 were accepted in colleges, and none have yet dropped out.

Because of his formidable achievements as an educator and author, Carpenter's counsel is widely sought after. He went to the White House to confer with the President in December about the education of "Dropouts" and is currently serving as an educational consultant to the Boards of Higher Education in New York City, Philadelphia, Providence, and the state of Mass. He was recently named a commissioner on Governor Rockefeller's commission for the Study of Campus Unrest in New York State and was a consultant for the National Education Association in the writing of their new volumns: EDUCATION FOR THE 70's.

Mr. Carpenter acquired his formal education - a B. S. in Psychology and Math and an M.S. in clinical psychology and math, at Long Island University. He has taught mathematics in the New York City School system, worked as a guidance counselor, been a consultant for HARYOU–ACT, studied advanced mathematics at the City College of New York and is presently completing the Masters degree in personnel psychology at Columbia University. While with HARYOU–ACT, he published a paper, SOUTH JAMAICA: A COMMUNITY STUDY, for Queens College and established the first counseling center in the Bedford Stuyvesant, Brooklyn, Youth and Work Project, that served as a prototype for more than a hundred other centers set up in the city. He also worked in Prince Edward County, Virginia, where the public schools had been closed to black students for four years and organized Freedom Schools.

Carpenter attributes his own success at Harlem Prep to his belief in the universal principles and human philosophy of the Bahai Faith. At the Prep, Unity and Brotherhood are central themes.

James Rogers, a graduate of the Class of '69, has described Harlem Prep thus: "Harlem Prep really is a family - and not one just in name. People at the school I formerly attended spoke of being a family, but what was projected was the coldness of an institution that paralyzed creative thinking. The difference between that school and Harlem Prep is the difference between my turning out to be a graduation statistic or a creative thinker in whatever field I might choose. . . .Harlem Prep does not suppress response, no matter how strongly it is presented. Because we show our interest intensely, it suggests that we are academically inclined. The teachers understand this. They react in such a way as to keep the lesson on topic as well as to let us speak out minds. Moreover, the faculty is not just a body of teachers but a group of human beings who look at students as other human beings. This is what I think differentiates a Harlem Prep teacher - he accepts a student who questions as being involved rather than being a "disrupter" of the class. . . .If the spirit of Harlem Prep could be introduced in large public schools, they would be making giant steps, not only in education, but giant steps toward real personal relationships. And that's what it's all about - MOJA LOGO - unity and brotherhood."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

OTAWARA, Japan (AP) - The girls at what used to be Otawara Girls High School boycotted classes in midweek in protest over a decision that changed the name to Otawara High School because the boys objected to being known as students at a girls' high school. Boys were admitted when the school, founded in 1907, went co-ed in 1966, but the old name lingered until recently. All 111 boy students went to class during the boycott by the 59 girl students.

BRUSSELS (AP) - The Belgian government announced it will give 10 ambulances and $40,000 worth of food for Nigerian post-war relief.

LONDON (AP) - British health authorities announced more than 1,000 legal abortions are performed each week in Britain. Of the 6,001 in the five weeks ended Dec. 30, 3,677 were in national health service hospitals, 2,311 in approved clinics and 13 in unidentified "other places." Since abortion restrictions were relaxed in April 1968 more than 1,300 were performed on girls under 15.

TEL AVIV (AP) - Through the International Red Cross, Israel has sent Egypt a list of 62 Egyptians it claimed were captured in its radar-seizing and neutralizing raid last week on the Egyptian Red Sea Isle of Shadwan.

Students Storm N.U. As Hayakawa Speaks

BOSTON (AP) - Militants stormed a building where San Francisco State College President S.I. Hayakawa was speaking Thursday night, broke windows and shouted obscenities.

Police said a crowd of about 3,000 persons milled around the university's Alumni Auditorium as Hayakawa spoke inside.

Police cleared a quadrangle in front of the auditorium, but protestors shouting "Ho, Ho Hanoi" and obscenities moved to sidewalks in front of the quad.

At least one policeman was hit with two small rocks as he held a door for newsmen who had been in the foyer of the auditorium.

The newsmen were unable to reach their cars outside the building.

Hayakawa stayed inside the building, where some 400 persons had bought tickets for th. speech.

Members of the Northeastern Chapter of Students for a Democratic Society had said earlier that Hayakawa would not be allowed to speak.

The university had obtained a court order preventing demonstrations when the controversial educator came to speak.

Grand Jury Indicts Three In Yablonski Murder Case

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) - A federal grand jury Thursday indicted three men on a charge of conspiring to kill Joseph Yablonski, United Mine Workers Union insurgent leader.

The jury said Yablonski's death was plotted for six months and that one of the three had a fund from which he paid the other two for their part in the slaying.

The indictment said Paul Eugene Gilly, 36; Aubran Wayne Martin, 21, and Claude Edward Vealey, 26, all in custody here, shot Yablonski to death on or about Dec. 31, 1969.

It made no mention of the deaths of Yablonski's wife, Margaret, 57, or daughter, Charlotte, 25, who were killed at the same time in their home near Clarksville, Pa. The three defendants are all charged with murder in Pennsylvania.

District Atty. Jess Costa of Washington County, Pa., said Thursday night the three men will be extradited to Pennsylvania - "probably early next week."

The defense attorneys for the three men had said they would fight extradition, but Costa said he was confident there would be no delay.

The federal indictment also charged the three with conspiring to obstruct justice because Yablonski was about to be a witness before a federal grand jury convened in Washington, D.C., to investigate union activities. Yablonski had tried to unseat W. A. "Tony" Boyle as UMW president in a Dec. 9 election.

A second charge was conspiring to deprive Yablonski of his right s as a union member. Conspiring to murder is a part of the two charges. There is no federal statute on murder.

Gilly's wife, Annette, and James Charles Phillips, 22, Cleveland, were named co-conspirators in a plot to kill Yablonski but were not indicted.

Authorities did not say what action, if any, would be taken against them.

The jury said Mrs. Gilly arranged for a car for the death trip and that Phillips backed out of the conspiracy 10 days before Yablonski was killed.

The jury said planning of Yablonski's death started in July 1969 and continued until Dec. 30, 1969. It said defendants and co-conspirators discussed using poison, bombs, and guns as apossible means of death but "decided to use the means of gunshots fired at close range as being the means most likely to produce death. . ."

The indictment said Gilly, Vealy, and Phillips plotted to kill Yablonski and that Annette Gilly knew of the plan and was to take part. It said Phillips backed out on Dec. 21 and Martin joined in the plan on Dec. 30 when the three started for the Yablonski home.

The indictment stated that Gilly had a fund to finance the killing and on Dec. 31 he paid Martin $1,700 Vealey $1,000 and cancelled a $750 debt Vealey owned the Gillys.

N. Viets Shoot Down U.S. Plane Over N. Vietnam Missle Base

SAIGON (AP) - The North Vietnamese shot down a U. S. fighter-bomber and a helicopter sent to the rescue and American planes blasted a missile site in North Vietnam Wednesday, the U. S. Command said Friday.

The fighter-bomber was one of several accompanying an unarmed RF4C reconnaissance plane that came under fire from SAM-surface to air-missiles and other antiaircraft guns northeast of Mu Gia Pass in North Vietnam.

The escort then opened fire on the missile site, and it was during this attack that the fighter-bomber, an F105 was hit by a regular antiaircraft shell and crashed. U. S. sources said one of the two-man crew was seen to bail out.

A big HH53 helicopter was sent to look for the crew and was attacked by a MIG firing a missile and was downed near the North Vietnamese and Laotian border. It was unlikely the six helicopter crewmen survived sources said, but they and the two fighter-bomber pilots were listed as missing.

As a U. S. source explained it: "If the missile was accurate and effective, it would just blow the helicopter up."

Despite the menace of hostile guns and planes, a search for the men is under way, U. S. sources reported.

This was the first air battle reported since the bombing of North Vietnam was halted 15 months ago.

Hanoi radio claimed U. S. warplanes launched a series of attacks deep inside North Vietnam Wednesday and three were shot down.

The fighter-bomber presumably went down in North Vietnam but the helicopter may have gone down in Laos. Sources estimate that more than 300 aircraft have been lost in Laos since Nov. 1, 1968, when the Americans stopped bombing North Vietnam and shifted attacks to the infiltration routes in Laos.

The Mu Gia Pass is the funnel for the route, standing on the North Vietnamese border. It leads to the Ho Chi Minh trail in eastern Laos down which North Vietnam sends men and munition to South Vietnam.

As many as 400 U. S. warplanes have been pounding the Mu Gia Pass area and Ho Chi Minh trail daily to slow North Vietnamese infiltration , which has been increasing.

Sources said the F105s had taken off from a base in Thailand as had the rescue helicopter, known as a "Super Jolly Green Giant."

The MIG that shot down the helicopter was the first enemy warplane to attack an American aircraft in 15 months. It was the first time in 20 months that a U. S. aircraft had been reported lost to a plane attack.

Since the 1968 bombing halt, six U. S. reconnaissance jets and armed escorts have been lost over North Vietnam, The first five were brought down by enemy ground fire and the sixth - which went down six months ago - was lost to unknown causes.

The United States lost 933 aircraft, including 10 helicopters, in the four years it bombed North Vietnam.

Two American helicopters were shot down in battlefield action north of Saigon and the Mekong Delta, Wednesday. This raised to 5,410 the number of aircraft lost to all causes in South Vietnam since Jan. 1, 1961.

In a weekly casualty report, the allied commands said that 75 Americans, 342 government soldiers and 1,942 enemy troops were killed in battle last week.

The number of Americans killed was down from 84 the previous week, but South Vietnamese losses were 145 higher and enemy losses were up by 170.

The U. S. Command said 815 Americans were wounded last week. The new figures brought U. S. losses in the war to 40,301.

News Analysis

R.S.O. Change Seen

by RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

Something special is in wind.

The Student Senate's Ways and Means Committee, chaired by Bill Perkins, has taken the second step in straightening out the R.S.O. (Registered Student Organization) accounts of nine dorm s on campus. The first step was to subpoena the financial records of these dorms.

In taking this action the Ways and Means Committee is performing what Bill Perkins described as a "mechanical act." They are simply carrying out to the "letter of the law" the R.S.O. Financial Act, passed by the Student Senate.

What is special in this action is the reasons which precipitated the action. Dorms are demanding autonomy; fiscal autonomy. They no longer want to be under the yoke of R.S.O. Policy. This in itself may not be anything new. Reports are that most dorms have always kept at least part of their monies from R.S.O. The news is that they are challenging the Senate's entire R.S.O. system. They want the money given by dorm residents to dorm governments to be controlled by the dorms, in the open.

The Ad-hoc committee of the Student Senate working on a new financial policy act has done little thus far. Now that it is openly known that dorms are revolting against the R.S.O. policy, they have the difficult task of creating a policy that will work.

The movements in the dorms are those of "grass-roots" democracy. The people in the controvertial dorms, such as Butterfield and Greenough apparently no longer accept the premise of their dorm government deriving its power "from the Student Senate," as the latest R.S.O. act states.

What is in the wind is the prospect of almost complete revision of the present student government association. The Dorms and the Senate must come to grips with each others interests. Dorms are asserting themselves as the most effective form of government on campus.

Central Dorms, R.S.O. Clash Over Student Fund Policies

By STEVE FRANCIS
Staff Reporter

R.S.O. requested the presence of several Central Area dorms to appear before the R.S.O. Board Thursday night to report on financial matters, and to inquire why these dorms have not complied with Senate policy on student funds.

The Senate policy states that the funds collected for any student organization, such as dormitories' dorm dues, must be deposited with R.S.O. William Perkins, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, felt the purpose of R.S.O. is to manage and investigate student finances and that thi s is necessitated by the possibility that student funds may be misused.

Past instance s of misappropriated funds were mentioned to provide proof of misuse. He firmly stated that R.S.O. only enforces the laws that the Senate has placed under R.S.O. jurisdiction and is not responsible for revision of the legislature. R.S.O. has been invested with the power of investigating and regulating the use and outflow of dormitory funds.

The dormitories of the Central Area expressed their ideas on what the inadequacies of the present R.S.O. system were at a meeting at Mills House and later at a session with the R.S.O. board. Their views are virtually shared by many of the other dorms across the campus.

These dorms have defied the R.S.O. requirements to place their funds and the deployment of these funds onto R.S.O. control. The Central Area Coordinator, Bill Idol, was a spokesman for the dorms. He advocated dorm autonomy and felt the responsibility for financial matters should rest with the individual dorms. Misure of the funds may well occur, but he felt that it is a valuable experience for the dorm's residents to control their own finances and learn how from their own mistakes.

He raised the point that the Student Senate is supposed to exist for the benefit of the students, but that here it deprives them of the educational experience of handling the appropriation of their own funds.

The Senate has also applied pressure to the Area governments to declare they derive their powers from the Senate rather than the students in that area. Mr. Idol considers this hypocritical and wishes the Senate would leave the management of the dorms to themselves.

Environmental Group Formed

The environment is rapidly becoming a major issue of the UMass campus. The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council, Action for a Quality Environment, Sierra Club, Outing Club and Friends of the Earth met Thursday night and formed the Coalition for Environmental Quality.

CEQ will formulate plans for the April 22 National Teach-In on Environment and attempt to deal with local problems of pollution, ecology, population, and other topics related to the ongoing destruction of our environment.

An open Meeting will be held on Thursday, Feb. 5, at 7:00 p.m. in the New Hatch. All interested members of the campus community are urged to attend to help formulate plans for the coming semester.

Any organizations wishing to join the Coalition may leave a message in the CEQ box in the King Council office in 207 Hampshire House, or call 545-0648.

EDUC Evaluation Held

The last week of classes in December the English Department Undergraduate Council (EDUC), a body of undergraduates which participates in department affairs, administered a teacher and course evaluation of the 300 plus courses and sections in the English Department. Just about all sophomore and upper-level courses were surveyed, but many freshman sections were missed.

This survey will serve three purposes. It will provide student feedback which will enable individual instructors to improve their courses. It will provide evaluative information which will help the faculty Personnel Committee decide on such matters as tenure and raises. Finally, it (and the teachers' own statements) will provide data for a teacher-course profile booklet describing each course and teacher in the department. This booklet will be distributed to students before counseling day in the spring.

We need people to help us evaluate these surveys. Our next meeting is Thursday, January 29, 1970 in Bart. 301 at 7 p.m. Anyone interested in this survey or in developing a teacher evaluation system for other departments in the College of Arts and Sciences, please call Jerry Richman, 460 Cance, 546-5144.

ROTC Finds

Thursday night the Faculty Senate passed the following motion: The Faculty Senate recommended that the Board of Trustees revise the contract of R.O.T.C. with the federal government such that the federal government will reimburse the university for the institutional costs of R.O.T.C.

Pentagon Wants Billions for National Guard Burglar Alarms

WASHINGTON (AP) - Worried about light security on National Guard arsenals, the Pentagon will ask Congress to pay for a multi-million-dollar program to install burglar alarms in the gun rooms of all 2,774 guard armories.

Pentagon officials reported this Thursday when asked what is being done to protect the 408,290 rifles and pistols, plus an undisclosed number of machine guns, bazookas and artillery pieces, kept at National Guard armories.

The question was raised when National Guard generals contacted in an Associated Press survey voiced concern about light security on their arsenals, but said they don't have funds to provide proper guards for the guns.

The Pentagon confirmed it had turned down requests for money to pay civilian guards, saying armories are state buildings and must be maintained by the states.

But, a spokesman said, a test program already underway is placing what he called electronic intrusion detection devices in 30 armories in six states and the District of Columbia. A request for funds will be made to expand the program to all armories, starting July 1, with the federal government paying three-fourths of the estimated $4-million cost.

In the first 10 months of 1969, the Pentagon said, 820 Army weapons valued at $69,333 were listed as stolen from armories and other installations within the United States. The Air Force lost 98 weapons worth $7,000. The Navy and Marine Corps declined to state their losses.

Four of the five largest thefts occurred in Ohio, records showed. That state was not in the test program, and 25 of its 101 armories had gun rooms ruled unsafe by the Army's inspector general.

However, Ohio has just completed a crash program of installing burglar alarms paid for with state money, according to Lt. Col. Joseph McCann in Columbus. None of Ohio's armories has 24-hour guards, McCann said.

One state experimenting with alarms in the Pentagon program is California which had 50 armory burglaries in the last 22 months. Other states in the program are New York, Alabama, Utah, Texas and Missouri. Planning began two years ago.

OH Dorms Vandalized

By RICHARD C. HANSON Staff Reporter

Three women's dorms in the Orchard Hill and Central area of the UMass campus were entered Wednesday night by what was described as "three or four people." For a brief time Dickinson House and Field House residents were harrassed. According to Donald Teppen, Orchard Hill Area Co-ordinator "some" money was stolen from Field House. Van Meter Dorm escaped harrassment as the people who entered Field and Dickinson only passed through the corridors and exited through the front door.

The intruders apparently entered through back doors in all of the dorms and were rebuffed by members of the dorms until the Heads of Residence of Field, Dickinson and Webster began an unsuccessful pursuit.

Thus far there have been no arrests and no other news.

Area co-ordinator Don Teppet emphasized that this was not an isolated incident. "There has been a great deal of this", said Teppet.

Sorority Fire Alarm Gets Hot Too Quickly

It would seem things are pretty hot over at the new Sigma Sigma Sorority house off East Pleasant St. In the two days that the girls have occupied the new building, Amherst firefighters have answered four alarms there.

The calls, all of which turned out to be false, were Saturday evening at 5:18 and 6:46, and then Sunday at 7:42 and 8:34.

False alarms are ordinarily listed as either malfunctions or as the work of pranksters. However, acting Deputy Chief Homer Cowles noted that neither of these categories were applicable in this case.

The alarms, he said, were rather the result of a new, highly sensitive alarm system that has been installed in the building, a system sensitive enough to pick up cigarrette smoke.

"Obviously it needs some adjustment," Cowles said. Either that or the girls will have to give up smoking.

Waters Rebuffed

To the editor:

In Tuesday's Collegian, there appeared a letter from Senator Robert J. Waters concerning the DRUM, the Black magazine at UMass of which I am an editor. I was also one of the speakers for the DRUM. I had written a response to this letter for Wednesday's Collegian but it seems that it never appeared on that day. I intend to deal with both issues.

I will deal with Waters first. His is a perfect example of white cultural chauvinism that pervades this society. For you to actually believe that you have the ability to judge the DRUM displays the extent of your ignorance - which is phenomenal. The DRUM is a BLACK literary experience which means that everything inside the DRUM is an extension of the Black experience. Since you, as most white people here at this university and in the world, have this strange chauvenistic belief that your own decadent and immoral culture is the only viable culture, you also use your own standards as the final criteria of all actions of all men. I believe that I should use much stronger language and call you what you really are, Waters - a racist.

Going on to the next point, Waters spoke of the violent presentation at the senate meeting deciding on the funds for the DRUM. Many of the facts leading up to that meeting somehow mysteriously did not materialize in the Collegian. We had gone before the Senate Finance Committee preceding the regular senate meeting with our bill for $2,100 for the DRUM. We were told that our bill was financially unfeasible. This is a very clear example of exploitation and outright colonization by the university powers. Black Students contribute funds to the functioning of the Student Senate as do white students. Everything that the money was spent on related to white programs; the Collegian, SPECTRUM, YAHOO, and The Flying Redman. All of these are examples of white, middle-class decadence and trivia. None of these things are in any way related to Black people. In the light of a senate meeting earlier last semester asking for $1,700 for support of Mrs. Victoria Delee of Dorchester County, it was obvious that the senate was not attuned to and cared nothing about Black needs. On the basis of this, we also knew that the only way that our request would be granted was by a strong show of force. The people no longer ask, they demand.

You next alluded to a statement of mine that the Student Senate owes Black students $9,000. I think it was absolutely brilliant (considering your capacities) how you arrived at my calculation of this sum. As I said previously, you and the other senators have, in fact, exploited the Black student population. You alloted all of your funds to irrelevant and white (synonymous) project - never once considering that we might have ideas on how our money should be spent. You have all displayed your ignorance beautifully. Your narrow-visioned chauvinism has grown fat around your eyes and you are now blind to everything - even your own thing.

I want to thank the Collegian for proving a point that I made in my letter that they "forgot" to print in yesterday's paper. When we approached the senate for funds for Mrs. Delee, it seems that the story (which would have been an interesting one) never reached the paper. The article written by Dubois concerning the appropriation for the DRUM was watered-down to display the "kind-hearted benevolence" of the Student Senate. The impression I got from the article was that the senate "gave the children a gift". These two examples, along with the ridiculous coverage of Chinua Achebe's visit, the Biafran novelist, and a visit by the Black Panthers, and the strange manner in which my letter did not appear prompt me to make this demand on the Collegian - either relinquish their right to operate a student newspaper or remove the caption underneath your titlehead and show your true face.

And to Senator Robert J. Waters and the entire white university community: you are part of an oppressive and ignorant majority. Change your ways because THE TIME HAS COME TODAY!

POWER TO THE PEOPLE.

Environmental Panel Named

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon named his Council on Environmental Quality Thursday. The appointments were warmly received in conservationist circles although there was some misgiving about whether the new group will receive adequate funding.

Nixon's choice of Russell E. Train, 49-year-old undersecretary of the interior as the council's chairman, had been widely expected. But some conservationists were pleasantly surprised at the nominations of Robert Cahn and Gordon J. F. MacDonald as the Council's other two members.

Cahn, 52, is a reporter for The Christian Science Monitor specializing in conservation and resources. He won a Pulitzer Prize in 1969 for a series of articles on the National Park System. MacDonald, 40, is vice chancellor for research and graduate affairs at the University of California in Santa Barbara.

The three nominations are subject to Senate confirmation, but in announcing them at the White House, Nixon said the Interior Committee chairman, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-A-Wash., "indicated that their confirmation will be easier than it is when I send down a nomination for a Supreme Court justice. I expect confirmation soon."

There was no immediate indication who would succeed Train as undersecretary of the interior.

Nixon said the council, created by a bill he signed Jan. 1, will study the nation's environment; develop policies and programs; make sure all federal activities take the environment into account; and help him prepare an annual Environmental Quality Report.

The first report is due next July 1.

Train told newsmen at the White House the council's authorized budget, starting at $300,000 for the current fiscal year and mounting to $1,000,000 for fiscal 1972, would mean its staff would be "compact, but highly qualified."

As chairman, Train will receive $42,500 while the other two will be paid $38,000 each.

North Vietnam Scores U.S. Over Northern Bombing Raids

PARIS (AP) - North Vietnam told the Vietnam peace talks Thursday the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam this week was "a brazen provocation against the Democratic Republic of Vietnam by the Nixon administration."

Col. Ha Van Lau told the 52nd session of the conference that "several formations of American planes bombed and strafed a number of populated areas in Quang Binh and Ha Tinh provinces, far north of the 17th Parallel," Wednesday. He claimed three of the planes were shot down and many others were damaged by North Vietnamese ground fire. The 17th Parallel divides the two Vietnams.

U.S. sources in Saigon announced that an American F105 fighter-bomber carrying two crew members was shot down on the North Vietnamese Laotian border Wednesday. A rescue helicopter that tried to bring back the two pilots was shot down by a MiG jet and the six men aboard were feared killed.

Stephen Ledogar, spokesman for the U.S. delegation, said the F105 was on a reconnaissance mission. Quang Binh and Ha Tinh are North Vietnam's two southernmost provinces and adjoin Laos. U.S. planes have been bombing the Ho Chi Minh trail in eastern Laos, the main North Vietnamese infiltration route to South Vietnam.

U. S. negotiator Philip Habib made no direct reference to Wednesday's incidents. He told the meeting that American reconnaissance flights over North Vietnam were continuing under a tacit agreement concluded with Hanoi at the time of the bombing halt on Oct. 31, 1968.

Habib said the reconnaissance planes had orders not to fire except when attacked.

But Lau reiterated Hanoi's earlier denial that there was any secret deal on continuation of reconnaissance flights. He called the incident Wednesday "a very serious act of war."

North Vietnamese spokesman Le Quang Hiep said Habib employed "the argument of a bandit." He asked whether the United States would tolerate reconnaissance flights over its territory by planes of a foreign power.

North Vietnam's top negotiator, Xuan Thuy, boycotted the meeting for the seventh time in protest against what he described as Nixon's "downgrading" of the conference.

This referred to the appointment of Habib as acting head of the U.S. delegation following the resignation of his predecessor, Henry Cabot Lodge. Habib was third-ranking member of the delegation.

Habib told the meeting the United States and South Vietnam have worked out a plan "for the complete withdrawal of U.S. forces and their replacement by South Vietnamese forces on an orderly, scheduled timetable."

He said the American withdrawal could be speeded up if Hanoi agreed to negotiate a mutual withdrawal of non-South Vietnamese forces.

North Vietnam has refused to discuss any plan for mutual troop withdrawals and has never formally acknowledged the presence of its regular troops in the South.

"Action Courses" Slated to Open

Beginning February 2, a series of action courses will begin. Meeting once each week, the non-credit courses will examine several major social and political problems, try to develop ways to act on those problems, and then attempt to carry out those actions. The specific reading lists and direction of each course will be determined by the participants.

Each course will meet from 1:30 to 3:00. Gil Salk, originator of the course idea and format, has made arrangements for the meetings to be held in Free University City in South College, Room 320. The building should be entered by Entry D.

Courses will meet as follows: Monday - Ecology; Tuesday - White Racism; Wednesday - Vietnam; Thursday - Student Rights-Student Power; Friday - Military-Industrial Complex.

Enrollment is open and informal but Salk warns that participants had best be prepared to work hard. There will be no teachers. Instead, there will be a mutual inquiry and sharing of information, ideas, impressions, and analyses. "We hope to show that we can do away with 'professors' and replace them with 'questioners' as a road to true, unbiased education."

G.E. Strike End Predicted; 80¢ Hourly Wage Boost Key

NEW YORK (AP) - General Electric Co. was reported putting the finishing touches Thursday to a new contract proposal designed to end a 95-day strike of 130,000 production workers. Terms were said to include an hourly wage boost of more than 80 cents over a 40-month period.

Joint peace talks continued under the supervision of J. Curtis Counts, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, and the word from labor sources in Washington was that "they don't have an agreement yet, but they're down to the minutiae."

Locals of the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers and the independent United Electrical Workers, spearheading the strike by 12 GE unions, reportedly were told by message: "Yes, the end seems in sight - and a very fine end, too."

An addition of more than 80 cents to the current GE wage average of $3.25 an hour - a 25 per cent increase - was expected to touch off a new wage spiral across a nation already in the grip of inflationary pressures.

"What happens here obviously will affect every labor contract in 1970," was the way one Washington source put it.

Presumably, an immediate effect would involve 77,000 union production workers of Westinghouse Electric Corp. Negotiators there have been marking time, with the expectation that the GE settlement would set a pattern.

Sir Thomas More said: "They do not deliberately look for war, except to protect their own territory, or to drive off an enemy who has invaded the land of their friends, or out of pity for a people oppressed by tyranny to free them with their own forces from the yoke and slavery of the tyrant."

The United Nations Charter said: "The Security Council...may take such action by air, sea or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace."

Harvey, from S.D.S. said: "Any social system which does not provide for the needs of all the people must be abolished and replaced by a free social order. Power to the people."

Jefferson said: "A little rebellion now and then is a good thing."

Adolf Hitler said: "A majority can never replace the man. Just as a hundred fools do not make one wise man, an heroic decision is not likely to come from a hundred cowards...There is only one real 'statesman' once in a blue moon in one nation. If an idea is right in itself, and if thus armed it embarks on the struggle in this world, it is invincible and every persecution will lead to its inner strengthening."

RRRRINNGGGG

WASHINGTON - "Hello, this is the Black Tigers' headquarters. Oh, hi there, Mrs. Vanderschmidt...What's that? You're giving a cocktail party at your Sutton Place apartment and you'd like to hire two Black Tigers...Yes , ma'am. That can be arranged...What kind did you have in mind?...You want them militant...Of course, Mrs. Vanderschmidt, all our Black Tigers are militant... Armed or not armed?...The difference?...Well, if they've armed, there's an extra $2-an hour charge.. Yes, ma'am, they'll be armed...Would you like the same two we sent you last week at your after-theater party for Eldridge Cleaver?....You didn't like them, huh?...Why not, Mrs. Vanderschmidt? They didn't curse at your guests enough....I'm surprised to hear that. They are the two most militant Black Tigers we have on our list.....

"I'll select the new Black Tigers personally. The air will be purple with language....Thank you, Mrs. Vanderschmidt....On the contrary, it's our pleasure to do business with you."

Rinnnnnggggg...."Black Tiger headquarters.... Hello there, Mr. Grace, haven't heard from you in a few months.... Oh, you've been to Acapulco and now you'd like to get back in the swing of things?...Well, we have a new member who could really get your party off the ground...Shot three cops...and a truant officer in San Francisco ... That's right. He's out on bail now, and if you want him, you better speak up for him. No telling when his trial will come up.

"Besides, I'm not supposed to tell you this, but Mrs. Regina Flanduffer has put in a bid for him already...Since you do so much business with us, I'd like to give you preference...Don't worry, Mr. Grace, he's mean. Have I ever sent you anyone who wasn't mean?...You'll take him? Good.. $500 plus $150 for a bodyguard of two Black Tigers...Thank you, sir."

Rinnnnnggggg...."Black Tiger headquarters.... Who's this? --Tiger Pete...What are you doing?.. You're supposed to be at the Crotherhausers' housewarming in Scarsdale....You are there? What's up?...The Crotherhausers don't want you to stay? Why not? Because you're wearing a shirt and a tie and a suit?...What the hell are you wearing a shirt, tie and suit for?...Your Tiger clothes were stolen?...Well, if that isn't the living end...

"Let me speak to Mrs. Crotherhauser...Mrs. Crotherhauser, I'm terribly sorry about Tiger Pete showing up that way...Of course he's a real Black Tiger...Mrs. Crotherhauser, stop crying. All our Black Tigers are legitimate...Your neighbors think he's just someone you hired from the area?...But didn't he show you his Black Tiger tattoo?..Don't worry, Mrs. Crotherhauser, he'll tell off your guests. It's still early in the evening... Look, if he doesn't make everyone in the room ashamed they're white, I will personally refund your money...Thank you. Let me speak to Tiger Pete...Pete, get off your butt and start telling it like it is....And take off your shirt and tie and for God's sakes eat with your hands...

Rrrrinnnnnggggggg...."Black Tiger headquarters.. Oh, Mrs. Charming, How are you?...You're giving your granddaughter an 18th birthday coming-out party?...Well, we hire out Black Tigers, but we've never had any debutante parties here at headquarters...She has her heart set on it?...I don't know...You'd like a Black Tiger to escort each young lady as she is presented?... I suppose it could be arranged, though it is rather unusual... I understand, money is no object...All right, we'll book the place for you...What's that? Would we mind Lester Lanin's orchestra playing here?... Of course not. He plays for all our affairs..." Copywright (c) 1970, The Washington Post Co. Distributed by Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Campus Comment

Love it or Leave it !

To The Editor:

I am a criminal: fact self-admitted. Article IV, Section 1 of the DAVID GRAYSON HOUSE CONSTITUTION states: "Any undergraduate student who lives in this house shall be considered a resident and must pay dorm dues." Certain delinquent students (hereafter to be referred to as "the Grayson Twenty") were apprehended and brought to justice. "You have three alternatives: 1. Pay your dorm dues; 2. Have your grades frozen; 3. leave the dormitory." The Constitution was upheld and Grayson House was once more made a fit place to live - the forces of good had made the house safe for democracy.

However, the most important issues, those of whether dorm dues are justified, and, if so, where the money is actually going, were not represented in these particular judicial actions. It seems that the judiciary of Grayson House is so bound by legislation and format that they must cease to exist as individual human beings in order to execute their particular duties. The interesting fact (at least to me) is that upon consideration of their validity as a punitive body and that of their decision, the regular members of the judiciary recommended that those twenty members of the house who had not paid be exempted and that the judiciary itself be abolished from Grayson House and be stricken from the constitution. Let me make one thing clear - the judiciary of Grayson House has my respect and admiration (with the exception of one member perhaps who seems to bounce back and forth from one opinion to another like one of the ping pong balls that the budget allots $20 a year to). Many people have accused them of "coppling out" when things didn't go just the way they would have liked them to. I praise them for being among the few who really grasp the essence of the situation and refuse to serve under a system they find antiquated and lacking either purpose or justification.

I would like to congratulate the "majority" that railroaded the legislation through at Tuesday's house meeting (Strom Thurmond would be extremely proud of you). Your idea that the people who have lived in Grayson House for the past semester and have drawn from all its facilities and have gained from all its programs should be held financially responsible for the period during which they received these services was an excellent one. There is only one small problem with it: the people who refuse to pay dues are doing so because they have not drawn from your facilities, nor have they benefitted from any program offered by the house. Unless someone plays ping pong, reads New York review, or drinks a hell of a lot of coffee, they are out of luck. But this is only minor. 300 kids paid and only 20 didn't. I mean it's a real hassle to investigate whether your money is being misused, and we'd rather collect from 20 kids than give the money back to 300 - right? "It's a hassle - so why bother". "I'll pay my dorm dues and that's it". "What the Hell, I can afford $4." "The constitution says it's right - if they don't like it, they can get out." "Is it right? That's not my problem." In unison (with four-part harmony if you wish): GRAYSON HOUSE: LOVE IT OR LEAVE IT.

RESOLUTION: All the members of Grayson House still delinquent in the payment of their dormitory dues shall on or before the date of Jan. 26, 1970 be castrated so as to make it impossible for them to reap any of the benefits of the open house policy.

I have only one question to direct to the House Council in Grayson: In the budget, there is $10 allotted to "SNOW SCULPTURE". Who are we buying our snow from this year?

Sour Grapes

To The Editor:

Ted Prato's editorial on the nomination of Judge Carswell to the Supreme Court bears the distinct and unmistakable odor of liberal sour grapes. It seems that after years of the liberally oriented Warren Court that some people would like to keep it that way permanently, to bar Southern conservatives, or any conservatives from any important position in the government. They are afraid of a little bit of balance on the Supreme Court. Perhaps they are also afraid that some of their precious legislation would not stand up under closer scrutiny; that maybe the court would not be so lenient in its "protection" of the rights of criminals and subversives. They certainly don't have much faith in the durability of their cause if they don't have almost certain domination in the field.

The "liberal" Muckrakers are hoping for a repeat of the Haynsworth debacle. If it is true that Judge Haynsworth was involved in financial wrongdoing, then he got what he deserved. However, I believe that the majority of Senators who voted against him simply used this as a coverup for their objection to Judge Haynsworth himself. But I don't believe they can try the same thing with Carswell - President Nixon went out of his way to choose a man who owns little else but his house.

As for Carswell's speech of 1948, I am sure that if Mr. Prato had been born in the South around 1920, he would have said the same thing perhaps. Funny that Carswell lost that election because he was too liberal.

Mr. Prato, may I remind you that the South is part of this country, that Southerners pay taxes. If you can't accept that, then maybe you should petition the President to create a state where all the very moral "liberal" misfits can live happily ever after. At any rate, Mr. Prato, save your guns and currency - the South will rise again!

Plea for Nonviolence

To the editor:

At Wednesday night's meeting of the King Council Sterring Committee, I presented a proposal to form a committee on non-violence. The purpose of the committee was to investigate ways to promote non-violence in the "establishment" and on the part of activist groups, and to deal with ways in which violence is used to delegitimize legitimate protest. The proposal was defeated by a close vote.

I would like to express my concern about this. The King Council was named after a man who was awarded the Nobel Prize for Peace and who was noted for his use of non-violence. It appears to me that with the major reorganization of the King Council coming up in the near future it is time for the campus as a whole to examine its feelings about non-violence and to plan to attend the reorganization meetings where this can be made a major topic for consideration.

It is sad that, at present, the Steering Committee does not view non-violence as a top priority which deserves not only to be a part of all King Council activities, but also as a topic which should be presented to the entire University Community for consideration and discussion. Non-violence can work only if its proponents are dedicated to it and realize that they have an obligation to talk to other people about what it is and how it works.

Buying a House

To the editor:

We were considering buying the house. It looked pretty good to us. "Are a lot of other people selling in this neighborhood?" "Oh, you don't have to worry about Them. We know just where They are." Them? What's the matter - do they get worried around here when the supermarket starts selling watermelon in the winter? The murmuring was continuing, " . . . of course, it is possible that within a couple of years blight could hit the neighborhood . . ." Blight?? Funny, I never thought of Keith that way. After all, he writes some pretty good stuf. Blight? Cincy who drives the snazziest Cutlass I've seen lately doesn't really qualify. Blight?? Strange, it never occurred to me that anyone could say that about Mike who teaches a mean literature course. As far as I know, that real estate agent and I speak the same language. We just didn't understand each other.

By the way, this wasn't a house in Maryland. It's in Boston, Massachusetts.

Priorities

This semester as well as last many of the eighteen thousand students here at UMass., have been faced with the horrible predicament of not being able to take courses that are required of them for their major plus many other highly desirable courses. Such are the penalties that many of us have to pay for improper priorities established by our state legislature, for obviously such overcrowding is caused by the lack of sections and facilities to conduct many courses at optimum efficiency.

To combat this overcrowding it would appear that the Administration has one of several alternatives to combat severe budget cutting in this legislative session. One would be to maintain the status quo with the terribly overcrowded classes, insufficient sections, etc., but perhaps only allow each student fifteen credits, even under trying circumstances. Under such a plan the students who need extra credits and others who could afford an overload would suffer greatly. Another such ploy and one that might prove more effective would be to avoid the University's annual expansion of fifteen hundred students, In an election year many legislators and the Governor might be hesitant to stir up the ire of fifteen hundred parents who won't be able to send their offspring to the moderately priced state university because of improper priorities on Beacon Hill.

This may not be the only way for UMass. to combat the legislature but in any case the University must flex its political muscles or face further trampling on Beacon Hill.

Circus

To the Editor:

We have been invited, I see, to spend a pleasant Wednesday evening watching Angel Flight's selection of the "Top College Girl at UMass." This kind of thing leaves one with a number of questions, such as "why?" and "by what criteria?" but one thing is certain. If there were a girl worthy of the designation "top college girl at UMass," she would not attend or participate in this circus of banality.

Changed Men?

A long time ago, pre-historic men used clubs to kill their food and sharp rocks to tear this food apart. These cavedwellers fought and killed members of their own species with those weapons, too. Constantly thinking of survival, early men wanted to begin living civilly. Each male head of a family decided to hold a meeting with the other chiefs. They discussed various ways that they might be able to live with one another. As the result of many compromises, it was decided that the meeting be held in an open field---far away from any of the other caves. After very long debates, the men decided to sit in a circle so there would be no special advantage to any one member of the meeting. The topics discussed were interesting. For instance, they pledged to never again raise a club against each other. They would only test more modern weapons when there was no danger for fellow men. They would never make new weapons to conquer, only to defend and protect. Never again would they battle. They agreed to live in harmony with one another. Each chief was happy about the meeting---but still decided to keep his clubs and sharp rocks and to improve them---just in case. The group of men huddled about the fire and called the meeting to an end. No, never again would they harm another man; never again would they make war.

Laird Hints End of Draft Long Way Off

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird warned Thursday that shifting to a draft-free military force will require a slash to about two million men, lowest since before the Korean War.

Laird also said such a limited force - about 1.3 million below current levels - will be possible only if Congress votes more money to meet "the tremendous expense" of strengthening the National Guard and Reserve.

His remarks suggested that abandonment of the draft for an all-volunteer force is still a long way off - if it ever happens.

"I personally believe that you have to get down to a level for an all-volunteer service . . . near the two million mark," the defense secretary told a youth group.

"I do not believe that you can carry out and meet the present obligations which this country has under its present treaties at that particular level unless you are willing to spend a considerable amoung of money in order to maintain a large, up-to-date, modern, well equipped reserve and National Guard."

This is the lowest manpower figure Laird has ever used in discussing publicly the anticipated size of an all-volunteer force which the Nixon administration has fixed as a major goal. He has spoken in the past of about 2.6 million.

It also is the first time that the upgrading of the National Guard and reserve role has been tied so explicitly to the all-volunteer regular force.

A special commission is expected to recommend to President Nixon within the next two or three weeks a formula for achieving an all-volunteer force. Some key Pentagon civilian and military authorities have privately expressed skepticism that such a goal is feasible without huge spending increases.

Laird indicated some doubts as to whether the Democratic-controlled Congress would come up with the additional money he said is needed to meet the "tremendous expense" of attracting people to the National Guard and Reserve in the absence of the draft.

Laird discussed the all-volunteer force subject in a question-and-answer session with 102 young people visiting the Pentagon as part of the United States Senate Youth Program sponsored by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

Education Patterns Examined

The Domestic Student Exchange has been established at UMass to provide students with an opportunity to become acquainted with social and educational patterns found in different parts of the U.S. Possibly the most valuable aspect of this experience will be the opportunity to meet and exchange ideas and experiences with people who have different value systems and cultural backgrounds.

UMass students who wish to do so may incorporate into their undergraduate program a year of study at another major university. At present there are 13 schools from which UMass students may select. Students who participate should be sophomores or juniors during the current academic year and should have a 2.5 cumulative grade point average.

For UMass students who do not choose to study at another university, DSEP provides an opportunity to meet and exchange ideas with students from other university campuses in different parts of the country who will be spending a year at UMass.

For those interested in the program, there will be a meeting on Monday, February 2, at 6:30 p.m. at SBA 120. All those students who have been on the exchange program or are here on the program are asked to attend to tell of their own schools, University of Southern Florida, U. of New Mexico, U. of Hawaii, U. of Illinois, U. of Montana, U. of Alabama, PortlandState (Oregon), Howard University (Washington, D. C.,), Illinois State, Montana State, state University of New York (Albany), Florida State University, Patterson College (N.J.).

The technology of moving things

That's right! Grumman's real business is the technology of moving things . . . men and machines in purposeful patterns within a great diversity of origins, destinations and tactical situations. Speed is often, but not always, the answer. Performance reliability—in spite of many interfaces—is the thing.

In areas of enemy activity—an aircraft with track and search radar that can locate, identify and lock on to the target, even in zero visibility . . . the A6A Intruder, and advanced versions.

In early warning emergencies—an aircraft that can extend the eyes and ears of a Navy task force at sea through radar and computers that alert interceptor aircraft to impending enemy attacks . . . the E2A Hawkeye, and advanced versions.

Far above the earth, a satellite that can discover more about the evolution of the universe . . . the Orbiting Astronomical Observatory.

At Grumman the opportunity for moving is presented in abundance to Physics, Aero, Civil, Mechanical, Electrical/Electronic, Chemical, Industrial Engineering or Technology Majors determined to find the right vehicle for their careers.

UMass Prof Teaches Deaf Children with Projector

Using overhead projectors in a new way, a University of Massachusetts educator has created new learning opportunities for deaf children.

Professor Raymond Wyman of the UMass School of Education has designed a system in which both teacher and students have overhead projectors and use them in a two-way dialogue. This visual response system, formally titled Mediated Interaction Visual Response (MIVR) system, is now being used in carefully watched research situations at schools for the deaf in many parts of the country.

"Although the system was designed for deaf children, it has also been used with seeming success in a class of mentally retarded children," Dr. Wyman said. Its effectiveness will also be tested in normal, ghetto and bilingual classrooms, he added.

The system was developed as a program of the Northeast Media Center for the Deaf, a federally-supported project of the UMass School of Education directed by Dr. Wyman.

"Its principal aim is to provide deaf students in a small classroom group with the ability to communicate individual responses to their teacher by means of individual overhead projectors," Dr. Wyman explained.

A specialoverhead projector has been developed for the system by the Buhl Projector Co. with help from the General Electric lamp department and Dr. Wyman. These low power machines are grouped in a V-shaped set of eight, giving eight students the opportunity to respond individually and simultaneously with visual material to the visual matter displayed on the teacher's overhead projector.

Dr. Wyman's system thus strengthens an important part of a deaf child's education - the interaction session in which a group of eight or more students gather around a teacher and take turns responding to oral and visual messages.

In a traditional interaction session, he explained, "The responses are almost always oral and usually involve only one of the group while the others are following along or marking time. The oral response mode is difficult for the student, who usually has poor speech, and difficult for the teacher, who must decide whether there is a learning or speaking problem."

In practice, the teacher asks a question about something taught in a previous group or individual learning session and the students write, point, color or underline answers on transparencies on their overheads. These are then turned on simultaneously by the teacher and corrected as necessary. During the correction process, students can look at all the screens and see each other's work.

Development of the MIVR system has been supported by U.S. Office of Education funds. Testing and research is now being supported by USOE at such widely separated institutions as the American School for the Deaf in Hartford, the Arizona School for the Deaf and Blind in Tucson, the California School for the Deaf in Berkeley, the Crotched Mountain School for the Deaf in Greenfield, N.H., the Iowa School for the Deaf in Council Bluffs, the Tennessee School for the Deaf and others.

Those who have worked with MIVR feel it can make a number of important contributions to the education of the deaf, Dr. Wyman said. "Children seem to like to work at the machines and maintain attention over unusually long periods of time. Every student must respond every time so there is no turn-taking and the teacher provides constant human reinforcement for every correct or acceptable response, at the same time correcting every error within seconds," he explained.

The system has been used with success by teachers who are themselves deaf. One such teacher has commented that he is now able to have a real dialogue with his students, Dr. Wyman said.

Erving Performance Awes B.U. Coach

It's difficult to write a piece about Julius Erving without having to rehash a group of tired cliches that have been used since the year one. So instead, I'll let B.U. Coach Charlie Luce do the raving.

"He's the finest player I've seen," Luce opened, "and he could play for any team in the country. Hell, he could help the Celtics right now." B.U. by the way, was the last school in the running when Erving finally decided to go to UMass.

In the first half Erving scored a record 29 points, and snared 18 rebounds. He so outplayed Terrier star Jim Hayes that if anyone contends that Hayes is the better player, as have some prominent publications, that one must assume that the perpetrator is either a fool or a member of the Hayes family.

After the game Erving revealed that he, "couldn't get the feel of the ball," in the second half. In the final 20 minutes, the soph forward netted only five points. He finished the game with 27 caroms.

In case the reader wonders if Erving is being given national attention let him be calmed with the knowledge that in the Capitol of College Basketball, Philadelphia, Erving dazzled the critics. The Boston Globe reporter that went to Philly to cover the NBA All-Star game and the BC-Villanova tilt the following night came back to the Hub with flowing reports from all who saw the UMass-Penn game. It is likely that he will make the all opponent team in the Palestra, quite an achievement considering the caliber of ball that plays in the UPenn field house.

Luce also came out with the surprising statement, "Right now Julie is better than James Brown ever dreamed of being." For the few who haven't heard of Brown, he is either a first team high school All-American that was recruited from Washington by Ted Kennedy, or a youngster that plays for the Dartmouth frosh that scores in excess of 30 a game. Choose one, Luce didn't specify.

Erving's performance somewhat overshadowed a great team effort. Captain Ray Ellerbrook, Dick Samuelson, Jack Gallagher, and Dennis Chapman were all important contributors. Ellerbrook notched 20 of his 24 points in the first half when the Redmen matched their entire game total of the Fordham loss on the previous Wednesday.

Samuelson scored 14 points in an effort that pleased UMass coach Jack Leaman. Leaman promised, "Sam will be my starting center for the present." Gallagher and Chapman combined for 15 points and some first rate defense.

The turnaway crowd basked in the added candlepower of the Cage. The Holy Cross game is slated to be televised on Ch. 27 in Worcester, and now the affluent ones with color sets can enjoy the game to the fullest. Previously only black and white transmissions were possible from the Cage.

Leaman was somewhat dismayed with the second half, but was quite pleased with the game for the night. "This is a young team," he said, "and it really doesn't have that killer instinct yet, but it'll come."

UMass outrebounded the Terriers 60-34. The dominance was so pronounced that no BU player could pull down more than four caroms. Luce attempted to keep the ball away from the middle in a futile effort to minimize Erving's effectiveness. Needless to say it didn't work.

King Flash Lights, Ashe Denied Visa

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Thirteen minutes after the National Hockey League game ended, the Los Angeles Kings won it.

It took that long for a final decision on a goal by Ross Longsberry which provided the Western cellar dwelling Kings a 5-4 victory Wednesday night over the New York Rangers, leaders of the East.

Even then the action didn't end. Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin angrily attacked referee Bob Sloan, threw a punch and shoved him before being restrained by New York general manager Emile Francis.

Final action comes from the league president's office after a review of that altercation.

Even Kings owner Jack Kent Cooke appeared in the post-game act, saying he wanted Sloan to know "our electronic system was in good order."

Timing devices in the NHL are synchronized in such a manner that when the game is over, a green light goes on while at the same instant the red light back of the net ceases to operate.

At the Forum, the red light went on signifying the goal had scored before the time ran out.

Then came the argument. All the players, timekeeper Bill Meuris, Francis, Los Angeles coach Johnny Wilson and Cooke were involved. Finally, Sloan made his decision as the 7,662 fans waited to see if they'd seen a tie or a Kings' victory.

Even after the electrifying result, the Rangers remained in first place in the East at 26-10-10 and Los Angeles last in the West, 9-31-5.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) The South African government's refusal of a visa to American Negro star Arthur Ashe was an "act of discrimination based on only one factor - his color," said former U. S. Davis Cup captain Donald Dell Thursday.

Dell, who is Ashe's attorney, is competing in the Benson and Hedges Open Tennis tournament here, and he and several other international players expressed anger at Ashe's treatment.

Dell said that for the past three years Britain, France, Australia and the United States had banded together to resist attempts by the Eastern European bloc to outlaw South Africa from the Davis Cup.

"Because of the discriminatory act of the South African government, South Africa lost its last allies in tennis", said Dell. "It is a bitter disappointment for Ashe."

Dell said Ashe pledged last December that he would make no comment on South Africa, and he further pledged that if he were permitted to compete in the South African championships he would say nothing about politics during his visit and would withhold all comment on South Africa for several weeks.

"But the South African government chose to break good faith, and what is worse to apply a ban against Ashe by an offhand remark at an election rally," Dell said.

"I can think of 35 sportsmen who have been admitted to South Africa, who have played there, and who have made statements critical of the policy of apartheid. Nothing happened to them . But here is a great player and one of the nicest sportsmen banned solely because of color."

STEVE PARNELL, UMass split end and kick return specialist, was chosen in the N.F.L. player draft, by the Atlanta Falcons. Parnell was chosen in the 16th round.

Matmen Trek to Army 1st Meet in a Month

UMass will resume its gymnastics schedule tomorrow, after a month long layoff, when the Redmen travel to West Point to meet Army. The meet is the first for UMass since Dec. 13.

A home meet was scheduled for January 24 against Penn. State, but the clash with the perennial national leaders has been moved to February 4.

Although Army is only 1-2 on the season thus far, UMass will be forced to use their best performers in the meet to combat the long layoff. Also Army showed itself to have plenty of strength by scoring 150 points against strong Springfield. And the other loss was to Penn. State. The Cadet win was over Pittsburgh.

Army has its best individuals in the floor exercise and high bar events. Doug Radzieski has been a strong performer in floor exercise and long horse vault, while John Senor has been a consistent nine point scorer in the high bar.

According to UMass Erik Kjeldsen, the Redmen are "healthy but a bit rusty from the long layoff." They will enter Joe Reed and Norm Vexler in the all-around event. The specialist positions will be filled on the basis of practice routine scores during the past week.

Tomorrow's meet is an important one for UMass. If they continue the progress shown earlier in the year against Southern Connecticut, they could be in an excellent position for Wednesday's Penn. State meet.

Scanella Named UVM Grid Coach

The offensive coordinator for the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League and former head coach and athletic director for C. W. Post, Joseph L. Scanella, has been appointed the head football coach at the University of Vermont, it was announced Tuesday, January 27.

Scannella will assume his duties February 2.

The new football mentor served as the assistant coach for the Alouettes last fall, and before that, was associated with C.W. Post for six years, 1963-68, in a dual role as head coach and athletic director.

N.U. Coming from Big Loss Redmen Remember Year Ago

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Playing their second of three Boston area teams in a row, the UMass basketball team hosts Northeastern University, owner of a 8-5 record and coming off a shocking 95-64 loss to Boston College, tomorrow night at 7:30 at the Cage. The UMass freshmen play Chamberlayne J.C. in the preliminary affair at 5:30.

In routing Boston University Wednesday night, 103-68, the Redmen embarked on a three game stretch against Beantown hoop squads. NU is the next hurdle and last but not least comes BC next Tuesday at Chestnut Hill. More will be said about the Eagles in subsequent issues but the present concern is with the Huskies of Northeastern.

At the same time UMass was punishing BU, NU was taking its lumps from BC and ended up losing by 31 points, its worst loss in 12 years. The Huskies will be looking to make a respectable climb back into the winners column; the Redmen will be looking for revenge after having lost to NU, 68-64, last winter.

Northeastern has a talented squad with a lot of depth. It employs up to ten players interchangeably. The likely starting combo will be Jim Moxley and Kevin Shea at the forward spots, John Maheras and Bill Moore at guards and Fran Blais at center.

Moxley, a 6'3 sophomore, was a big frosh star and is in the midst of a fine sophomore season for NU. A good outside shooter, he also likes to drive for the basket and can play as a guard when called upon to.

In the 6'4 Shea, the Huskies have another versatile performer who can double as a guard. A junior, he had a solid soph season with an 8.5 scoring average in addition to being second best team rebounder.

The guards, 6'2 Maheras and 6'2 Moore, are both juniors. Maheras was steady as a soph performer and has come into his own this year. He is noted for his ball-hawking ability. Moore, on the other hand, never played in a high school basketball game. His previous experience comes from a year at Huntington Prep. and two at NU, over which span he has shown much improvement.

Blais, the center, is 6'7 and the only starting senior. This is his first year as a front-liner, having subbed for departed Carl Chandler for two years. A superior Huskie performance depends on a strong floor game from Blais.

Northeastern employs its bench strength at regular intervals. Coach Duke Dukeshire frequently relies on 6'5 soph Stu LaFramboise and 6'4 soph Paul McDonough to spell Moxley and Shea at the forwards and on 6' senior Paul Swett and 6'2 junior Peter Flynn to give the guards, Maheras and Moore, a rest. Backing up Blais at center is 6'3 John Niven, a junior.

The Huskies do not have a lot of height but the talent is there, and it is deep. As UMass assistant coach Peter Broaca puts it, "They have a tremendous amount of depth, and that is what makes them so strong."

Grapplers Host Two Big Meets

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass varsity wrestling will return to competition this weekend after a five week layoff. The Redmen, currently sporting a 4-3 record, will host the Coast Guard tonight and Central Connecticut tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Homer Barr's wrestlers are undefeated in New England having beaten Amherst, Tufts, Rhode Island and Harvard. The three losses have come to Indiana, Pa., Bloomsburg State and Ohio University. Barr was especially pleased with the 26-13 win over Harvard, which is considered a New England powerhouse.

The starting lineup for the Redmen will be Nick Didomenico at 118 lbs. with a 4-3 dual meet record, Rick Tyma (4-3) at 126, Phil Davis (5-2) at 134, Sheldon Goldberg (5-2) at 142, Clay Jester (4-3) at 150, Mike Braumer (1-3) at 158, Kent Mignocchi (5-2) at 167, Tom Andrews (1-1) at 177, Captain George Zguris (4-1) at 190 and Bruce Buckbee (0-0) at unlimited. Dave Reynolds (3-2) will wrestle at 118 lbs. on Saturday and Brauner who is battling the flu, may be replaced by Jim Godkin who has a 3-1 record. Buckbee is a sophomore making his first varsity appearance, replacing the injured Dick Donlin.

UMass has never beaten either of its weekend opponents and Coach Barr is very apprehensive this year. "These are very important matches for us and a loss in either one will be demoralizing," he said. "The layoff has hurt us," he added, "and I'm not sure if the boys are back in shape yet."

Coast Guard is 1-0 on the season and is currently ranked seventh in N.E. Their top wrestlers are Mills at 142, Specht at unlimited and Svenson at 190. "I'm sure we have better talent than them but they will be in better shape and this may be the difference", the coach said.

Central Conn. is ranked second in the rankings, with a 3-1 record and is one notch ahead of UMass. The winner will undoubtedly get the higher ranking and will be able to aim for Springfield, perennial number one team. Central is a well balanced team and is especially strong at the middleweights. Their outstanding performer is 142 pounder Henry Marchetti, twice New England champion and once the outstanding wrestler award winner. The Marchetti-Goldberg match should be very close and an upset for the Redmen could be the boost they need.

After this weekend the Redmen meet Springfield and Barr is hoping to get some momentum from this weekend. "If we can win this weekend," he said, "then we will be at our peak for Springfield and then anything can happen."

New England Wrestling Association Rankings
1. Springfield 3-0
2. Central Connecticut 3-1
3. Massachusetts 4-3
4. MIT 3-0

6. Connecticut 4-1

Top Competition in BAA

A rugged contingent of UMass runners will help make up a star field in the 81st running of the Boston Athletic Association Track and Field meet tomorrow. The field events begin in the afternoon at Northeastern University with the running events going off at 7:00 pm at the Boston Garden.

Heading the meet will be the 600 yard run where four world record holders square off for the BAA title. Larry James (world record in the 500), Martin McGrady (600), Curtis Mills (440), and Lee Evans (400) make up the star field.

Redmen entries in the 50 yard dash include junior Walter Mayo and soph Ron Harris. For both its their first competition of the season. High hurdling for UMass will be frosh Bill Clark and soph Jim Graves who tied the school 45 yard hurdle mark of 5.8 seconds at the KofC Meet two weeks ago. Graves will also long jump and try to improve on his fifth place finish in the KofC.

Four high jumpers will compete for UMass in the afternoon session. Leading the group will be junior Cal Carpenter who cleared 6'4 before being eliminated from the KofC. Soph Ed Saughnessey and freshman Bob Landry and Bill Hackler will all compete for the first time this season. Also at Northeastern will be junior weight thrower Ed Arcaro and his frosh counterpart Barney Schneider.

Dave Evans will represent the Redmen in the tough New England Collegiate 880. The senior captain, coming back from an injury, will meet his first test against the best of the New England half milers including Dave Elliot of Harvard, the KofC winner and Steve Flanagan of UConn who is the defending NE 1000 and outdoor 880 champ.

UMass relays hope to repeat their fine KofC performances lead by the two mile relay of Bill Donaldson, Ron Wayne, Al Mangan and Larry Paulson. The two mile relay team was victorious in Boston two weeks ago. The varsity mile relay will be manned by Al Mangan, Dave Marble, Jerry Spellman with the fourth spot being filled by Evans, Harris or Mayo. The frosh will field the same team of Mark Robinson, Tom Swain, Steve Levine, and Al Johnson which ran well in the KofC.

"University-Community" . . The Interested Discuss

By CLAUDIA HAMBERG and MICHAEL DARMAN
MDC Staff

A two-day conference on "University and Community" held this weekend in the UMass School of Business Education took the first steps toward organizing large-scale community service by the University. Tomorrow's DAILY COLLEGIAN will include an analysis of the proposals presented by the conference and plans for further action.

Attended by representatives of 20 community and University agencies and interested students, the conference included "rap-ins," panel discusslons, workshops, and two speeches by new-thinking educators. Edward F. Carpenter, Headmaster of the Harlem Preparatory School, addressed the conference Saturday afternoon, and Peter Wagschal, of the UMass School of Education, spoke Sunday morning. Saturday's session concentrated on the community, while Sunday's discussion examined the University.

The conference was motivated by Action-Lab, a group of undergraduate and graduate students working on programs for the education of high school drop-outs. Gerald Baruch and William Smith of Action-Lab chaired discussion in the informal give-and-take of the planning and working conference.

Participating community agencies included the Amherst Social Relations Council, Springfield Head Start, Northampton Youth Corps, Hartford Teacher Corps, the Spanish-American Union, the Northern Educational Service, and Springfield Model Cities.

University organizations participating included Action-Lab, the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Council, Delta Chi, the Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black Students, Contemporary University of Greenfield, and the University administration.

. . "Carp" Speaks

Edward F. Carpenter, Headmaster of the Harlem Preparatory School, addressed the conference Saturday afternoon. "I'm going to talk with you, not to you," said "Carp", and he did. His audience was with him, all the way.

"A university must be an agency for social change. All curriculum should be directed toward those aims." He continued that all courses should be directed toward creating "a better human being with a capital 'H'."

Carpenter suggested that a university should turn out servants, not a social group of power-elite. If a university educates students for service, there would be no need to worry about relevancy to the community. "What is more beautiful than a good servant if he is serving for the good?"

To create this relevant university, Carpenter stressed the need for a new university structure. From its present state of bureaucratic hierarchy, the university must become a "cycle-breaking organization." This organization will be an open system, involving everyone, working on problems that need to be solved now.

Carpenter said that the university implies the word universal, an entity, all. For the university to extend its expertise to the surrounding environment seems very natural.

Carpenter charged today's college student with ". . . a lack of guts." "Get some spine. . . you are young students. . . This is your world . . . Take it by the tail and make it yell."

He offered criticism and advice to the conference, as well as encouragement. Carpenter suggested that the community needs more than counselors; it needs a changed environment. He stressed "education for a new era," and cautioned against old missionary zeal, patronage, or a superior attitude on the part of students serving their community.

. . Wagschal Suggests

Sunday morning of the conference Dr. Peter Wagschal from the School of Education addressed the gathering on "The University in Community Service."

He related his impressions of the University's present service role as only training students with "insane jobs" for an "insane world." His impression of the University of the future was one in which there would be no required courses, curriculum, or structure. The individual would count, with all classes and living quarters existing in small groups.

Trustees Narrow Number Of Presidential Candidates

By MARK SILVERMAN
Asst. Managing Editor

BOSTON - The Board of Trustees announced that they have reduced from 196 to 16 the list of candidates for the UMass Presidency at a suprisingly short meeting Friday.

In other action, the Board met the first student admitted to the UMass Medical School, voted to take by eminent domain a 20-acre tract of land for UMass Boston construction, and OK'd feasibility studies for building an addition to the infirmary, a dining commons on orchard hill, and an additlon to the still uncompleted graduate research center.

Trustee John J. Maginnis announced that his Presidential search committee has formed two lists of eight names each, in preferential order, and that the Trustees will examine these lists in a special, closed meeting on February ninth.

He indicated that a final decision on President Lederle's successor, however, is still a long way off.

The original list of 196 names was drawn up by eight groups, representing the University communities in Amherst, Boston and Worcester.

"In this way," Maginnis said, "all groups within the University system had a chance to express their sentiments concerning the new President."

"However," he added, "the final decision must rest with the Board of Trustees, and it will be this body (The Trustees) which will have the job of finishing the selection procedure from here on out."

Earlier in the meeting, Medical Dean Lamar Soutter introduced James L. McGuire, 21, of Dedham, to the Trustees. McGuire, a pre-med school at UMass-Amherst, is the first student accepted for the medical school's first class.

McGuire told the Trustees, "I take great pride in being the first student of the Medical School which you struggled so hard to make a reality." He added that he chose to attend UMass because "the prospect of being a part of something new appealed to me."

He called the school a "pioneering venture" with "no stereotypes", and said that he considered himself to be a pioneer since he "will be setting the pace for those who follow me."

McGuire added, "I expect there will be some turbulence during the first few years...it is expected in a new venture of this type. The enthusiasm of Dr. Soutter and the members of his staff made me want to be a part along with them in building something which Massachusetts has waited for so long."

Soutter disclosed at the meeting that 11 other students have already been accepted for September's first class.

The Board also voted to take by eminent domain a 20-acre tract in the northeast corner of Colombia point, and this move gives UMass all but a fraction of the 92 acre sight for the future Boston campus.

However, the Board also agreed to support a bill in the Legislature that would reconvey this section of land to the city if Boston could find a developer to erect housing there within three years.

The Trustees' committee on buildings and grounds led the Board to approve feasibility studies for an Orchard Hill Dining Commons capable of feeding up to 1,300 persons per meal, a $1,300,000 addition to the infirmary which would leave room for possible further expansion in the future, and a $10,000,000 math and physics to-

Treasurer Proposes Room Rent Hike For Students and Residence Heads

By RICHARD C. HANSON

Treasurer Johnson announced Friday at a meeting of Area-Coordinators that the rent for Head of Residence apartments in the dorm will be doubled. Along with this came the long-awaited announcement of dorm room rent hikes.

The most controversial item was the increase in Head of Residence room rents from $30 to $60 dollars per month. The Heads of Residence are reacting. There is a meeting planned for Monday, Feb. 2 at 8:00 p.m. in the Blue Room of the Worcester Dining Commons to plan an appropriate course of action.

The situation to some is analagous to the dispute over Counselors' pay at the beginning of the Fall semester. In an effort to cut expenses, the Treasurer has stepped on many toes.

One head of residence called the rent hike "totally unfair". It was explained that the low rent rates were considered as "compensation for the low pay" which the heads of residence at UMass receive. One infuriated head of residence challenged the treasurer to "spend a week in the dorm" to see what the work of a head of residence really is like.

All of the rent increases are subject to approval by the Trustees, but if the Trustees do approve all the Treasurer's proposals, student room rents should run as follows for the next semester: Traditional dorms will be raised to $550.00 per year, Southwest, Orchard Hill, Brett, and Gorman to $650.00 and the new dorms, being constructed in the Northeast area, will cost $730.00

Restraining Order Stops Nation-wide Rail Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal judge Saturday granted a 10-day restraining order to halt a threatened nationwide railroad shutdown and the strike against one railroad that promoted the lockout.

U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica said the 10-day delay would give Congress a chance to take whatever steps it deems necessary in the wage dispute between four AFL-CIO unions and the nation's railroad industry.

"In this case, there is no question that irreparable injury would be suffered" by the unions, the railroads and the public if the strike and lockout were permitted to continue, he said.

The judge's order came after an attorney for the railroads, Francis M. Shea told him he had been informed the White House will introduce legislation in Congress tomorrow to resolve the 14-month old dispute.

However, Secretary of Labor George Shulz, denied the White House told rail attorney Francis Shea that it would seek a law to halt the lockout and strike.

"We may or may not submit legislation but we did not tell him we would," Shulz said in calling Shea's comment in court "something of a misrepresentation."

The nation's railroads had threatened to shut down at 10 p.m. last night in retaliation for a union strike against the UnionPacific that began at midnight Friday.

Sirica said the unions had made a substantial showing they could prove the industry lockout illegal under the Interstate Commerce Act, and that the railroads had similarly shown the likelihood that the strike might be in violation of the Railway Labor Act.

The lockout, when fully effective, would have been only the fourth nationwide rail shutdown in nearly half a century. One was a 48-hour walkout in May 1946.

Shea had argued the strike against the Union Pacific was illegal because the unions were bound to national bargaining.

Judge Sirica said he was expressing no opinion on the legality of either the strike or the lockout.

"The court by its order today is merely maintaining the status quo" pending further litigation or congressional action, he said.

The latest incident in the rail dispute began late Friday night when pickets were posted at major Union Pacific terminals.

The management of 128 rail lines then announced that all operations would be halted by 10 p.m. EST last night.

The four rail shopcraft unions responsible for the strike immediately moved to obtain a temporary restraining order against the railroads Judge Sirica.

The unions' spokesman, William Winpisinger, said the railroads were violating the Interstate Commerce Act and the Railway Labor Act by refusing to make "reasonable efforts" to maintain operations in the face of a strike and to avoid any interruptions in commerce.

The railroads filed a countersuit against the unions asking a court-ordered halt of the Union Pacific strike. They accused the unions of trying to destroy a collective bargaining arrangement incoerce inequitable settlements out of one or a few carriers at a time and then to bludgeon other railroads into accepting the same or even more onerous settlements," said John P. Hiltz Jr., the railroads' chief negotiator.

As the deadline approached, passenger trains were stopped and travelers transferred to other carriers to reach their destinations. Supervisory personnel moved perishable goods into terminals with refrigeration, and livestock was left where food and water were available.

Rail officials said they would give "serious consideration" to Defense Department requests for priority shipment of Vietnam war materials.

The government was rebuffed by the unions Friday in a final appeal for a seven-day cooling off period.

Dr. Wagschal warned the conferees that in working with the community the University should not simply offer job training. That service is already rendered efficiently by technical schools, vocational schools, and even graduate schools.

In discussing the community, Dr. Wagschal was concerned about the conference's definition of "community." He warned of the various factions of every community which left that word virtually undefinable.

In discussing the present University structure as very unindividualistic, the speaker gave the Southwest Residential College as a [illegible] example where residents find it impossible to relate to each other as individuals but rather as [illegible]. To alleviate the problem, Dr. Wagschal speculated that students be housed with individuals living together in groups of perhaps seven.

TRUSTEE TRAPPINGS - The Board approved the creation of a Leo Key Chair in Government, and named Government Department Professor William C. Havard as the chair's first holder.

Most everyone was expecting a long meeting, considering the mammoth agenda passed out to the press, but the hour and 45 minute session was far shorter than normal. There were also several reports that the Board would take some major action in appointing an Amherst campus chancellor, and these rumors prompted one Boston T.V. station to send a camera crew to the meeting....but nothing earth-shattering transpired.

The meeting was Student Senate President Cynthia Olken's first as a trustee, and she remained silent throughout the meeting, speaking only when voting on the traditionally unanimous "public meeting" decisions.

Muskie Worries Over Nixon T.V. Blast

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edmund S. Muskie expressed concern Sunday over President Nixon's increasing use of television and possible effects of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's criticism of network television news last fall.

The Maine Democrat said Nixon was "being very skillful in his use of television . . . and as a result he can build momentum on an issue or on a confrontation with the Congress . . . that's very difficult to offset.

"And it may be that this will create an imbalance of forces in the political system which will be cause for real concern," he said in a television interview.

In the past two weeks the President has appeared on nationwide television three times: to deliver his State of the Union message, to veto the Education appropriations bill and for his news conference last Friday.

"There's another question that I think is involved" in the presidential television picture," Muskie said. "The Agnew speeches of last fall were thought by many, including people in the media, to be intimidating, designed to impose inhibitions. If they work, the result won't be visible.

"You wonder to what extent the response of the television media to our requests for equal time for when the President used the media for these political purposes, whether their response is not reflective of some intimidation as a result of the Agnew speeches."

"I don't know," he continued. "I'm not making the accusation but I think they ought to look at it; because the President in his veto message was clearly making a political decision, one that as President he must make, a responsibility he's certainly charged with carrying, but there are political implications and there's no way for us to offset them, effectively."

The interview was on NBC's "Meet the Press".

Helicopter Crashes in Hadley, All Four Passangers Escape Injury

SOUTH HADLEY - A helicopter carrying four persons on a flight to find sites for future heliports crashed into an open field from an altitude of 100 feet Saturday, but none of the occupants was seriously injured.

Anthony M. Ravosa, Springfield attorney and president of New England Helicopters, Inc., a four-month-old firm, was in the craft with his five-year-old son Anthony, Jr., business partner Edward G. Culverwell and Jack McGlaughlin, the pilot.

Ravosa received hand cuts, his son a bruise about the eye and Culverwell a bruised hand. The pilot was uninjured.

The $60,000 helicopter, a Bell 47G, came down several hundred yards from the Connecticut River and near the Riverboat Lounge in South Hadley which Ravosa owns.

The helicopter came to rest upside down after skidding about 30 feet. Pieces of the wreckage were strewn within a 25-yard radius of the wreck.

Ravosa, still shaken at the lounge as the FAA men made their investigation, insisted that he still had "great confidence in helicopters."

He described the crash as one in a million and argued that the fact that four persons walked away from this crash with only minor cuts and bruises shows how safe helicopters are."

An unconfirmed report said that the helicopter was turned over by a gust of wind. The FAA report on the accident is expected to be ready within a short time, Ravosa said.

Ravosa said Saturday night that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy D-Mass., telephoned about 5:30 p.m. to inquire about his condition.

Mrs. Claudette I. Ravosa, who spoke with the senator since her husband was still at Holyoke Hospital, said that Kennedy called to express his concern for the health of the family and to find out how the crash victims were.

X-rays taken at the hospital, were negative as to broken bones Ravosa said Saturday night.

The senator said that he too had survived an airplane crash several years ago and understood the traumatic experience, according to Mrs. Ravosa.

Groundhogs Prompt Funny Story

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

In anticipation of the immortal groundhog . . .

"If it shows its head around here I'll stomp on it!" exclaimed one irate member of the A.G.L. (Anti Groundhot League) while checking the Communications Center control panel. "If even one of those little buggers shows on campus, we'll be ready."

The Communications Center, operational as of 12:01 a.m. Feb. 2, 1970, is just another of those attempts by man to control his environment. "We don't want any groundhog deciding how long winter is going to be around here," declared an A.G.L. spokesman.

The attempt is apparently aimed at subverting the Groundhog movement. Some of the planned anti-groundhog devices include importing some of that Boston air. Hopefully the little brown creature will be so disgusted that he won't attempt to move into the atmosphere above his hole.

The multi-million dollar Communications Center is being experimented with at UMass and "several other strategic locations" around the country to keep the power of the groundhog in check. The concept, according to one Student Senator is the "greatest thing since ABM . . . those groundhogs are getting the upper hand on us."

. . . Anyway, for folks who can't remember just how the groundhog operates, the following is his plan of action: if he comes out and sees his shadow he runs back into his hole and we have six weeks more of winter.

Guy Beats Girls Wins Carni Title

BOSTON (AP) - The Winter Carnival queen is Everett Nau, a 6-foot-4, 220 pound junior from Kittery, Maine.

He defeated four lovely young girls to win the competition Saturday.

"I'm simply attempting to bring the role of male supremacy up to date," he said after being crowned by the four losers.

Electoral Fight Looms

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the second time, a proposed constitutional amendment providing for the election of the president by direct, popular vote has become entangled in a Senate fight over a Supreme Court nomination.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chief Senate sponsor of the amendment, has been trying since last September to get a vote on it in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Now he is threatening to use the nomination of Judge G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court as leverage.

He told a reporter that unless he can get a committee agreement fixing a time for a vote on the amendment, he may make full use of the committee's rules to delay a vote on Carswell's nomination.

Muskie Criticize Presidential Use of Television

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edmund S. Muskie expressed concern Sunday over President Nixon's increasing use of television and possible effects of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's criticism of network television news last fall.

The Maine Democrat said Nixon was "being very skillful in his use of television . . . and as a result he can build momentum on an issue or on a confrontation with the Congress . . . that's very difficult to offset.

"And it may be that this will create an imbalance of forces in the political system which will be cause for real concern," he said in a television interview.

In the past two weeks the President has appeared on nationwide elevision three times: to deliver his State of the Union message, to veto the Education appropriations bill and for his news conference last Friday.

"There's another question that I think is involved" in the presidential television picture," Muskie said. "The Agnew speeches of last fall were thought by many, including people in the media, to be intimidating, designed to impose inhibitions. If they work, the result won't be visible.

"You wonder to what extent the response of the television media to our requests for equal time for when the President used the media for these political purposes, whether their response is not reflective of some intimidation as a result of the Agnew speeches."

"I don't know," he continued. "I'm not making the accusation but I think they ought to look at it; because the President in his veto message was clearly making a political decision, one that as President he must make, a responsibility he's certainly charged with carrying, but there are political implications and there's no way for us to offset them, effectively."

The interview was on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Muskie also criticized the President for doing away with the White House guidelines used by the two preceding Democratic administrations to try and influence wage and price decisions and control inflation.

He said that in 1968, the last year of the Johnson administration, "price increases by the so-called guideline industries were 1 per cent as against 2.9 per cent for all other industries.

"In 1969, with guidelines wiped away, with the blank check the President gave these industries a year ago, price increases in guideline industries were 6 per cent compared to 3-1/2 per cent in all other industries."

Muskie said, "This is an indication of the inhibiting effect that White House leadership in the field of administered prices can have upon those prices."

Muskie, the Democratic party vice presidential candidate in 1968, declined to say whether he would be a candidate for his party's presidential nomination in 1972.

Asked "would you like to be President?" Muskie replied: "If the time is right in 1972 and if the job that needs to be done by Presidential leadership in my judgement appears to fit the talents I can offer, yes. I don't make these decisions 3-1/2 years in advance, and even if I made it to myself, I wouldn't announce it."

Students Flunk Teachers In City College Evaluation

An evaluation handbook being distributed this week at City College lists 36 faculty members as "not recommended," based on class ratings of their performance by students.

The student handbook also cites 101 faculty members with "consistently high ratings" that rank them among "the most outstanding in over-all teaching quality."

Included among the not-recommended category are five full professors, four associate professors and four assistant professors. Several untenured teachers on both lists have been notified that they will not be reappointed.

Copies of the handbook are being issued to each student just before he registers for courses this week. In the college's Great Hall yesterday, students were seen carefully checking over the lists before enrolling.

The statistical data for the survey data were compiled last spring. Questionnaires to students asked for evaluations on course organization, the teacher's encouragement to stimulate thought, his tolerance of disagreement, and his ability to explain course material. The results were correlated by computer.

In a foreword to the handbook, Neil Rand, educational affairs vice president of the college's Student Senate, writes that faculty response to the survey "already promises to benefit the college."

"It is hoped that many will respond to their individual ratings by re-examining their teaching methods or changing their course content where deficiencies are indicated, Mr. Rand says.

The handbook was published by the college's Student Senate. A nine - member student - faculty committee devised and conducted the survey.

A previous edition last September contained the same numerical ratings as the current edition but did not specifically endorse or disapprove teachers in separate listings.

Some professors listed as not recommended complained yesterday, however, that the ratings either had been based on inadequate sampling or reflected students' pique rather than dispassionate judgement.

"You just can't make an evaluation which affects someone's career on the basis of that kind of data," said Harry Levtow, an assistant professor of English. His "not recommended" rating was based on responses from 10 students enrolled in his course on Shakespeare.

Professor Levtow said the results were largely contradicted by another survey sponsored by the college's English majors' caucus, which showed a topranking for him from over half the students responding.

Our Far East policy brings people together.

The Jade East manifesto. Its aim: to bring men and women all over the world closer together.

Our policy would allow for all sorts of skirmishes, territorial gains and conquests. And still keep the peace.

Just put some Jade East on your face and neck. And anywhere else. If you've got a girlfriend, take her out as planned. If you're seeing a few girls, do whatever it is you're doing.

Now comes the best part. Since all girls are different, all reactions will be different. Some will be aggressive. Others, submissive. But whether our policy leads to final agreement or not, one thing's for sure.

The negotiations alone will be worth the price.

Henryck Szeryng, Violinist, To Give Concerts on Feb. 8, 9

The internationally acclaimed violin virtuoso Henryk Szeryng will appear in concert at the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts Feb. 8 and 9 under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council's Concert Association.

This event marks the fourth paid of Celebrity Series concerts of the 1969-70 season and brings to the attention of Connecticut Valley music lovers one of the great masters of the violin.

LBJ's Brother Thinks Lyndon To Run Again

NEW YORK (AP) - Sam Houston Johnson says he believes his brother Lyndon will run again for the presidency.

Harvard Opens New Dormitory For Undergrads

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Harvard University has opened the 10th of its undergraduate houses, this one named for Increase Mather, the sixth president of Harvard 1685-1701.

When fully occupied, the four and five-story Mather House buildings eventually will house 248 sophomores, juniors and seniors.

The new house has been under construction for more than two years, with funds supplied by the $82.5 million Program for Harvard College.

The ninth House, Quincy House, opened in the fall of 1959.

Buildings containing the Mather dining room and other facilities including the master's resident, will open about March 1. A 21-story, 200-foot tower is expected to be finished during the summer.

Here are 8 distinguished bankers. They're all in their 20's.

Only a few years ago these people were in college. Today they're officers of The First National Bank of Boston.

Every one of them is under 30. And already every one of them is clearly successful.

The First has always been the kind of place where a young man – or woman – could move up fast. We're not only the oldest bank in New England. We're also the largest; which means our people are getting promoted all the time.

If your field happens to be anthropology or Icelandic literature, we hope you won't write us off, either. Many of our best people did not study banking. And we often invent a job for applicants we particularly like.

If this is the first time banking has ever crossed your mind, this is soon enough. Many of our officers hadn't considered banking, either. They turned out to be just as good as the ones who did.

So if you have imagination and drive, we'd like to meet you. One of our personnel officers will be visiting your campus soon. If you think a career in banking might be right for you, check with your placement officer about having a talk with our man from The First. If you stop by the Placement Office today, you'll find our booklet outlining the career experiences of the 8 distinguished young bankers in the picture.

Poverty Committee Transports Food to Dorchester County

On Thursday evening, December 18, 1969, members of the Martin Luther King Council's Committee on Poverty, the Freedom Committee, and the Afro-American Society loaded approximately one ton of canned and dehydrated food, medicines, blankets, and winter clothing onto a van borrowed from Northern Education Service of Springfield. The loaded van, driven by UMass students Mike McCallum and Pat Santangelo reached Ridgeville, South Carolina, the following afternoon. McCallum and Santangelo unloaded their cargo at the black community church in Ridgeville in trust with Mrs. Victoria Delee, for distribution among those black and Indian families suffering most severely from hunger and malnutrition in Dorchester County.

On Friday evening, December 19th, Karen Forget, Peter Hawes, and Ken Mosakowski of the Committee on Poverty, and Bill Abbott of the Freedom Committee left Amherst for Ridgeville, carrying additional food and a sewing machine. Arriving Saturday afternoon, the group was warmly greeted by Mrs. Delee, who then provided a tour of some of the poorest families in the Ridgeville black community. Mrs. Gertie Creel led the group of students on a tour of the poor Indian community of Four Holes. Hawes photographed some of the delapidated homes in the black and Indian communities, the Indian cemetery, and the then-operative Freedom School which Mrs. Delee and Mrs. Creel had established as an alternative to the inferior education provided by the white-controlled school board for the Harleyville-Ridgeville school district. Later, Mosakowski, using a tape recorder furnished by Art Cohen of WFGR, interviewed Mrs. Delee and Mrs. Cree; John Muckenfuss and Robert Wilder , two poor Indians of the Four Holes community; and Mrs. Delee's daugher Doretha and her friend Gwendolyn Speaks, who were arrested, tear-gassed, and jailed when they petitioned the principal of the Harleyville-Ridgeville High School to be allowed to participate in the high school's extra-curricular activities.

On a trip to New York City the following weekend, Mosakowski left a copy of the taped interviews at radio station WBAI, along with information appealing for help for the poor people of Dorchester County. In a telephone conversation with Mosakowski on January 2nd, Bill Schechner of WBAI reported that he had broadcast an edited version of the taped interviews as a special program following the evening news on New Years Day. To date, three individuals have responded by mail to the appeal, including the noted artist Tecla, who has expressed an interest in exhibiting some of her works at the University of Massachusetts to dramatize the plight of poor people of all races in the United States.

Portions of the taped interviews with some of the poor people of Dorchester County will be broadcast tonight on WMUA's "Focus" program at 9 p.m.

According to Mosakowski, chairman of the Committee on Poverty, members of the Committee will be making another trip to Dorchester County on Friday, February 6th. The group will be transporting a half-ton of clothing which students at UMass collected during December. Like the food and commodities already transported, the clothing will be distributed among the neediest families in Dorchester County.

Those persons who would like to help the poor people of Dorchester County may still offer contributions for the February 6th trip. Most desparately needed is high-protein food, along with medicines such as aspirin, cold pills, and cough syrup; soap; detergent; needles and thread; towels; and blankets. Warm winter clothing will also be accepted. All contributions may be left at the Martin Luther King Council office in Hampshire House.

MLK Council Plans Power Conference

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council is making plans to give "power to the people." During the past semester, it has been examining its administrative structure, and has decided that it is too prone to elitism and factionalism. As a result, the King council will soon hold a weekend-long conference, open to the entire campus, which will determine its future programs, philosophy, and organizational structure.

In the past, the King Council decision-making body was its Board of Directors, a group of from 10 to 15 students, faculty, and administrators. Pressure from the general membership arose because the Board was not, for the most part, involved in the day-to-day work of the King Council, did not know first-hand the problems of operation, and was frequently dominated by two or three of its more strong-willed members. Thus arose the problem of elitism.

Recognizing this problem, interested members of the Board and the general membership began to study ways of overcoming the difficulty. A proposed Steering Committee, composed of preselected students and non-students chosen on the basis of their work on various committees, was defeated because it seemed unrepresentative of the needs of the campus. The Board finally adopted a program submitted by Robert Henderson which would open the decision to the entire University community, then dissolved itself in favor of a temporary Steering Committee.

Preceding the conference, which will be held within a month, there will be an open meeting devoted to presenting information about the need for change, the method with which that need will be met, and possible directions the change might take. In addition, there will be an information table set up in the Student Union Lobby to answer questions about present structure and programs. The restructuring conference itself will be open to the entire campus, and its decisions will be binding on the King Council.

It's a good idea; a lot of fun; an interesting experience. These are the words and opinions of the participants of the new experimental coed dorm, Greenough. Upon talking to these kids, certain conclusions and observations were evident. All the participants interviewed agreed that the forming of the new dorm had its best and most distinct advantage in the fact that no longer will there be such a definite boyfriend girlfriend relationship - but a friend to friend, or better yet, a brother sister type relationship. As one girl put it, "you have a friendly relationship with the guys here. You see them in their everyday experiences." Another girl had the same idea in mind when she said that it was definitely bad to have separate dorms, since there exists merely a dating basis - nothing more. And one senior expressed it aptly when he said that the separate dorms keep the girls and guys apart - which is neither natural nor a true environment. Interaction gets put on the dating level. But in a coed dorm where there is constant interaction with the opposite sex, one is forced to be oneself. Thus, there is a breakdown of the masculine-feminine roles.

It was interesting to note that in all the people interviewed, each stated the fact that they had previously known many of either the guys or the girls. Perhaps this made it quite a bit easier for them. The reasons for living in Greenough were many and varied, but the most typical and natural reason of all was expressed by one girl who, when asked why she had decided to live there, said: "My boyfriend lives downstairs."

Everything must have both its good and bad points and Greenough is no exception by any means. One guy admitted that last semester everyone in the dorm knew each other. They were a cohesive unit with much group interaction. The girls have taken over the third floor, and the guys don't go up there now. Not that they resent it, but the dorm's way of life is upset -- no longer is it a boys' dorm. For instance, the freshman had to leave because of the decision saying "no freshman" since it was thought that they had a hard enough time adjusting in the first place. Even for the upper classmen, there is a great deal of adjustment needed at Greenough. It is still too early to tell, but the unanimous consensus was -- "great so far!"

The girls differed as to if they had any reservations about how they looked in front of the boys. Several agreed that they took more pains about how they looked now. But the boys attitudes were just as they were before - very nonchalant about the whole thing.

The whole coed dorm situation began when Central Area Office wanted more girls. Last February, the solution became clear - why not have a coed dorm? There was a little opposition at first; the Administration kept stalling, but finally the proposal was accepted and the girls packed up and left their dorms for Greenough. Several boys remarked about the helpfulness of the boys on moving day. They helped paint walls and carry suitcases. "Just people trying to help each other."

The advantages are many and the disadvantages few according to those interviewed. One disadvantage mentioned by a guy was in regard to the telephone -- "it's always being used now!"

Inflation and The Good Guys

WASHINGTON - Since everyone seems to be interested in what will happen to the economy of the United States in the Seventies, I invited a distinguished panel of the nation's leading businessmen, labor leaders, economists and government forecasters to a meeting in Washington, D.C. to discuss the subject. The meeting was held in the shadow of the White House: in a booth at a Walgreen's Drugstore, to be exact.

Here are some excerpts from the discussion:

Elias Endicott of the Banking Institute of Compounded Quarterly Interest was very optimistic, "The challenge of the Seventies will be closely tied to the monetary policies of the government. If Washington gives the banks permission to raise the rates of interest on money borrowed, to a reasonable 18 1/3%, and at the same time permits us to pay no more than 2 1/8% interest on money deposited by our clients, we could send the inflationary spiral into a downtrend by 1975."

Sheldon Carbon, president of the Recall Motor Co., believes the key to the fight against inflation is labor's attitude toward wage increases. "Labor must be responsible and realize that any demands for wage increases will only heat up the economy.

"No one is more sympathetic to the rise of the cost of living of the average worker than management. At the same time, labor is only hurting itself when it makes unreasonable wage demands at a time when everyone should tighten his belt. To show that Recall Motors is serious about wanting to keep inflation from getting out of hand, the Recall board of directors has voted to increase the price of their new 1971 models by only $891.50 which still makes a two-door, four cylinder 'Recall' at $10,980 one of the best buys in the country."

Rock Sloboda, president of the United Typewriter, Sandstone, Match and Picture Framing Federation of Labor, felt that the Seventies would be an opportunity for everyone to show good faith. "We want to keep our demands in the ball park," Sloboda told the panel. "Therefore we will not ask for a three-hour, four day week, with double time for coffee breaks. We will stick to the same demands we made last year: a four-hour, three-day week with a two-month paid vacation every year. If management agrees to what we believe is the absolute minimum our members will accept, we see no reason for industry to increase its prices in the next 10 years."

Alexander Bell the XII, the telephone company's vice president in charge of public relations, said the phone company was working on more efficient and cheaper phone service than the American public had ever had before. To provide this cheaper service the phone company was asking for an increase in rates for the early Seventies of only 33 1/3%.

Charles Fairweather, President Nixon's adviser on inflationary trends, said the Administration still felt the solution to inflation was a "full unemployment program."

"Without belaboring the point," he told the panel, "the basic reason for inflation is that people have too much money to spend. If they are not working, the problem of inflation will take care of itself."

While the panel members came to no hard conclusions, they all agreed that the causes of inflation were other irresponsible forces at work in the country, who unlike them did not have the best interests of the United States at heart.

The South will Rise, Huh?

I find Brian Sibley's letter in support of Judge Carswell to be frightening (Friday's MDC). The terms "liberal" and "conservative" are vague and over-worked, but basically, a "conservative" is one who favors States' Rights and a strict interpretation of the Constitution so as to favor "free enterprise". Such conservatism is associated with protecting the status quo, and has favored poll taxes, literacy tests, and school segregation in the South, all of which have prevented the Black American in particular from enjoying equality and from participating in the democratic process of voting. Conservatism, in my mind, is associated with all that is unAmerican.

The hey-day of conservatism was during the McCarthy Era, which followed the Korean stalemate and the 1954 Supreme Court decision against school segregation; we are now faced with a defeat in Vietnam, and the Court has made another decision against segregation. The implications are clear. Already Mr. Agnew has labelled war protestors as "snobs", distinguished them from "patriotic" Americans, and implied that they give "aid and comfort" to the enemy, and thus prolong the war; and the "no-knock" clause of the new drug bill is an indication of things to come. We do not need any more "conservatives" in government; the Southern Pacification program of Richard Nixon has gone too far already! Peace.

"Within The System"

At the risk of being classified as a "white cultural chauvanist and/or a "facistly inclined racist", I feel I must answer Mr. Carlston Brown's letter to this newspaper on Friday Jan. 30.

To me it is inconceivable that Mr. Brown can call the Spectrum and the Collegian examples of "white, middle-class decadence and trivia". It is even more inconceivable to imply that because a person is white he cannot judge the literary value of a black magazine when you as a black can judge the Spectrum and the Collegian.

The institution of the "Drum" is an excellent and worthwhile idea-and that is why I am sure the Senate voted for its appropriation. Not because of demands and threats.

Believe it or not, the Senate is supposed to be representative of the students. If you do not like the actions of a certain Senator, it is possible to work within the system to remedy this.

The Senate has not exploited the Black population of this campus. Unless, of course, appropriating 30,000 dollars for the CCEBS program is exploitation.

It is very nice to throw around statements that white projects are irrelevant. But if we look at the facts, the Senate is trying to work for you - not against you. There are different views on many issues and in the spirit of democracy all should be heard and taken into account. No culture, race, or group is better than the other as that only they can speak for the totality of the "people's" demands.

He has been on the technical staff for the Summer Repertory Theatre.

Joseph Wilkins, class of '71, who plays Vladimir in Beckett's tragicomedy, has a long list of UMass theatre credits. He played Camille in the UT fall production of "Danton's Death", Everyman in "Man for All Seasons", Dr. Jardin in "Mad Woman of Chaillot", and bit parts in "Plough and the Stars" and "Henry V".

William Over, a senior at UMass, takes the roles of Estrogon in "Waiting for Godot". He has been seen at the University in "Mad Woman of Chaillot", "The Good Woman of Setzuan" and "Man for All Seasons". Over also took the part of the judge in "The Sign of Jonah" and has done reader's theatre. Estrogon is his first major role.

David Zucker, a UT veteran of four years, is Pozzo in Beckett's play. His previous acting credits include major roles in "Barefoot in the Park" and "Man for All Seasons" for the Roister Doisters, and "The Changeling", "Mad Woman of Chaillot", "The Good Woman of Setzuan", and "Awake and Sing!" for UT. He also had the leads in "Llola" at Smith College last fall, and in "Animal Farm" at Mount Holyoke about a month ago.

Brian Marsh, who plays the hapless Lucky, is a senior and has done extensive work in theatre outside of UMass. He played the roles of Simone and Barere in the UT production of "Danton's Death" in December. Marsh has had numerous roles for the Amherst "70" Players theatre group from Amherst College. In the Barnardston Summer Theatre he has played in "Finian's Rainbow", "Long Day's Journey into Night", "Fanny", "Wait Until Dark", and "Inherit the Wind".

The part of the Boy in Beckett's play is taken by Danny Silver, the nine-year-old son of Isadore Silver, a professor at U-Mass.

John Woods, who graduated in January, is technical director and lighting designer for "Waiting for Godot". He is well-known in University theatre for his work in almost all theatre productions during the past three years. His credits include technical director and lighting designer for "Man for All Seasons", and stage manager for "Danton's Death", "Mad Woman of Chaillot", "The Changeling", as well as stage manager for the upcoming UT production of "West Side Story".

For the past three years, Woods has been the Jack-of-all-trades on the technical end for the Summer Repertory Theatre.

Paul Wonsek, who is stage manager for "Waiting for Godot", has worked in theatre at UMass (and outside of it) for the four years he has been an undergraduate. He was the technical director for Operetta Guild, when the group produced "Annie, Get your Gun", for which he also designed lights, and "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying", for which he designed the lights and the set.

Wonsek was the lighting designer for Bowker Auditorium last year, and also for the Fine Arts' modern dance demonstrations. He will design the lights and the set for the upcoming Children's Theatre presentation of "Mr. Popper's Penguins".

Two summers ago Wonsek was technical director and lighting designer for the popular Mount Tom playhouse, as well as being acting instructor-in-residence there.

The Roister Doisters is a student-run theatre group, and has held one production a year for over fifty years. Officers for the club are: Pamela Klein, president; Glenna Fickert, vice-president; Paul Pearl, treasurer; and Maria Gounaris, personnel coordinator.

Tickets for "Waiting for Godot" may be reserved daily 10 to 6 at Bowker, or by calling the box office at 545-2149. Student tickets are $1.50, general admission $2.00.

Winter Carni, '70: Something for Everyone

Red Garter Set for Fri. Night

Readers already acquainted with the RED GARTER SALOONS of New Orleans, San Francisco or Chicago, or who remember the one that spent two years with us at the New York Worlds Fair will understand our delight. Those who haven't had the thrill of any of these places had better 23-skidoo right out to the Student Union on February 13. But a WARNING. Don't go near the RED GARTER if you want to keep a long face.

Difficult to describe, it's easier to say what the RED GARTER isn't. It's not a bar, not a restaurant, not a nightclub, and praise be, not a discotheque. It's simple a wonderful good-time experience. But the REDGARTER'S not for dining or decor. It's for a relaxing evening of fun for everyone - from those who wore handlebar moustaches and rode bicycles built for two down through their grandchildren.

Bill Rutan is the tenor banjo lead of the Peppermint-stripe vested band that sits on stage in the RED GARTER. Triple-tongued trombones, double-stroked tremolo'd banjos against the oompah-syncopation of a golden Sousaphone, play to the 700 seat house like there is no tomorrow. Things like "BYE-BYE BLACKBIRD", and "SAINTS GO MARCHIN IN" soon will have you handclappin' and foot-stompin' in a wonderful sing-along.

Then there's a girl. Ruth Crews is the only girl entertainer in any of the RED GARTERS. There's no other like her. She's big, she's buxom, she's blonde and she's a belter. When she takes the stage in that black sequined pup-tent, grabs the microphone like a baseball bat and braces herself against the trombone blast, you'll know you're in for something special.

You'll love the REDGARTER. So put it on your list of fun spots for Winter Carnival 1970, February 13, 7:00 and 10:00 p.m. Admission $1.25.

Free Food and Fashions For WC Sat. Afternoon

Miss Carol Lee Andrews is the creator of this unique event for the first big weekend of 1970. The fashion show will begin at 2 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge (Student Union) and will be free of charge. Free refreshments will be available for hungry observers.

A star announcer will introduce the twenty semi-finalists of the Winter Carnival Queen Contest who will model the fashions which date from Biblical times to the present day. A fashionable celebrity will be clad in the fig leaf costume.

All are cordially invited to view the free and relaxed atmosphere of the Winter Carni Fashion Show of 1970. Come and see the ravishing semi-finalists and at the same time enjoy free refreshments. It will be a unique and memorable event.

Movie Reviews

"Z" Comes on as Forceful Film

"Z" is an extraordinary movie. A horrifying brutality that unites its viewers in a synchronized series of sharp gasps, hesitant releases, and stunned silences. A unification brought about by a repulsion so forceful it possesses you, defines you.

Forces of good and evil are not disguised by the director, as subtlety is not a tool of men of brute force. (What color hat does Mayor Daley wear?) The faces of the assassins, of those murdered, of government officials, and street thugs, spliced barriers of time and place together. Robert Kennedy, and Martin Luther King, are killed by Nazi hoodlums, in the streets of Rome. Clubs substitute for eloquence, and we, rational western man, must cry. Tears instead of cleverness, for who is able to speak at the sight of a man's guts, flowing in the gutter.

Are we capable only of security's joy? Of lowing our lovers and caring for our children? Of "enjoying" our freedom? To honestly commemorate our present practices of brotherhood and freedom, we need only decorate our Christmas Trees with used condoms. Or sever our bloodied hands (how campy), and exchange them as Valentine Day cards.

To speak of optimism now, would be to betray a mind and a heart, colliding in the pit of my stomach.

Newman Shines in Funny Flick

"Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" is a fast-moving super western with Paul Newman and Robert Redford as the good "bad-guys" hotly pursued through their little saga by an incredibly persistent band of lawmen. The duo's "hole-in-the-wall" train-robbing gang is broken up by this ruthless group and their days of plundering the Union Pacific Railroad come to an abrupt halt.

Butch and Sundance decide after an amazing game of hide and seek with the law, that it is time to follow through one of Butch's many ideas and take off to Bolivia. Once there in its barren midst they learn the language for their trade and begin to pilfer Bolivian loot. All goes well until thinking they are again pursued, they go straight but later revert back to the trade they know best - living and dying in the tradition of "Bonnie and Clyde".

The dialogue is quick, funny and nothing seems to lack. The use of old-time yellow-tinted film is of added interest in this story of by-gone cops and robbers and Newman and Redford come off as very believable real characters in a film that is pure fun.

First in Series of Lectures on Dickens To Be Delivered by Rochester Professor

In accordance with the world-wide recognition of the 100th anniversary of Charles Dickens' death in 1870, the Department of English will sponsor a series of lectures in honor of Dickens and his work.

The first lecture in this series of Dickens Centenary Lectures will be presented today, February 2, at 4 p.m. in SBA 120. George H. Ford, distinguished Professor of English and Chairman of the Department at the University of Rochester, will deliver a lecture entitled "Dickens and the Voices of Time".

Professor Ford is the author of DICKENS AND HIS READERS. He has edited DAVID COPPERFIELD and HARD TIMES. With Lauriat Lane, Jr., he edited THE DICKENS CRITICS. He served on the Advisory Boards of VICTORIAN STUDIES and DICKENS STUDIES ANNUAL.

Monroe Engel from Harvard and Edgar Rosenburg from Cornell will be two other guest speakers in this series.

Charles Dickens died of a stroke on June 9, 1870. He was working on the unfinished mystery EDWIN DROOD at the time of his death.

Charles Dickens portrayed even his most despicable characters with a kind of "humaneness" and understanding that showed the criminal mind to be twisted by outside forces, not innate human meanness. Pictured above is Bill Sikes, the violent, thieving murderer from OLIVER TWIST.

Probably one of the most moving tributes to Dickens was given by THE LONDON TIMES, his one-time enemy. "Statesmen, men of science, philanthropists, the acknowledged benefactors of their race," it said editorially, "might pass away, and yet not leave the void which will be caused by the death of Dickens . . . Indeed, such a position is attained by not even one man in an age. It needs an extraordinary combination of intellectual and moral qualities . . . before the world will consent to enthrone a man as their unassailable and enduring favourite. This is the position which Mr. Dickens has occupied with the English and also with the American public for the third of a century . . . Westminster Abbey is the peculiar resting place of English literary genius; and among those whose sacred dust lies there, or whose names are recorded on the walls, very few are more worthy than Charles Dickens of such a home. Fewer still, we believe, will be regarded with more honour as time passes, and his greatness grows upon us."

Senate Investigators Don't See End of War

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two Senate investigators foresee grave new American dilemmas in South Vietnam, in a war they describe as "not only far from won but far from over."

That assessment came in a staff report released Sunday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which plans hearings Tuesday and Wednesday on a series of resolutions seeking to shape future U.S. foreign policy.

Ten senators are scheduled to testify.

James G. Lowenstein and Richard M. Moose went to Saigon Dec. 7 on their 13-day study mission for the committee.

While their findings seemed generally mixed, their conclusions were pessimistic. They told the committee that the evidence on which current U.S. policy is based appears "ambiguous, confusing and contradictory."

The policy's success, they said, depends on three factors: The progressive Vietnamization of the war, turning over to South Vietnamese forces combat operations now conducted by Americans.

The stability and cohesiveness of the Saigon government led by President Nguyen Van Thieu.

"The expectation that the enemy can and will do nothing to inhibit Vietnamization or disrupt the Thieu government's stability."

"....The prospects for a successful outcome of any one of the aforementioned three factors, must be regarded as, at best, uncertain," their report said.

If the North Vietnamese should launch a massive attack during the course of American withdrawal, Moose and Lowenstein said, the United States would face the agonizing prospects of halting or reversing the reduction of its troops pull-out altogether in what would be interpreted as a military and political defeat.

"If Vietnamization fails, the United States cannot withdraw and still claim to have achieved its stated objectives," the two consultants said.

They said also the overthrow of the Thieu regime "would probably plunge South Vietnam into a state of political anarchy and at the same time severely strain public patience in the United States."

But their report quoted opposition groups in Vietnam as saying that if the present regime remains in power, Vietnamization will fail. "What must replace U.S. troops is the confidence of the people in a government which would deny the enemy a sympathetic population," they said.

Their account said also that many in Vietnam believe Thieu "has the support of no more than 20 per cent of the population," while Communist support is rated at about 15 per cent.

The report said the pacification program has been improved, Communist defections reached a record rate last year, and "there has been progress in Vietnamization."

They reported uncertainty about the future course of U.S. withdrawal. "In fact, the talk in Saigon, among Vietnamese as well as Americans, is in terms of keeping some 250,000 troops there for years," they said.

Vietnam Fighting Reported Heaviest

SAIGON (AP) - The U.S. Command said Monday more than 400 enemy troops were killed in week end fighting described as the heaviest sustained action so far this year.

The Viet Cong killed 19 Americans and wounded 119 Saturday and Sunday in more than 70 attacks of various kinds, spokesmen said.

The Viet Cong has called a three-day cease-fire for Tet, the lunar new year, which falls on Friday. U.S. officers had been expecting an upsurge in enemy activity either just before or just after the holiday.

In one mortar attack Sunday night, shells loaded with tear gas were fired into the headquarters base camp of the 173rd Airborne Brigade, 300 miles northeast of Saigon.

Field reports said 11 South Vietnamese troops were killed and 86 wounded in a score of weekend clashes between the allies and North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops ranging from the Mekong Delta south of Saigon to the far northern frontier along the demilitarized zone.

Allied forces backed by bombers, helicopter gunships and artillery killed 405 enemy troops during the past 48 hours, allied headquarters said in battlefield communiques. The communiques said that in some of the fights, the enemy dead were counted by aerial observers after air and artillery attacks against the enemy positions.

South Vietnamese forces reported killing more than 80 enemy soldiers in a battle along the Demilitarized Zone and 65 in a second battle 20miles south of Da Nang. A North Vietnamese company commander was killed and another captured in a third battle 30 miles northwest of Saigon, the government said.

Eleven South Vietnamese soldiers were reported killed including a battalion commander slain in an enemy attack on the headquarters of an infantry regiment near Quang Ngai City, 80 miles south of Da Nang.

Newspaper Charges Britain With Maleyan Massacre in 1948

LONDON (AP) - The Defense Ministry said Sunday night it is studying newspaper allegations that British soldiers massacred 25 suspected terrorists held prisoner in the Malayan jungle in 1948.

The Sunday newspaper, the People, made the charges in a copyrighted article containing testimony of former British soldiers whose unit was involved in the alleged atrocity.

Emanuel Shinwell, now a labor MP and the secretary of war in 1948, told newsmen he had not heard of the incident while in office.

Another labor MP, Marcus Lipton, said he would submit a motion in the House of Commons Monday asking Defense Secretary Dennis Healey to investigate.

GE Strike Appears Near End Workers Accepting Contract

(AP) The contract proposed to settle the 3-month old General Electric strike met a mixed reaction Sunday, but early results indicated most union members were accepting the new package.

The majority of the 147,000 workers affected, however, were not expected to vote on the proposal before Tuesday or Wednesday.

Among the locals voting Sunday, International Union of Electrical Workers, AFL-CIO, Local 901 in Fort Wayne, Ind., approved the contract by a 97 per cent margin, union officials reported. Some 4,000 of the 7,000 member IUE local voted.

Two IUE locals at Pittsfield, Mass., representing 5,500 white collar and production workers also voted "overwhelmingly" in favor of the new pact, their officials said.

Local 320 of IUE in Syracuse N.Y. however, rejected the contract by a wide margin, the union reported. About 2,500 of the 5,000 members voted, but no vote totals were available.

IUE Local 761 in Louisville, Ky., with 15,000 members, narrowly accepted the contract, it was reported. The vote tabulation was not available immediately.

Plane Crashes In Turners Falls

TURNERS FALLS, Mass (AP) - A light plane crashed shortly after takeoff at Turners Falls Airport Sunday, but both occupants escaped injury.

Harold D. Gayle of Kensington, Conn., the pilot, told police his carburetor iced up when the plane was about 500 feet in the air. He said he tried to turn around and land, but lost power and the engine quit.

The plane hit a snow bank on the end of the landing strip, shearing off its landing gear. The craft pancaked on the runway and slid off.

Authorities said Gayle and his passenger, Miss Sandra L. Dawson of Rockport, Mass., were shaken up but not injured.

SSSJ Concerned For Soviet Jews

BOSTON (AP) - Some 250 members of the New England region of the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry demonstrated peacefully yesterday afternoon outside Symphony Hall where the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra performed.

Leaders of the SSSJ said the demonstration was not against the orchestra but against oppression of Jews in the Soviet Union.

Kiril Kondrashin, music director of the orchestra, was presented a floral wreath in the shape of the Jewish star at a ceremony in Symphony Hall. Originally, it was to have been presented outside the hall with the press present but Kondrashin would not consent, the SSSJ leaders said.

The presentation was to have been a token from the group to welcome the orchestra and yet express concern for Jews in the Soviet Union.

Kondrashin, through an interpreter, said he would accept the star only as an expression of friendship from Americans to Russians.

The interpreter said Kondrashin did not feel the Jewish star was an appropriate form for a floral wreath under the terms outlined by the group.

N.E.S. Tutors Asked To Register in Union

All unassigned tutors for the N.E.S. tutorial program of last semester are asked to update their registration cards at the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council Information Table. All active tutors are asked to confirm their participation in the program.

The Information Table will be set up in the Student Union starting today and to run for several weeks. The table will be set up from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. week days.

As with scheduling conflicts and course overloads that occur on campus, many volunteer tutors who were not assigned were also victim of a similar problem with N.E.S. Thus tutors and tutees stand waiting. At present there is a need for elementary math and reading tutors for the afternoon sessions.

Many volunteer tutors can tutor in this subject but have placed other preferences on their registration cards. An effort this semester is being made to fill this area of education. All new volunteers for the N.E.S. program are asked to register at the Information Table with this problem in mind.

The N.E.S. program starts today. The bus will be picking up tutors in front of the Whitmore Administration building at the new 2:45 and regular 6:30 times, Monday thru Thursday.

High Jumpers Top BAA

UMass' Cal Carpenter and Ed Saughnessey both cleared 6'4" to tie for second in the BAA high jump held Saturday at Northeastern Univ. Their performances topped those of all the Redmen that competed at the afternoon meet at Boston Garden.

Joining the two upperclassmen at the 6'4 height was freshman Bill Hackler. Another frosh, Chris Worth, sailed over the 6'2 mark before being eliminated.

The first running event at the Garden was the handicapped two mile relay. UMass started from scratch at the starting line with Bill Donaldson leading off for the Redmen. The senior half miler completed his route in 1:58.9 and handed off to Ron Wayne. Making a rare appearance at this distance, Wayne smoothly turned out a 1:56.1 half moving up on the teams that were given a lead. Third man Al Mangan completed his half in 2:00 and Larry Paulson ran a 2:03 half anchoring the team to a fifth place finish.

In the other UMass relays, the varsity relay placed fourth in their heat with a time of 3:33.1. Jerry Spellman ran the fastest leg of the Redmen with a 52 second quarter. The frosh mile relay team ran 3:35.6 with Tom Swain running the fastest leg in 53.

Jim Graves repeated his performance of the K of C meet by again making the semi-finals in the hurdles with a fine clocking of 5.9.

The turning point of the match occurred with the Redmen leading 6-3 after three matches. Central's Henry Marchetti, twice New England champ, was facing Goldberg, and the Central coach must have been counting on a win in this weight class. Goldberg escaped in the second period to take the lead but Marchetti equaled this with an escape in the third.

Neither wrestler could score a takedown and the match ended in a 1-1 draw with exactly 0:00 riding time. Sheldon was mobbed by his teammates as he came off the mat and UMass, clearly having the momentum, ran away with the meet.

Zguris once again thrilled the fans. He gave away 50 lbs. to his opponent, yet clearly outwrestled him. George scored a third period takedown and his 2:02 riding time gave him the points he needed to gain a 6-6 tie. A questionable call by the referee cost George three points and the victory.

Barr was elated over the wins. "This was our best effort of the year", he said after Saturday's meet. "I thought the kids were too tight against Coast Guard but they looked real loose today." He praised the work of Buckbee and Zguris. "Bruce is two for two in varsity competition and you can't ask for more than that," Barr quipped.

Goldberg didn't win over the weekend but could have been the outstanding wrestler. He tied two of the best in New England in his weight class. Tyma also was impressive, as was Davis. The biggest meet of the year will take place on Tuesday when the Redmen travel to Springfield to take on the number one Chiefs. More on that tomorrow.

UMass Gymnasts Beat Army, 157.10-152, Have Eyes on PennSt.

By JOE PARNAR
Staff Reporter

Despite a month-long layoff from competition the Redmen scored over 157 points for the second time in a row. The performance of the UMass gymnasts in the meet with Army indicates that UMass has an excellent chance to upset Penn State on Wednesday.

Individual performances by Joe Reed, Rick Riley and co-captains Steve Cary an Mike Kasavana highlighted the meet.

Reed performed his best still rings routine of the season, scoring a 9.3. Reed's fine performance left the nearest Army gymnast a distance eight-tenths of a point behind.

Riley, one of UMass' most consistent gymnasts, scored a 9.15 in the side horse event. He has scored a 9.0 or better in all of UMass' meets so far this season.

Cary placed second in the long horse vault with a 9.2. His excellent score failed to net him a first place only because of a 9.3 vault by Harvey of Army.

Kasavana won the floor exercise event with an 8.8, bettering Army's top effort by four-tenths of a point. Reed took second for the Redmen in this event with an 8.6. The event saw UMass jump to an early lead that it would never relinquish.

In the side horse event UMass outscored Army, 26.05-24.05, to increase its lead to 51.60-48.95. Riley won the event with his 9.15 routine and Frank Dean took second for the Redmen with an 8.6.

Reed's 9.3 in the still rings event easily netted him first place. UMass captured the remaining two top positions as Norm Vexler scored an 8.75 and Mike Peloquin an 8.70. The running score of the meet was UMass 78.35, Army 73.05, at this point.

In the long horse vault, Army outscored UMass, 27.25-26.90. Harvey won the event for Army with a 9.3 to edge out Cary, who scored 9.2. Gerlach captured the third position for Army with a 9.0.

Scorewise, the parallel bars event was a deadlock with both the Redmen and Army gathering 25.55 team points. Vexler was edged out by Kirby of Army for first in the event. Vexler scored an 8.75 with Kirby at 8.8.

In the horizontal bar event UMass' Scott Stover and Tony Vacca took a second and third place respectively. The event was won by Senor of Army with a 9.3. Stover's score was 8.95 and Vacca's 8.8. In this event, all of UMass' performers scored over 8.0.

The high bar event score saw Army edge the Redmen by .2 points, 26.50-26.30, bringing the final meet score to UMass 157.10 Army 152.35.

The Redmen are now preparing for one of their most important meets of the season. Wednesday evening, UMass will host Penn State in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym.

Penn State recently lost its first home meet in 13 years, to Springfield College, by five one-hundredths of a point. Meet scores of both Penn State and UMass this past season indicate two evenly matched teams. The experience gained by the Redman gymnasts in Saturday's meet could prove to be a great asset to UMass on Wednesday.

The UMass frosh also remained undefeated as they downed the Army Plebes, 133.55-114.50. Al Mancini scored a 9.05 in the long horse vault and Jack Berner an 8.7 in floor exercises to capture individual scoring honors.

UMass' Steve Scuderi was the high scorer in the all-around event, gathering 45.25 points. The little Redmen meet Boston State College in a home meet this Saturday.

when it was found out that Vermont had beaten Connecticut, which was previously undefeated in the Yankee Conference....Because Rhode Island also has one Conference loss and because the Redmen (2-2 in the Conference) still have to face both UConn and Rhody, UMass can assure itself of at least a tie for the league championship should it win the remainder of its Conference games...

Redmen Whip Northeastern, 90-62

4200 See UMass Win 3rd Straight Erving. 30 Points, 27 Rebounds

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

A capacity Cage crowd of 4200 boisterous basketball fans saw UMass clout Northeastern University, 90-62, for its third straight victory Saturday night as Julius Erving poured through 30 points and grabbed 27 rebounds for the resurging Redmen.

The home team delighted the folks on hand with a 17-point outburst over the last six minutes of the first half to change a 32-29 deficit into a 46-34 lead at intermission. The rest of the way was easy as UMass upped its record to 8-5 and whipped its second Boston team in a row, having knocked off Boston University, 103-68, on Wednesday.

The Redmen have a chance to make that three in a row when they travel to Chestnut Hill Tuesday night to challenge Boston College.

As has been the case in so many UMass hoop contests this year, Erving was the glitter guy for the Redmen. The star sophomore forward tallied 30 points on 13 of 17 shots from the field (a blistering 76%) and four of six from the line. The nation's second leading rebounder picked off 27 more caroms.

Not to be forgotten in the accolades accorded to Erving were the solid performances turned in by captain Ray Ellerbrook and center Ken Mathias. The former scored 15 points, 13 of them coming in the first half, and added eight assists. Mathias chipped in with 14 points as he came in to relieve Dick Samuelson in the early goings.

Northeastern had the upper hand for most of the first 14 minutes of the game. At various points, the Huskies held leads of 14-10, 21-18, 26-21, 28-23, 30-25 and 30-29.

With the score at 30-29, NU's Kevin Shea connected on a short jumper to put his team up, 32-29, with 6:08 left in the half. The visitors would not score again until a last second buzzer shot.

Ellerbrook put UMass within one, 32-31, on a 20-footer from the baseline. Mathias followed a minute later with a short tap-in. Shortly afterwards, with 3:35 showing on the clock, Jack Gallagher completed a Redman fast break with a pretty lefthanded driving layup to put them in the lead, 35-32. He was fouled on the play and calmly added the 36th point, from the line.

As Northeastern was blowing three straight one-and-one foul situations, two hoops by Erving, two more by Ellerbrook and one more by Mathias led UMass to its 46-34 halftime lead. NU's 34th point came at the buzzer on a 12-foot jumper by Jack Maheras.

The Redmen tallied 44 points in the second half as the closest Huskie threat came with 17:39 to go, the score reading 50-40. Erving canned five points and Mike Pagliera added two as UMass built up a 57-40 advantage with 12:39 left.

Three Erving markers, two from John Betancourt and two straight baskets by Dennis Chapman gave the home team a 20-point, 66-46, lead with 8:45 left. By this time coach Jack Leaman was making free use of his bench strength as eight different players chipped in for the last 24 Redman points and the final 28-point spread of 90-62.

HOOP NOTES - Ellerbrook, who scored his 1,000 UMass point in Wednesday's win over Boston University, ran his total to 1,018, four points shy of sixth place on the all-time Redman scoring list.. Tim Edwards has the hold on sixth position with 1,022...Erving's scoring average is now 26.1, his rebounding average stands at 20.5 ....The Redmen shot 60.7% from the floor....With Erving, Ellerbrook and Mathias doing double-figure scoring, Leaman has been able to afford to start his strongest defensive forward, Gallagher, and the results have been excellent....Gallagher had eight points in 30 solid minutes of basketball against the Huskies Saturday; one can surely recall what the 6'4 senior did to BU's Jim Hayes on defense....Four minutes into the second half, an abbreviated fight broke out between Mathias and NU's Shea....Mathias got in the best shot....The Amherst Boys Club basketball teams, featuring a couple of four-year veterans, entertained the onlookers between the halves of the frosh and varsity tilts....UMass got an added lift shortly after the game

Grapplers Upend C.G., 22-11, Whip Central Conn., 26-7

By BOB GANLEY Staff Reporter

Before two near capacity crowds, the UMass wrestling team established itself as one of the best in New England with two big wins over the weekend. On Friday night, the Redmen broke an 11-11 tie by winning the last three matches en route to a 22-11 win over the Coast Guard Academy. Then, on Saturday afternoon, they put together their best performance of the season in a 26-7 romp over Central Connecticut State College, the second ranked team in New England going into the meet.

The Redmen jumped into an early lead against Coast Guard on the strength of wins by Nick DiDomenico, Rick Tyma, Clay Jester and a Sheldon Goldberg draw. However, the Bears came right back with two wins in the middle-weights and the meet was tied going into the 177 lb. match.

Tom Andrewes gave the Redmen the lead again as he won a 5-2 decision and the pressure was on Bruce Buckbee, wrestling his first varsity match. Bruce's 190 lb. opponent was supposedly Coast Guard's outstanding wrestler, but Bruce completely dominated the match on way to a 5-2 decision.

The win gave the Redmen an insurmountable six point lead with only the heavyweight match remaining, but the fireworks were far from over. UMass captain George Zguris and Coast Guard's Swenson staged a pier-six brawl which had the large crowd on its feet cheering. Both wrestlers were nearly pinned as they rolled around the mat and Zguris finally ended the 9-9 match with a pin at 5:42. He left the mat amidst a standing ovation which was for both him and his teammates.

Coach Homer Barr felt the meet had been a little too close and he told the team so, after it was over. His little lecture apparently worked as the Redmen came out Saturday and completely blew Central out of the gym.

Icemen Seek Vermont Revenge Tonight

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

A revenge-minded band of Redmen will be out to stop the red-hot University of Vermont hockey squad tonight in a 7:30 p.m. game at Orr Rink. The Catamounts, boasting an 8-4 record, have won three games in a row.

The last time these two squads met, UVM emerged with a 3-2 overtime victory up at Burlington in early December. Only a spectacular display of goal tending by UMass' P.J. Flaherty, who ended up with 27 saves to Catamount goalie Dave Reece's 15, kept the margin to one goal.

Coach Jim Cross' Catamounts are a well drilled, fast skating squad with a fine 7-4 record in Division II play. Their lone Division 1 victory was over Pennsylvania, a team which has beaten UMass, 7-3.

Against UMass, the Catamounts consistently outhit and outskated the Redmen and beat them to the puck on numerous occasions. UVM's superior speed enabled them to control the puck for much of the game, a key factor in the victory.

The big UVM defensemen, led by George Kreiner, are adept at clearing out opposing forwards and are especially tough in front of the net. Senior Kreiner, at 6', 206, the leader of the club, is a strong body checker with a hard shot and is a capable penalty killer.

This ability was particularly apparent when the Redmen held a two man advantage for the first 1:40 of the second period in a tie ball game. Kreiner, teaming with defensemen Steve Lane and center Tom Crane kept UMass from getting any hard shots from in close in a situation that could have seriously affected the momentum of play.

Kreiner, All-ECAC last year, will probably team with Ted Yeates, a rushing defenseman who handles the puck very well. Tim Bickford and Bill Dunnington will form a second blue line combo.

Bickford is tough and strong and blocks many shots. Dunnington plays his position well and is considered to be a student of the game. Lane and Owen Jenkins will form the third set on defense.

The star up front is junior center George Minarsky, who up to Saturday's game with Amherst, had accounted for 16 points which included six goals. He holds the UVM season scoring record with 24 goals, and has totaled 11 points in his last seven outings. Fast and shifty, Minarsky is not afraid to mix it on the ice.

Tied with Minarsky in scoring is wing mate Jim Yeates, brother of Ted. He is an outstanding passer who has had the tendency to pass rather than shoot.

Jeff McLaughlin and Tom Crane are the other centers. McLaughlin, from Newton, sports a "fu manchu' a la Joe Namath but is better known for his shifty skating and passing ability. Crane is a dependable defensive player. Also certain to see action is soph Dave Snelgrove who broke Minarsky's previous frosh scoring record. He is an excellent stick handler.

Bob Krebs and Sam Simmons will team with McLaughlin. Krebs scored the winner against UMass and is a hustler with a good shot. Simmons is very quick.

Other wings who will see action are Ned Grant, Walt Kelly and Dick Mullany. All have the reputation of being hard workers.

Dave Reece, currently tied for third in Division II with a 3.18 goals against average will mind the nets. Against the Redmen, he was never seriously challenged.

Hopefully the home ice advantage will be the shot in the arm the Redmen need to beat the Catamounts. UMass is undefeated at home and in beating Hamilton last Wednesday they proved that they can stay with the good teams.

If UMass can skate and hit against UVM the way they did against Hamilton, they'll have a good shot at upsetting the Catamounts. The Redmen are a young team that has been improving with each outing.

No Rate Hike for Residence Heads Student Rent To Rise by One-Third

The meeting of Heads of Residence and Area Co-ordinators last night in the Worcester Dining Commons to plan a course of action countering the proposed rent increases was jolted by an announcement by Dean Fitzpatrick that the Head of Residence rates will not be raised. This decision, according to Dean Fitzpatrick, was not reached until 5:45 p.m. Monda

The decision to raise the rents had been reached early last week and had not been disclosed to Area Co-ordinators until last Friday.

In making the announcement, Fitzpatrick warned the Heads of Residence to avoid "confrontation situations". He emphasized that such situations leave a "deep scar on the University community."

Reaction came swiftly from the people in attendance, which included some student senators. The emphasis was switched to the student rent increases, which constitute a 33% rise above the present rates.

The Heads of Residence decided to form a steering committee made up of representative Heads of Residence from each area. The committee will attempt to form a plan of "action" for the Heads of Residence.

ROOM RATE INCREASES QUESTIONED

The student rent increases, as proposed by the Treasurer will run as follows, pending approval by the Trustees: $550 for the traditional dorms; $650 for the S.W., Orchard Hill, Brett, and Gorman; and $730 for the new Northeast area dorms.

These increases promise to raise the ire of many students. The Heads of Residence were in general agreement that they should back the students in finding the reasons why the 'exhorbitant" increases and their actions.

AREA CO-ORDINATORS SHOW CONCERN

The Area Co-ordinators present at the meeting expressed concern over the methods and approaches the Administration has used in dealing with this problem.

"It concerns me that such decisions affecting individuals to the tune of approximately $800.00 per year are made with such ease." (West was referring to the reversal in the decision to raise the Head of Residence rents).

Central Area Co-ordinator Bill Idol reflected that "there is a real crisis of trust by the University...if things go along like this we are going to be in a hell of a mess."

One person in attendance suggested that the student rent increase could be attributed to the idea that "It appears easier to get the money from the students than from the legislature."

There was at one time during the meeting a motion that the group look into the "non-negotiable, unilateral" aspects of the rent increases.

Rent Hike Promises to Be Big Campus Issue

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

The whole issue of students' room rent increases promises to be the most controversial item that students will have to deal with during the present semester.

Obviously the student population at UMass can accept the increases with the rationale that the Treasurer's figures will show the need for said rent increases. UMass is in a tough financial situation. There is talk of raising the tuition to $600 per year. "It appears easier to get the money from the students than the legislature."

The catch (catch-22?) is that the students get squelched before everyone else. One Student Senator pointed out that a student paying $80 a month for half a cubicle is not getting an extremely fair deal.

Students are being asked to accept the increase; to avoid confronting the administration. Dean Fitzpatrick pleaded to avoid "confrontation situations", because of the "scar" they leave on a University community.

The movement at the meeting of Heads of Residence seemed to be towards a recognition of the students' rights to avoid being squelched by an institution which should strive to uphold students' rights.

The response from the students to this rent increase may well determine whether the university is succeeding in educating its students. Students trained to accept the increases in room rent, because of the "economic realities" of the world are not going to be able to bring about the change in the "quality of human life" that the United States so desperately needs. Hopefully, the "economic realities" of this world will never again be able to substitute for the ideals of "quality" human existence.

May I offer that the "crisis of trust" that A.C. Bill Idol observed at the University is more conflict of life styles. One faction intimates that the man is controlled by the system he create and the other heralds the emergence of man above his own system; to coin a phrase: "Politics is people."

Meeting Today to Seek Student Power In Selection of New Chancellor

A meeting in the Student Union Ballroom today at 3 p.m. will focus on the lack of student participation in the selecting of a president to succeed retiring John Lederle, according to Gil Salk, who will direct the meeting.

The meeting will seek ways o awakening the Board of Trustees to the fact that it must consult with the student body before appointing a Chancellor to the U-Mass-Amherst campus, said Salk.

In a letter to the COLLEGIAN, Salk decried that the appointment of Oswald Tippo to the post seems to be a "fait accompli", that Tippo's qualifications for the post have not been examined by the campus community, and that there has been no public consideration of other candidates.

The COLLEGIAN reported in a front-page article last Friday that Tippo's appointment to the Chancellor's position seemed assured.

Today's meeting will try to overcome the contradiction between frequent calls for a tri-partite method of decision-making on the part of the administration and the obvious "in loci parentis" actions of the Board of Trustees.

Salk said, "The University community must begin to take steps to protect its best interests, for it seems clear that the Board is only concerned about politics."

Commenting on the COLLEGIAN report that members of the faculty and administration feared Tippo might leave the University if he did not receive the appointment, Salk said that he hoped it was not true, but that if it was true, then that was all the more reason to oppose the appointment. "We do not want a man who will take his ball and go home if things don't go his way making decisions which will affect our academic lives," he stated.

If time permits, the meeting will also deal with treasurer Kenneth Johnson's decision to raise room rent fees. The meeting will be open to all members of the University community.

Conservation Units Against Bill Passage

Several influential National conservationist organizations are aligning themselves this week to stop passage of the National Timber Supply bill (H.R. 12025) which is scheduled to come up for vote this week in the House of Representatives.

The bill, if passed, would serve to override the present multiple-use policy and practice in the national forest; in effect the passage of this bill will "put logging first" for all our national forests.

A telegram was sent to each congressman, signed by the Citizens Committee on Natural Resources, Izaak Walton League of America, National Audubon Society, National Rifle Association, Sierra Club, Trout Un-limited, The Wilderness Society, and Wildlife Management Institute.

THE CHASE BEGINS - Three Vermont players stormed after the referee last night when he awarded the game winning goal (see arrow) to UMass. The Catamounts argued that a UMass player was in the crease when the goal was scored. The goal gave the Redmen a 2-1 win and led to conflicts between the UMass fans and the Vermont players. Pope Paul Does It Again, Priests To Remain Single VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope Paul VI's attempt Sunday to slam the lid on discussion about changing mandatory priestly celibacy has proved in vain, for celibacy was being discussed anyway Monday.

It appeared a storm of dissent was brewing, perhaps rivaling the dissent that followed his ban on artificial birth control in July 1968.

The 72-year old pontiff's Sunday discourse barred even talk about altering the 1,600 year old discipline of celibacy for clerics of the Latin Western Rite. This the speech has failed to do.

One Roman Catholic theologian in Rome called the Pope's stand, "wish talk."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

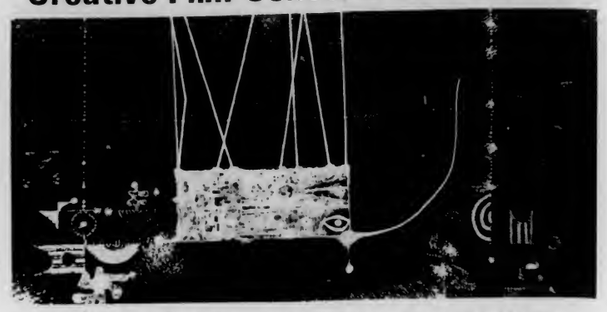
SAIGON (AP) - U.S. officials say they expect North Vietnam to attempt disruption of President Nixon's troop-withdrawal plans by launching heavy attacks in coming months.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon sends Congress a $200.8-billion budget which for the first time since the Korean War allots more to improvement of the quality of life than to buying instruments of death.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Negroes have made significant gains in jobs, housing and education but still trail well behind whites, two federal agencies report.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bargaining talks are resumed in the rail dispute which seems headed for congressional action if no voluntary settlement is reached during a court ordered delay of a general shutdown.

Creative Film Concerts Scheduled



Included in the three-program film series, which runs Tuesday, Feb. 10 at 7 and 9:15 in the S.U. Ballroom, is SPIDERELEPHANT by Piotr Kamler.

THE KINETIC ART, a series of three contemporary film concerts designed to "make things happen in the viewer's mind," is scheduled for three performances on February 10, 17 and 24 at 7 and 9:15 in the Student Union Ballroom. The series is sponsored by the Student Union Movie Committee.

Chosen from a thousand new short films by the world's leading filmmakers, the 26 compositions, from 55 seconds to 55 minutes in length, involve scintillating contrasts of style, form and content much as a program of musical masterpieces or a travelling gallery exhibition.

The films range from the wildly carefree animation of Kuri's "Two Grilled Fish" (Tokyo) to the comically bizarre antics of "Rakvickarna's" antique carnival puppets (Czechoslovakia); from the searing drama of Filipovic's "Cruel Diagonals" (Sarajevo) to Jordan Belson's "Phenomena" (San Francisco), described by Vincent Canby of THE NEW YORK TIMES as "making the climax of '2001: A Space Odyssey' look like a comic strip. Outer space is where Belson now lives."

"KINETIC ART is for those who attend the best theatre, opera, music, dance and the visual arts," according to the MCA Inc. producers of the project. "It is a roundup of what is happening in the world of cinema."

Tickets for the series are $1.00.

Cong to Push New Assaults Call Holiday Cease-Fire

SAIGON (AP) - Six waves of B52 bombers blasted enemy infiltration routes, supply depots and staging areas Monday in the wake of the biggest enemy attacks in six months.

As many as 30 of the planes dropped up to 900 tons of bombs on enemy positions in the A Shau Valley along the Laotian border, on the central coastal plains and in Tay Ninh Province bordering Cambodia.

The raids were aimed at slowing down the flow of men and material into South Vietnam and preventing the enemy from massing for new assaults.

The bombers struck after a week end in which the enemy launched more than 100 attacks by rockets, mortars, sappers and infantry against allied bases and towns.

It was the heaviest fighting since last August and September. Allied forces claimed killing more than 500 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. Communiques listed 21 US and 20 South Vietnamese troopers killed and 160 American and 99 government soldiers wounded. The losses included two American helicopters shot down.

Although fighting raged in virtually every region of South Vietnam, the allied commands did not classify it as a general offensive. But the stepped-up action in the central highlands and the populous coastal lowlands south of Da Nang was of sufficient scope for U.S. military analysts to call it a "high-point" of enemy activity. Increased attacks had been predicted to coincide with the Vietnamese lunar new year, Tet, next Saturday.

The upsurge came while North Vietnamese leaders in Hanoi were celebrating the 40th anniversary of the Vietnamese Workers Communist party.

In a Hanoi broadcast monitored in Hong Kong, the party's first secretary, Le Duan, was quoted as reiterating "the iron-like determination of the entire party, army and people to fight and defeat the U.S. aggressors."

Vietnam's battlefields were relatively quiet Monday, but allied forces were on the alert for more overnight attacks prior to the scheduled start of the Viet Cong's unilaterally proclaimed holiday cease-fire Thursday.

The Communist command has ordered a four-day stand-down. The South Vietnamese government is expected to declare a 24-hour cease-fire. The government, however, has canceled all leaves during the holiday period and ordered its troops on full alert.

Testimony Before Senate Committee Reveals Carswell as Civil-Rights Obstructionist

WASHINGTON (AP) - A surprise witness testified today that Supreme Court nominee G. Harrold Carswell, while a U.S. district judge in Tallahassee, Fla., had a reputation as an obstructionist in civil rights cases.

The testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee was given by Ernest H. Rosenberger, a New York City lawyer, who said he served as a volunteer counsel for civil rights workers in the Florida panhandle in the summer of 1964.

Most of his testimony dealt with a case in which nine clergymen were sentenced to jail by a city judge in Tallahassee after they had attempted to integrate the airport there, and their subsequent efforts to obtain release through a habeas corpus petition.

Rosenberger contended that Carswell had told the city attorney how to circumvent an order of the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals by reducing the sentence of the clergymen to the time they had already spent in jail.

The witness said the effect was to wipe out the clergymen's standing to get a hearing on their habeas corpus petition and to leave them with a permanent criminal record.

His interpretation was challenged by Sen. Roman L. Hruska of Nebraska and other Republicans on the committee.

The calling of Rosenberger delayed the scheduled appearance of leaders of civil rights organizations to testify in opposition to Carswell's nomination.

Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said in prepared testimony that a white supremacy statement made by Carswell 22 years ago was enough in itself to cause rejection of Carswell's nomination.

Carswell, now a judge on the 5th. U.S. Court of Appeals, testified last week that the ideas he expressed in a political speech in 1948 pledging allegiance to white supremacy and racial segregation are now abhorrent and obnoxious to him.

However, Mitchell said that no attempts to dismiss the statement as one made in the heat of a campaign "will ever be accepted by most Negroes of the United States and most civilized people in the world", as a legitimate excuse for approving the nomination.

NSA Supports Ending II-S Deferment

WASHINGTON (CPS) - The American Council on Education (ACE) has joined National Student Association (NSA) President Charles Palmer in calling for an end to II-S student Selective Service deferments.

ACE said it once supported student deferments as being necessary for the national welfare, but now, under the lottery, "The available pool of draft eligible men is so large as compared to the numbers likely to be called into service that a termination of student deferments cannot affect the regular flow of highly educated manpower."

Also at issue, according to ACE, is the question of equity. In order to make the draft more equitable, the government must "expose all young men of a given age to exactly the same probability of induction," it said. It recommended that those currently enrolled in college be allowed to graduate.

Palmer favors a voluntary army but has taken the position that if the draft is to continue, it would be fairer to eliminate student deferments because they favor affluent youth able to afford college over poor Black and Chicano youth.

Winter Cancelled for '70?

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) - Punxsutawney Phil, the weather-forecasting groundhog, refused to come out of his hole to look at his shadow Monday and jubilant members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club planned to celebrate the rare occurence with an extraordinary banquet.

It was only the fourth time in the 89-year history of the club that a groundhog failed to see his shadow, thus predicting an almost immediate end to winter weather.

The last time was in 1950.

The main course at the dinner was to be fillet of groundhot. Club President Sam Light said the meat had been soaked in baking soda and vinegar. It was to be sauteed in butter.

Two-Way Street

This past weekend, the Action-Lab of the University of Massachusetts and the surrounding community have hopefully initiated a continuous theme of mutual co-operation and commitment between campus and community. It can only be hoped that this co-operation develops into a two-way street of both learning and service.

In the past, the University's role as a service institution has been very minimal. It has basically been training the middle-class for insane jobs in its role to gain greater status in this more insane world. Its role in the same vein for the lower-class of the state and immediate area, in particular, has been minimal and has not really been a role of community service but rather one of mere training. Hopefully any future role with the community will be set up along somewhat different guidelines.

The proposals advanced by the conference should be taken seriously by all involved - faculty, student, administrators, and community. There is a lot of value for both the student and community if students and people in the community can get together and using their collective resources, especially using those which the University possesses, can derive benefit for the community and knowledge for the students involved. A grass-root model city's organization can, for example, benefit greatly from our city-planning department. Also students involved can benefit greatly from realistic projects.

The social sciences, in particular, could benefit greatly from university-community involvement. One could truly learn sociology and social work by working in the community with real problems rather than merely absorbing the hollow facts and theories generally advanced in the classroom that often do not hold up when one encounters them in the context of the real world. No doubt a mother with nine children who is subsisting on $125 a week or even less could teach a few things on economics that completely escape the most learned economists. Such could be one role that the University and community could serve in teaching a more relevant and meaningful education.

Further involvement between campus and community is a vital necessity for both parties involved with benefits and resources being constantly exchanged. The "Campus and Community" conference has served as a beginning. Let it be a fruitful start with both sides benefitting greatly from a close relationship that will be so necessary in the future.

"No Time For Thorough Investigations — We're In A Hurry Now"

Does Anyone Care?

This is an editorial of sorts. It is being written by a spy who normally would never do the Collegian a favor. However, because tonight they have a staff of two or three, I feel a sense of moral duty to help them. Therefore, I am writing this to fill up space that would otherwise be empty and upset a lot of readers. Have you ever seen an editorial written for the sole purpose of filling up space? Maybe this is a Collegian first. Or second. Or third. (If you think this is bad, you should subscribe to Senate agendas.) Or fourth. At any rate, it's interesting to watch a couple of people try to put together a full sized daily wire service syndicated comic strip paper that would normally take at least fifteen experienced people to run adequately. It is also interesting to think that of a college population of about eighteen thousand, only two or three are anti-apathetic enough to be interested in putting out a paper of over 13,000 circulation. This room is almost as empty as the Yahoo office, which is almost as empty as the Senate at the height of a meeting, which is ridiculous. But what the hell. I don't suppose anyone would really mind if the "Daily" were replaced by a "Tri-weekly," outside of those who want to see BC, the Wizard of Id, Snoopy and the crossword.

After Carswell

WASHINGTON - If for some reason the Senate doesn't confirm Judge Carswell for Justice Abe Fortas' Supreme Court seat, the White House is already prepared to submit another name.

Waiting in the wings, in case the Senate balks on Carswell, is Judge Caleb Robert E. Lee, of the Fifth Circuit Juvenile and Bankruptcy Court of Juniper County, Ala. Judge Lee has already had a thorough security clearance check by Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, who told intimates, "This is one man they'll never be able to smear."

I went to visit Judge Lee in his chambers at the Juniper County courthouse.

"Your honor, are you aware that you are in line for the Supreme Court seat, if for some reason the Senate sees fit not to seat Judge Carswell?"

"Ah heard something about it," Judge Lee told me. "Course Ah'd consider it a great honor even though Ah would hat e to leave Juniper County."

"Sir, I do not want to get personal, but do you own any stocks or bonds, or have interests in companies that could be considered a conflict of interest?"

"No sirree!" said Judge Lee. "Ah have no investments of any kind. The only thing Ah own of any property value are slaves."

"Slaves?"

"Ah just own a dozen, and half of them are in my wife's name."

"But Judge Lee, don't you consider owning slaves a conflict of interest?"

"If anyone makes a fuss about it, Ah'm willing to sell the slaves or at least put them in trust for mah grandchildren."

"Sir, owning slaves is against the Constitution. How can you serve on the Supreme Court and be for slavery?"

"As far as the Constitution is concerned Ah'm a strict constructionist, except where it comes to slavery. Ah don't think a man has to be for everything in the Constitution just to sit on the Supreme Court."

"But didn't the Justice Department ask you about your slaves when they interviewed you for the Supreme Court?"

"The question never came up, and Ah didn't think it was worth bringing up. Ah never hid the fact Ah owned slaves. YOU can look at mah record. Al always eliminated myself from any case which involved slaves in Juniper County."

"Judge Lee, aren't you afraid slaves will make it difficult for the Senate to approve of your nomination?"

"Ah don't know. In left-wing liberal circles there might be some hollering, but Ah know the attorney general will stand behind me. After all, if they want a Southern judge on the Supreme Court, they have to take him as he is.

"Ah don't know how owning a few darkies could affect the way Ah decide the constitutional issues. Besides, you have to have some balance on the court, and right now it's heavily weighted in favor of the antislavery forces."

"One more question, sir. Besides owning slaves, is there anything else the Justice Department security people overlooked when checking you out?"

"Can't think of anything. Ah once organized a lynching, but that was when Ah was a kid, and Ah don't think that should be held against me now. WE all do stupid things when we're sowing our oats."

Campus Comment

Prof Replies

To the editor:

Your recent front-page article (headlined "History Department Strife Seen Renewed") on the tenure case of Professor Gerald Gruman is sensational and misleading.

It is true that a number of us have "risen to his aid" in the sense of expressing our willingness to have last year's decision reconsidered. But it is NOT true that the department is divided into factions about this.

Certainly a number of people would like to see a reversal of the decision. But at this point airing the matter under a misleading headline only perpetuates the personal and professional damage suffered by this department over the last four years. It only delays the healing we now seek. It undermines Professor Gruman's appeal.

Hopefully, the Collegian will now let the matter rest in the hands of the Tenure and Grievance Committee.

Brown Rebuffed

To The Editor:

In Friday's COLLEGIAN was your Carlton Brown letter rebuffing Senator R.J. Waters letter about the DRUM. You attempted to reiterate already trite points and interpreted them to be racist.

First is the existence of a "black literary experience" or magazine as called by its common name, known as the DRUM. I do not feel that you, Mr. Brown, are using efficiently the literary resources of this campus. Have you tried submitting material to the SPECTRUM? According to their advertisements for contributions of material, they will accept poetry, short stories, etc. on practically any subject or idea. Have you looked through any of their issues? I have, and have seen what their advertisements described -- everything from satire and current problems to electron micrographs and science fiction. Much of it is artistically or literarily valuable. In other words, it is a worthwhile experience to read it. Is the material you desire to put into the DRUM of literary value and worthwhile to read or is it just another rehashing of the same ideas you have put forth in your letter? In other words, are you trying to print a literary magazine or just another militant mouthpiece to be financed by the university, available to a few or to everyone, readable or trashy?

Your second point is your accusation of a racist Senate. Have you considered any other factors when you presented your bill for $2100.00 to the Senate or did you just go ahead and get the DRUM printed and then present the printer's bill to the Senate with the mental comment "the Student Senate will pick up the tab; after all, we are black and they owe it to us?" I believe that the most important factor to consider is the availability of money. If they do not have it, they cannot conjure it up from thin air to give it to you. No matter how much you accuse their denial of the total amount of the money as an "example of exploitation and outright colonization by the university powers" you not only have less chances of getting more, but also incur obstinacy and hatred. Furthermore, since SPECTRUM, COLLEGIAN, YAHOO, and the Flying Redmen are Senate-funded and you have not joined them or contributed anything, you call them "examples of white, middle-class decadence, and trivia." They are predominantly white because you have not joined them and give of yourself and try to make them more to your liking. Trivia? - no! Each contribute something to the university. If they are trivia, I say the DRUM is trivial. As for the $1700.00 to Mrs. Delee and the care of black needs, more important are the needs of the university community. Some serious students will not be able to return next semester because of severe financial need. They need that money! More teachers are needed so there can be more courses to alleviate the student overload. That costs money. Care about university needs - OUR NEEDS! You state that your "request would be granted...by a strong show of force. The people no longer ask, they demand." shows your intentions with this university ---- savagery, disruption, war, and eventual expulsion. You will never get anything that way from the Student Senate, the University, or the country.

Student taxes contributed by the black students go into the same RSO fund as the money given by any other student group or minority, be they white, black, yellow, red, or green! They do not single out taxes given by our hypothetical green students and give it to the Venus-Earth-Mars League for Interplanetary Peace. Why should they give black students all the money? If so, why not give all the money from UMasSFS members to UMasSFS and so on with all minorities and groups. The Student Senate is not "blind to everything" - they are usually sensible even though they have blundered with some things, but for these blunders they have paid as with the money for the Washington trip. You are the one who is blind to everything.

And, now, the COLLEGIAN. - yes, they have made mistakes as do all newspapers. They have "forgotten" and have printed incorrect information from many organizations. Mr. Dubois' article "concerning the appropriation for the DRUM was watered down to display the kind-hearted benevolence" was probably based on the lack of availability of funds and more important appropriations (comment, Mr. Dubois). Collegian coverage may not be as good as it was in the past three years but I would say that the coverage of events is quite adequate (and better than some professional newspapers) and contain the essential information in the resulting articles.

Finally, you accuse Senator Waters and the entire white university community of being "part of an oppressive and ignorant majority" and order us to change our ways. Well, I, one of the majority, am speaking out now. I call you an ignorant, unreasonable, immature, vocal troublemaker. Shut up for a few minutes and grow up. Listen to some sane reason. Think. The militant tactics you imply in your letter will only intensify and direct the "ignorant majority's" hatred toward you. You will go nowhere except down and down. Just stop and think a minute. Peace is the best weaponry and strategy you could have.

Thank you, Senator Waters, for representing sanity and reason.

The time has come for reason, sanity, and peace to prevail on our troubled planet today.

One of the silent majority,
ADRIENNE SHANLER

Too Many People

To the editor:

Gil Salk's comment on "Man's Environment" is admirable. The urgency of controlling pollution cannot be overstated. Some authorities state that it is already too late - that we have already set in motion irreversible processes that will make the earth uninhabitable by man. We must, however, act on the assumption that salvation is possible.

Mr. Salk failed to mention, however, the ultimate source of the threat, namely, the population explosion. It is people who drive automobiles; it is people who produce sewage; it is people who demand the manufactured products from factories which poison the water and air; it is people who clog the airports; it is people who crave mechanical gadgets which in turn create a demand for power which in turn is leading to a reckless reliance upon atomic power plants, potentially the most dangerous of all pollutant agencies.

Technology can do much, if we are willing to spend enough money. But it is only a palliative, treating the symptoms and not the cause. Instead of saying that the population of the United States will be 500 million (or whatever the latest projection is) in the year 2000, and we must plan to solve the resulting problems, we must say, "500,000 people is too many; we must plan not to have them - and not to build the factories and power plants that they would demand. We must recognize that people do not have the right to breed without restraint."

If this sounds like "1984," the alternative is worse. Every increase in population brings increased government restraint, increased restriction of individual freedom. Increased regimentation - economic, social, even intellectual - is inevitable.

As long, that is, as the race continues to exist. We assume, in our fatuous vanity, that the world was made for our use, that we are somehow above "nature", not subject to its laws. We fail to see that there are limits to our control of our environment, that in the end WE must adapt ourselves to IT, or perish. We do not own the earth; we are only, like other forms of life, its tenants. If we flagrantly and persistently break the rules (for instance, by having too many children), we shall be evicted, with no authority to appeal to, and nowhere else to go.

In Memorium

To the editor:

On December 31, 1969, Dr. Edgar Johnson, former professor of History at UMass, passed away. While many will remember him for the numerous books he has written on Medieval History, I will remember him for his warmth and excellence as an educator (ie., one who leads others to the truth). Dr. Johnson, despite his great knowledge, never sought to force his interpretation of History on his students, and despite his many years, he was always accessible to us, and eager to discuss current problems with us. He even allowed us to offer criticism of his text book, which he was revising last year. He sought to accomodate those who called for "relevance", while he never abandoned those who sought knowledge of the past. Edgar Johnson is no longer with us, but the knowledge and inspiration he has left us will live on as an eternal memorial to his greatness.

MANY SENIORS FEAR JUNE DRAFT CALL

Many members of the class of 1970 are already beginning to worry about being drafted into military service after graduation this June. Some have planned ventures to the north to visit Canadian friends.

There is a very good chance that you will lose contact with a good many of your classmates in the years ahead. If you are pictured in the 1970 INDEX you will be remembered.

If you are a senior and haven't yet had or signed up for your senior photo, come to the INDEX Office, S.U. this week (Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) and sign up for your picture.

Little Redmen Outlast Chamberlayne Jr. in OT, 91-83

by BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

In their most exciting contest of the season, the Little Redmen blew a nine point lead with only a minute and a half left in regulation time but came back in overtime to defeat Chamberlayne Jr. College, 91-83. The win was the frosh's first in their last four starts and upped their record to 3-5.

Assistant Coach John Shockro, in a move obviously designed to improve the Little Redman's rebounding, started both 6'8 Charlie Peters and 6'6 Tom White up front. This lineup proved very successful and UMass led by five when White was removed halfway through the first half.

UMass jumped into an early seven point lead, 17-10, due to the outside shooting of Mike Polakoff and White. Both teams were pressing and Chamberlayne committed two straight turnovers to give the Little Redmen the lead.

Chamberlayne kept chipping away at the lead, however, and knotted the score at 23-23 with 7:56 remaining on a hoop by Salem's Dick Thibodeau. The squads traded baskets the rest of the way and the Little Redmen took a two point lead into the dressing room due to another Polakoff jumper.

The second half proved to be quite similar to the first as the game remained close for the first fourteen minutes. The Little Redmen, displaying the best offense they have shown in some time, were led by ball-hawking Joel Saperstein and forward Chuck Olsen.

With about six minutes left, Barstow made a hoop and Shawn Ricks a free throw for Chamberlayne to give them a 66-64 lead. Then UMass took over.

For the next four and a half minutes Chamberlayne was held scoreless. During this span the Little Redmen ran off eleven points with Polakoff netting four, Saperstein three, and Peters and Olsen two apiece. It looked as if UMass had the game sewn up.

But that was not the case. Suddenly the Little Redmen fell apart both offensively and defensively under the harassment of Chamberlayne. Tyrone Wallace, who was looking for trouble all night, started the comeback for his team with a fr[illegible] throw with 1:16 on the clock.

The Little Redmen were still unable to break the Chamberlayne press and Ricks was fouled with sixteen seconds remaining. He calmly netted both free throws and UMass had the ball. Once again they had the ball taken away and with only nine seconds left, Ricks hit a clutch hoop to tie the score at 75-75.

A long jumper by Polakoff at the buzzer was just off the mark and the Little Redmen went into overtime for the first time this season.

The overtime was all UMass. Polakoff opened with a charity toss but Chamberlayne took the lead on a basket by John Urbanski. Saperstein hit four free throws and Polakoff made another hoop to put UMass up by five, 82-77, with only 2:18 left.

Chamberlayne, however, would not give up. Urbanski made another hoop as did Gilfeather and Wallace hit two foul shots while UMass could only counter with a Tom King lay-up. The score was 84-83 with twenty-six seconds left.

It appeared as if there might have to be another OT but it was not necessary due mainly to Chamberlayne Coach Jim Power.

With nine seconds left, Saperstein was fouled. Power erupted on the bench and was promptly hit with a technical foul. Not only did this give UMass an extra free throw but also gave them the ball and, for all intents and purposes, the ball game.

Saperstein made the two free throws but missed the technical to give the Little Redmen a three point lead and the ball. Olsen was then fouled and once again Power was hit with a technical for protesting the call too vehemently.

Olsen made the two free throws and the technical to give UMass a very comfortable six point lead, 89-83, with two seconds left. But the Little Redmen were still not through.

McSharry was fouled on the in bounds pass and once again a Redman was at the foul line. For some reason, Power was quiet about this one. McSharry hit both shots to make the final score 91-83.

The Little Redmen showed their most balance d scoring attack of the season as both Polakoff and Olsen canned 18 points while Saperstein netted 17. Peters did a creditable job on the boards as he pulled down eleven caroms.

An oddity in the game was the fact that Chamberlayne had ten more field goals than the Little Redmen, but still lost by eight points.

Tonight, the Little Redmen travel to Chestnut Hill for a 6:00 encounter with the Eaglets. The game should be a tough one for UMass especially since it is away. But coming off the win over Chamberlayne, the Little Redmen should be ready for the high scoring Boston College quintet.

Redman Wrestlers Challenge Tough Springfield Tonight

UMass underdog to Springfield. With a line like this it would take many people days to determine what was meant. Since it is on the sports page, one would conjecture that UMass is inferior to Springfield in some sport.

But what? Surely a school of U-Mass' stature in sports should not be inferior to any small college, which is what Springfield is. But the fact is that Springfield has dominated New England wrestling for 20 years, and hosts the Redmen tonight at 8.

Springfield last year won the N.E.I.W.A. Tournament handily. It took the 115, 123, 130, 167 and 177-pound classes. However, also placing were its 137, 145 and 191-pounders in second and its 152 and 160-pounders in third. In fact, only its heavyweight did not place.

To add to this display, it had freshman winners at 115, 145 and 152. All but the varsity 145 and 191-pounders are returning. With this many returning lettermen, Springfield has the best team it ever had.

UMass, on the other hand, is not as fortunate. True, the Redmen had a purely sophomore team last year, which indicates many returning lettermen. However, some of these lettermen are finding themselves on the short side of eliminations with last year's freshmen; this implies a young but also unproven team.

Nick DiDomenico is the first wrestler on the mats for UMass every meet. He has done an admirable job for the Redmen in his two previous seasons. However, in a big match such as this one, a winning atmosphere must be established from the very beginning. Nick, an inhabitant of Bellville, N.J., knows what he has to do!

Rick Tyma from Levittown, Pa., is the 126-pounder. Rick did not wrestle last year but has gotten into the lineup and is undefeated in four dual meets. However, in very tough competition, he is untested, but if he keeps up his tough style, he will be in his match all the way.

Phil Davis is the Redman 134-pound wrestler. Phil was fifth in the New Englands last year, but lost to Sinclair from Springfield. He will be in the underdog role but will be out to avenge his 1-0 loss to Sinclair last year.

At 142 pounds is Sheldon Goldberg. Shelly is a tough breed of wrestler from Long Island. He was second in his weight class in the state of New York as a senior in high school. There is no opponent tougher or more capable than he, and he should be ready when his number is called.

A Delaware state champion holds down the 150-pound class. This Redman is Clay Jester. Clay is another sophomore who has made the varsity. To say he is unproven would be a mistake; he has already tied a wrestler who placed fifth in the Eastern and has also given Art Thompson, Pennsylvania's best 150-pound wrestler, the best match he's seen in a long time.

At 158 is another New Jersey boy, Jim Godkin from Bergen Field. Jim will probably meet the Springfield strongman, Art Ziegler. Should the Redmen be ahead at this point in the meet, prospects are good that they will emerge victorious. This will give Godkin even more incentive to win.

At 167, Kent Mignocchi is the varsity wrestler. Like Goldberg, Kent is from Long Island. He is a strong man with good moves and, if his endurance holds up, he could be another UMass winner.

The 177-pound class is very important. After this weight class there are two left. More than a six-point lead should secure a victory, and UMass has the right man to put the icing on the cake. Tom Andrewes was a New England champion in high school and always a consistant performer for the Redmen.

The last two weight classes for the Redmen are not definite. George Zguris, captain and New England champion, will be a sure starter in one of the weight classes with Bruce Buckbee, who assured UMass' win against Coast Guard, or Dick Donlin. Any one of these men can do the job.

Coach Homer Barr has gotten his team ready for this meet. After beating the two teams this weekend, Coast Guard and Central Connecticut, UMass has proven most of its wrestlers.

They are fit and ready. However, Springfield has been building its team for twenty years as opposed to the Redmen's three, the reason for UMass being cast in the role of underdogs. After tonight's affairs have been completed, the Redman may be assuming a new role.

Red Hot Redmen Ice Vermont, 2-1, in Sudden Death

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

The 'cardiac kids' have been rechristened! Last night before an hysterical near-capacity crowd at Orr Rink, UMass upset the favored University of Vermont hockey team, 2-1, scoring the winner at 7:08 of sudden death overtime. It was the second straight win for the Redmen in the closing minutes, beating Hamilton, as they did last Wednesday, with but one second on the clock.

Senior center John Hartnett, a doubtful participant before game time due to the flu, received credit for the winning goal in this tremendous ball game. Hartnett's goal came off a flurry near the Vermont crease amid several fallen bodies. It appeared that he kicked the puck into the net.

The goal was the subject of violent protest on the part of the Catamounts. UVM maintained that two Redmen players were actually in the crease when the goal was scored. However, the refs had it the other way and few present at Orr were about to belabor the point.

These two clubs should play each other every game. Their previous meeting at Burlington was also an overtime affair, the Catamounts emerging as 3-2 victors.

The Redmen, showing improvement with every game, played their best match of the year. They skated smoothly and most importantly, they checked as they have never checked before. Add to this the unbelievable performance turned in by goalie P. J. Flaherty, and you have an outstanding team effort.

YOU'VE GOT TO BE KIDDING!!! - Two unidentified Vermont players seem to disagree with the referees decision concerning a disputed UMass goal which proved to be the game winner in the Redman's 2-1 win over the Catamounts. (MDC photo by Ken Emery)

The Catamounts took an early 1-0 lead in the first period that held until UMass was to tie it up midway through the third. George Minarsky's marker at 7:49 did the job.

Defenseman Owen Jenkins started the play with a pass to left wing Sam Simmons speeding upice. Simmons took a 10 foot shot which rebounded out to Minarsky, all alone to the right of Flaherty, who banged it in. It was to be the only time UVM would light the lamp all evening.

In the period, UVM goalie Dave Reece, outstanding all game, blunted several Redman scoring thrusts, including several by wing Jack Edwards, who earlier in the day was named ECAC Division II Sophomore of the Week. On one occasion, he took a pass from Charlie Donovan and broke in all alone, only to have Reece deflect his rising shot up and over the net.

Reece also was particularly effective when UMass was on the power play late in the period as Simmons went off for tripping. Flaherty had 12 saves for the period, Reece, 15.

The second period, though scoreless, was by no means dull. Each squad fore-checked briskly, and further compounded each other's efforts by employing a man-to-man defense at times.

In the early going, UMass appeared to have some difficulty at clearning the puck, but was able to survive the Catamount attack. At 7:47 UMass' Bob Bartholomew left for interference and UVM proceeded to apply steady pressure. Flaherty, however, saved the day with two good saves off of scrambles from right in front.

At the eight minute mark, Flaherty made the save that seemed to convince the Redmen that there was no way they should lose. Minarsky broke into the zone all alone. One could almost sense the sureness that he must have felt about scoring in this situation as he tried to feint Flaherty into giving him an opening. Flaherty, however, was not to be fooled, and came out to stop the bid.

The momentum shifted to the Redmen for most of the remainder of the period although UVM was not far behind. Reece repeatedly made the good save.

Dennis Grabowski potted the tying goal at 10:00 of the third period, the result of heated infighting in the vicinity of the Catamount crease. Grabowski, skating the right wing, went almost to the corner of the cage before firing into the scramble and getting the goal. Assists went to Bartholomew and Brian Sullivan.

Flaherty turned away several serious threats in the closing minutes of play as Minarsky, with Simmons and Jim Yeates applied good pressure. The period ended with the Redmen controlling the puck for the better part of the last two minutes.

Then came the climatic overtime with UVM not to be denied. Flaherty came up with five saves to Reece's none, but, happily for UMass, he couldn't come up with it when he had the opportunity.

BLUELINE BANTER - UMass now stands 5-4 overall and 5-3 in Division II . . . Vermont, which had won four in a row, now stands 8-5, 7-3 in Division II . . . Grabowski's line (Bill McMann, Mike Waldron on wings) was immense all game . . . so was Dan Reidy's who played with Fran Mulcahy and Eric Scrafield who probably played his best game as a Redman . . . UMass, with games at Orr Friday and Saturday against Bowdoin and Merrimac, is now in strong position for a playoff berth . . . Total saves: Flaherty 37, Reece 32 . . .

PLENTY OF ACTION - There certainly was plenty of that last night as is obvious in this clash between Redman Bill McMann and Catamount Tom Bickford. (MDC photo by Ken Emery)

Redmen Respect Boston College, Expect Tough Game

Erving Chosen ECAC Soph of Week

By STEVE ROSS
Senior Reporter

Respect, but not fear, will be the theme tonight when UMass takes on the Eagles of Boston College in an 8:15 game at Roberts Center on the campus of B.C. A preliminary game will feature the two schools freshmen teams.

B.C. has fallen from the upper echelon of Eastern basketball, but still is capable of knocking off some pretty fair teams. Both Manhattan and St. Josephs have fallen to the Eagles. Overall B.C. is 6-10.

First year coach Chuck Daley has had a great deal of adversity befall him. He lost two fine ball palyers in Billy Evans and Terry Driscoll via graduation. Driscoll was the fourth player selected in last year's NBA draft. Soph center Pete Schmid came down with mono just before the first game, and Bob Dukiet, a star from two years ago that had to miss last year because of a knee operation, could never recover, and had to give up the game.

Daley has been starting Vin Costello and Frank Fitzgerald upfront along with captain Tom Verroneau in the pivot, and Pete Sollene and Jimmy O'Brien at the guards. Schmid is somewhat recovered from his bout with mono and sees some action, along with Greg Sees and Dan Metzler.

The Eagles have not gotten strong play from their big men. All three can be deadly shots (Verroneau led the nation in FG % with 69% last year) but the rebounding has not been particularly good.

O'Brien is an outstanding guard. He scores close to 15 points per game and is an excellent ballhawk. According to Redman coach Jack Leaman he was the difference in last year's B.C. win. O'Brien made the Holiday Festival first team over Christmas. The other guard was a fellow named Rick Mount.

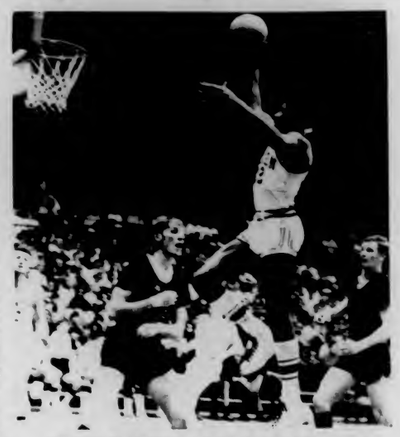
The Redmen will field the same unit that has started in the last three games. But don't be surprised if both Ken Mathias and Dennis Chapman see a lot of early action. Leaman was undecided as to his third guard. It will be either Mike Pagliaraor Bob Dempsey.

"We'll run our normal offense," promised Leaman. "If BC wants to defense us specially, that's their perogative." No UMass opponent can be expected to treat Julius Erving as another man, and if they do, Leaman thinks he has the answer.

"Right now Ray Ellerbrook is playing as well as I've ever seen him." boasted Leaman, "and if a team slacks off him they'll get hurt bad." Ellerbrook has been an important contributor in the deciding half of the last three games.

About the biggest thing that can hurt the Redmen is their tendency to turn the ball over. Northeastern coach Dick Dukeshire felt that B.C. could hurt UMass with a press. He should be a good judge. His team lost to the Eagles 95-64 last Wednesday. Dukeshire also felt that B.C. might defense Erving better, but thus far only one team, AIC, has really shut off Erving, and B.C. doesn't appear as strong as teams that couldn't shut him off. Penn is the prime example.

Ticket Manager Wally Novack reported that there will be a good crowd of Redmen reporters at the game tonight. Possibly even a Boston newspaper will wander on the scene to see if there is really a Julius Erving who was chosen ECAC sophomore of the week for last week.



ERVING IN ACTION - Julius Erving, UMass' super soph, will be counted upon heavily tonight as the Redmen travel to Chestnut Hill to meet the high-flying Eagles of Boston College. Game time is set for 8:15. (MDC photo by Bob Mangiaratti)

Georgia Whites Quit Classes As Southern Schools Integrate

(AP) - White pupils quit classes in two Mississippi systems, leaving an all-black enrollment, and dozens of white teachers in Georgia boycotted classes Tuesday as several Southern school districts struggled with court-ordered integration plans.

More than 300,000 pupils were out of class in Florida, as schools in four counties remained closed while officials tried to resolve a dilemma centering around forced busing of pupils.

There was additional confusion in Louisiana and Alabama.

In Florida, Volusia County - Daytona Beach - school officials voted to appeal a desegregation order requiring extensive busing of pupils starting Wednesday.

Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida planned to go on statewide television to talk about the issue of forced busing to achieve desegregation.

In Mississippi, two school districts - Tunica County and Indianola - became completely black as some 1,000 white pupils stayed home or enrolled in white private schools.

In Indianola, 39 of 41 white teachers resigned and began teaching in a private school.

Six other Mississippi districts were involved in desegregation orders - Leland, Western Line, Clarksdale, Holly Springs, Marshall County and West Point. Officials said only eight white teachers quit in Holly Springs, and a few white pupils dropped out of the other schools.

Sixty-eight of more than 100 white teachers in Washington County, Ga., refused to report to new classroom assignments.

W.B. Ouzts, superintendent of schools in the middle Georgia county, said teachers refusing to report have asked for an appointment with U.S. district court judge W.A. Bootie in Macon, Ga. However, there was no indication the judge would discuss the issue with them.

"They say they will not report to classes until they talk with Bootie," Ouzts declared.

There was improvement in attendance in Jefferson County, Ala. Birmingham schools.

But Mobile, Bessemer and Fairfield, Ala., systems have not tried to put new plan into effect yet.

Pupils in Washington County return to classes Wednesday. They were given a two-day holiday to facilitate faculty desegregation.

Besides Washington County, three other Georgia counties are involved in the Supreme Court's order to achieve total desegregation by Feb. 1. The three counties still are involved in court disputes, however.

In Louisiana, six school districts remain closed. Most were expected to be operating later in the week.

Student Work Reduced in Dining Com.

A cutback in the number of student workers at the dining commons has been announced by Joel Stoneham, Director of Food Services.

According to Stoneham, the cut was made for budgetary reasons in an effort to use student board money wisely.

The cutbacks will be as objective as possible. "We know this will be a hardship for some students and will try to get jobs for those students needing the money as soon as other students quit."

The cutback in student workers will be a reduction in hours by 25%. This does not necessarily mean a 25% cutback in the number of student workers.

Johnson Calls Meeting About Room Rent Hike

Students will have a chance to ask Treasurer Kenneth Johnson about the proposed room rent increase next week, according to Student Senate President Cynthia Oiken.

Johnson, Miss Oiken said yesterday, will appear before the Senate meeting Wednesday, February 11 and will make a full presentation of the rationale behind the proposed hike.

The meeting is open to the public.

State Police Arrest Three from Amherst For LSD Possession

Three Amherst residents were arrested for possession of $40,000 worth of LSD by State and Local police and by agents of the Federal Narcotics Bureau in town last night.

Pierre Benoot and James Sullivan will be arraigned in Hampshire County Court tomorrow, while James Byrne, for whom a warrant for illegal possession of narcotics was outstanding, was arraigned in Springfield last night.

None of the three were students at UMass.

USSR Threatens Hike In Middle East Arms

LONDON (AP) - The new Soviet threat to inject more arms into the Middle East may be a bid to isolate the United States as Israel's lone big power friend, Western diplomats said Tuesday night.

They disclosed the latest Soviet notes delivered in London, Paris and Washington followed the unannounced dispatch of a U.S. communication 10 days ago that chided Moscow for:

Displaying "an unresponsive" attitude in the Big Four quest for a Mideast peace.

Rejecting the "fair and balanced" American proposals for settlements between Israel and Egypt and between Israel and Jordan.

Reneging on what it termed an understanding reached last fall between secretary of state William P. Rogers and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko on the form of Arab-Israeli peace talks. These were to be conducted on the basis of the so-called "Rhodes formula" used in 1949 when the two sides reached armistice agreements on the Greek island of that name under U.N. auspices.

The Americans were answering a Soviet note of Dec. 23 rejecting 8 out of 10 major American proposals for a settlement. They called on Russia to "reconsider its views."

But the Soviet Union appears to have brushed aside this U.S. appeal by sending warnings of new Mideastern perils to President Nixon, Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain and President Georges Pompidou of France.

Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin's messages to Washington, London and Paris, say unofficial but well substantiated accounts, made these points:

Russia intends to match the United States in the delivery of sophisticated weapons to the Middle East. If the new American Phantoms and other hard-hitting jet planes reach Israel, the Russians say they will step up their help to Egypt and other Arab states.

Russia has no intention of intervening militarily on the side of the Arabs who have been hit hard lately by Israeli planes. But Western authorities do not rule out deepening Soviet involvement. Authoritative accounts reaching London from Cairo indicate up to 4,000 Soviet officers already are serving with Egyptian forces, in combat as well as in rear formations.

Russia considers the escalating rounds of attack and counterattack in the region are endangering not only Mideastern but general peace. This, in Kosygin's view, underlines the need for progress in the Big Fours' search for settlement.

Philosopher, Pacifist Betrand Russell Dies

Wales (AP) - Philosopher Bertrand Russell, an agnostic most of his life, will be cremated Thursday with no religious ceremony.

The funeral for Russell, who died Monday night, will reflect none of his world fame as a philosopher and mathematician, family friends announced Tuesday. There will be no flowers or funeral cortege. The cremation ceremony will be attended only by his widow, Lady Russell, 69; relatives and aides from his peace foundation.

As hundreds of messages and tributes poured in from around the globe, family friends said the ceremony - as austere and nonreligious as Russell would have wished - will be held at the Colwyn Bay crematorium in Wales.

A member of the household said that despite his age, Russell died after spending only 24 hours in bed.

Kenneth Coates, a director of Russell's peace foundation, said he did not know the nature of Russell's fatal illness but he was reported to have suffered recently from the influenza that swept Britain.

Never one to duck controversy, Russell in recent years had led a fight against nuclear rearmament and U.S. policy in Vietnam. But he also found time to irritate the Russians by assailing Stalin, the invasion of Czechoslovakia and imprisonment of Soviet writers.

A pacifist most of his life, he changed his views and supported the 1939-1945 war against Hitler. Many opponents have said Russell regularly changed his views. To this he once wrote:

"My critics seem to think that if you have once advocated a certain policy you should continue to advocate it after all the circumstances have changed. This is quite absurd...a person who advocates a certain policy in certain circumstances will advocate a quite different policy in different circumstances....

Russell never lost his fascination with mankind's problems. At 90 he had said:

"I used to think that when I reached old age I would retire from the world and live a life of elegant culture, reading all the great books, that I ought to have read at an earlier day....A long habit of work with some purpose that one believes important is difficult to break, and I might have found elegant leisure boring even if the world had been in a better shape.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon is recommending an increase of $449 million over his original requests for health and education appropriations to replace a bill he vetoed last week, Republican congressional leaders reported today.

The total of $18.8 billion for the major appropriation bill still would be $810 million less than that in the bill Nixon vetoed as inflationary. The measure is to finance the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, and the Office of Economic Opportunity, for the fiscal year which ends next June 30.

BOSTON (AP) - Federal investigators reopened a case involving an abortive attempt to drain from a secret Swiss bank account more than a million dollars which may have belonged to the Mafia.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Soviet Premier Alexie N. Kosygin has sent a tough note to President Nixon reportedly blaming the United States for Israeli strikes against Egypt.

LONDON (AP) - Western officials suspect Soviet warnings on the Middle East are aimed at isolating the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate critics of President Nixon's Vietnam policies launched a new offensive, contending the Vietnamization effort is a public relations device that creates a false sense of optimism.

SAIGON (AP) - Artillery and helicopter gunships blasted North Vietnamese troops who attacked U.S. position.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Administration served notice it will ask Congress for special legislation unless an early wage settlement ends the threat of a nationwide railroad shutdown.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market rose markedly moments after Treasury Secretary Kennedy says that an easing of tight credit may be nearer at hand than people think.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Judiciary Committee ended its hearings on the Supreme Court nomination of G. Harrold Carswell and debated when to vote on confirming him.

Senate Critics Knock Nixon's Viet Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate critics of President Nixon's Vietnam policy accused the administration Tuesday of creating a national euphoria about the war, but Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said they were just "casting about aimlessly", for an issue.

The setting for a new assault on U.S. war policy was a familiar one, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which opened three days of public hearings on a series of resolutions proposing new U.S. approaches.

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, (D-Iowa), said he was concerned "not only about the national euphoria, but about the way it was created."

"First you pistol-whip the news media, and then you commandeer it for political purposes," Hughes said.

Agnew's retort: "I think that some of the opposition party people who have dropped all their eggs in one basket of attempting to discredit the United States objectives in Vietnam have found such little public support that now they're casting about aimlessly for some way to try to turn the gun back on the administration."

Sen. J. W. Fulbright, (D-Ark.), said he was puzzled by statements that the war is no longer a political issue. Fulbright, the committee chairman, said he hoped the hearings would help determine whether the Nixon policy of turning combat over to Vietnamese troops is "more promising than a renewed effort to negotiate a compromise settlement in the Paris talks."

"The people are with the President on this," Agnew told newsmen after briefing Republican senators on his Asian tour. "And no amount of self serving statements by opposition senators are going to change that."

Agnew said "it's going to take a while" for South Vietnam to ready its forces to take over all ground combat duties.

"I think we're on the right course and if the people stick with the President we'll be out of there."

Feds Try Stopping Mafia Money Drain

BOSTON (AP) - Federal investigators have reopened a case involving an abortive attempt to drain from a secret Swiss bank account more than a million dollars which may have belonged to the Mafia. It is, officials say, one of the strangest Swiss bank cases ever encountered.

The investigators aren't losing any sleep over the safety and well-being of Mafia fortunes. Rather, they are interested in where the money in the Swiss account came from in the first place and the possibility that tax evasions were involved.

The story of the Great Swiss Bank Robbery, which was something of a comedy of errors, was detailed in a law suit filed in Massachusetts Superior Court here five years ago.

Soon after the suit was filed, a Superior Court judge impounded every document and fact in the case, including his own identity. It is still impounded, but copies of the suit are in the hands of federal investigators and The Associated Press.

G.E. Contract May Be Vetoed By Union Men

WASHINGTON (AP) - Labor sources said today the General Electric Co. wage settlement, negotiated after a nationwide strike of more than three months, was in danger of being rejected by voting union members.

"There conceivably could not be enough votes here" to approve the settlement by the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers, said one source.

"It's really unpopular out in the country," said a spokesman for the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists, the third largest of the 14 unions that total some 147,000 members in the strike.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, apparently responding to the reports that approval of the contract was in jeopardy, urged its acceptance.

Well-placed sources said the vote so far among some 80,000 IUE members was 36,000 to approve and 22,000 against approving the 40-month contract providing about 80 cents an hour.

A key vote was scheduled to come sometime today in Schnectady, N.Y., site of one of GE's largest plants with about 15,000 union members eligible to vote.

The Machinists' union, with some 15,000 workers involved in various plants, said the outcome of its voting was still in doubt.

The AFL-CIO poured several million dollars into the long strike, which remains in effect until union members approve a contract, and had mounted a nationwide boycott against GE products.

The workers averaged $3.25 before the strike. The tentative contract agreement would provide wage increases ranging from 61 cents an hour to 82 cents an hour for all workers.

A continuation of preliminary planning for a mass student meeting to be held next Thursday will take place this morning at 10:00 a.m. in the Student Senate office.

Yesterday, at a meeting in the Student Union ballroom, plans for the mass meeting were initiated. Student Senators present at the meeting were fairly certain that the Senate would approve funds to sponsor next week's mass meeting.

According to Gil Salk, the purpose of next Thursday's meeting will be to "deal with the overall role of the student at UMass."

The mass meeting will be held in the Student Union ballroom at 1:30 p.m. Topics to be discussed will be the selection of the new president and chancellor, the room rent increase, and the proposed increase in Student Union fees.

Open Meeting of C.E.Q. Slated for Thurs

The first open meeting of the C. E. Q. will occur this Thursday evening in Hasbrouck 20 at 8 p.m. The purpose of the meeting will be to lay the groundwork for a Western Massachusetts coalition of concerned students, faculty, and community residents to combat the continuing destruction of the environment.

Ecology is no longer the concern of specialists alone, it is for everyone interested in survival. Everybody can and should play a part. Photographers are needed to photograph polluted streams and cities. Theatre majors could be utilized for guerrilla theatre. Government and history majors could analyze administrative policies and practices, or study legal statutes to ascertain current enforcement procedures. Of course what is most needed are capable students and professors who have expertise in specific areas such as noise pollution and transportation systems.

This organization can only be as good as the people it attracts. With some ecologists predicting catastrophe for the Environment within fifteen years the time to act is now! Your research projects, term papers, and free time can help shape the ecology movement. Please attend our open meeting and find something meaningful in your college existence.

Conservationists React to Bill

The local environmental and conservationist groups on campus and in the town of Amherst are urging all interested people to write and telegraph their congressmen immediately concerning the passage of The National Timber Supply Bill (H.R. 12025).

The bill is seen by many as the first step in the destruction of our national forests. The "urgent" plea for public disapproval is emphasized by the fact that H.R. 12025 is scheduled to be voted on this week.

The University of Massachusetts is still accepting applicants for its new summer Freiburg program in Germany. It is open to students from the University of Massachusetts and other colleges. The applicant does not need to major in German. Students who consider attending our year round Freiburg program and still have difficulties in German are advised to join the summer program.

Classes run from July 16 to August 24. The program offers intermediate and advanced courses in German with additional course-integrated lectures on literature, civilization, and politics.

The comparatively low cost of $800 includes round trip group air transportation between Boston and Paris, tuition, room and board, excursions, and lectures. Fee does not include living expenses between June 21 and July 15 when students are free to travel Europe on their own.

For further information, call 545-0312 or 549-0596 - Prof. Albert M. Reh, Director, Freiburg Summer Program.

The following is the schedule of this semester's Action Courses:
Monday - Ecology & Environment - 1:30 to 3:00 p.m.
Tuesday - White Racism - 1:30 to 3:00 p.m.
Wednesday - Vietnam - 3:30 to 3:00 p.m.
Thursday - Student Rights -Student Power - 1:30 to 3:00 p.m.
Friday - Military-Industrial Complex - 1:30 to 3:00 p.m.

All courses will meet once each week in room 320 South College. Use Entry D or E, go to third floor, turn left through Free University office.

The Action Courses, originated by Gil Salk, are sponsored by the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council. Enrollment is open to the entire campus community. The courses are to be run by the participants, who will decide the reading list and format. They will also determine what action will come out of the course.

DLW is Great

In view of the many oversubscribed and overloaded advanced courses in the English Department, perhaps a few of your readers would be interested to learn that English 337, Section 3 (MF, 3:45-5:30, at my home), "Advanced Expository Writing," still has a number of openings. Since Mr. Mayer is not teaching this class after all, the prospectus and prerequisites announced in the Course Catalogue no longer apply. Rather, the approach of this section will be specifically non-professional and humanistic - whether or not "humane."

Anyone curious enough to want more details, whether an English major or not, is invited to call Lee Beaty at 549-0180 (Wed. 3-6 p.m., Fri. morning) or 545-2774 (Thurs. aft.).

Use of Defoliants Threat to Vietnam

VIETNAM (AP) - Four big cargo planes in tight formation hurtle toward a ridge line, skimming the treetops. Over the hill with feet to spare, then down into the valley, their planes wash their bellies in fog.

"Spray on," the lead plane reports. "Spray on," echo the followers in quick succession.

For almost four minutes destructive gray mist spurts from rows of jets under the wings and behind the tails of the four planes, mingling with the fog over the rolling jungle.

In six weeks, a broad brown stripe will mark the path that the planes flew. The Ranch Hands will have left their brand.

They are men of the U.S. Air Force 12th Special Operations Squadron who fly specially equipped C123 defoliation planes. For eight years, they have been grazing the treetops of Vietnam to destroy enemy crops and expose any infiltration routes and base camps hidden under the jungle canopies.

Theirs is a dangerous mission. Their jet-assisted propeller planes weren't designed for such low-level missions or for tight formations.

Five defoliation planes have been shot down, three of them in 1967 before the C123's were equipped with jet pods to give them more maneuverability and enable damaged planes to get back to base.

But the most serious threats to continuation of the defoliation flights have come from the United States, where scientists and conservationists express fears about the long-term effects of defoliation.

Some contend that destruction of thousands of square miles of jungled woodlands will upset the ecological balance in Vietnam and threaten the nation's wildlife and natural resources. Others question whether trying to starve the enemy out by destroying his crops is humane.

Formula 2, 4, 5-T - one of the chemicals used extensively in remote jungle areas of Vietnam - has been banned from use near populated areas in the United States because of indications that strong doses may cause birth defects.

Liberals Block Vote on Carswell

WASHINGTON (AP) - Liberals fighting for electoral reform temporarily delayed Tuesday a vote on confirmation of Judge G. Harrold Carswell for the Supreme Court.

Led by Sen Birch Bayh, D-Ind., they blocked an immediate vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee by insisting on action, too, on the proposed direct popular election of president.

As a result, the committee broke up - until a date to be scheduled later - without moving either Carswell or the proposal along.

Bayh denied allegations by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., that he was holding up the nomination in a gambit to promote the House-passed proposed constitutional amendment.

But this was the effect, nonethe less.

Sen. Marlow Cook, R-Ky., said on leaving the closed session: "We hardly talked about Carswell at all."

The day's two witnesses did. Clarence Mitchell, director of the Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, called the 50-year-old judge "an advocate of racial segregation."

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., co-chairman of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, detailed 15 decisions in which he said Carswell, as a federal judge in Tallahassee, Fla., was reversed unanimously by the U. S. Circuit Court of New Orleans.

Mail Order Ministers May Obtain 4-D Status

Want to become a "Mail-order Minister"? Enjoy a tax-free existence, discounts in travel, entertainment, merchandise, and even a 4D draft classification?

If so, the Universal Free Life Church may be what you are looking for. According to Rev. Dr. Art Fox, the Church head, UFLC, based in Hollywood, Florida, "will ordain any man, woman, or child, just for the asking, and a free will donation. Once you are a minister, you may request the Church to counsel you on your rights under the Selective Service Act, showing you how to proceed in the obtainment of a 4D classification."

The Church, which holds no doctrine of its own and encourages personal religious freedom, maintains that the minister's credentials and license sent to those requesting them are legal in all 50 states and most foreign countries.

"One can perform marriages, funerals, baptisms, or any of the same services performed by the minister of any Church," says Rev. Fox.

The Church will maintain a canteen trailer at Fort Lauderdale during Spring break, offering various services and vacation aids, in hopes of interesting more students in the movement.

Nixon Confers with Powers On Arab-Israeli Conflict

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration is consulting with Britain, France and Israel on a reply to a Soviet note on the growing Arab-Israeli crisis which President Nixon received from Premier Alexei N. Kosygin Saturday.

The White House confirmed the receipt of the personal message to the President and declared that a reply will be dispatched "in due course." Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler refused to disclose what Kosygin told the President.

Other sources, however, described the message as "polemical" and said it blamed the United States for Israel's extensive military strikes against Egypt and other Arab countries and warned of an increase in Soviet help for the Arabs.

But officials considered that the main purpose of the note was to try to get Nixon and other Western Leaders to put pressure s on the Israeli government to curtail its strikes.

The note to Nixon was delivered by Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin to presidential assistant Henry A. Kissinger on Saturday. Monday similar notes were pressnted by the Soviet ambassadors in London and Paris to Prime Minister Harold Wilson and President Georges Pompidou.

State Department officials thought the replies from the Western powers would probably be coordinated but they said that consultations are still under way.

Following delivery of the Soviet note Asst. Secretary of State Joseph H. Sisco, in charge of Middle Eastern affairs, conferred with FrenchAmbassador Charles Lucet and British Ambassador John Freeman. Further talks are expected.

Sisco also consulted with Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin of Israel.

Northampton Volunteers Aid Hospital Patients

Resocialization of patients in Northampton State Hospital is the aim of the Northampton Volunteers who begin their program for second semester tonight.

The State Hospital recently began a process of "unitization", housing patients from the same geographical areas on the same wards in hopes that the outside community will participate more fully in work being done inside the hospital. All too often, student volunteers are the only visitors from outside communities for many of the patients.

After an orientation period, students choose the type or types of activities in which they wish to participate.

In addition to the week-night ward activity program, in which students work with several patients at a time, volunteers may assist in case-aide programs involving work with a single patient.

Buses leave both Wednesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m from Hasbrouck Lab, Patterson in SW, and the Peter Pan Bus Terminal in Amherst Center.

UMass Profs Discuss Role of University

By JOHN C. STAVROS

The following is an interview with four members of the University of Massachusetts faculty representing the fields of Economics, Food Science and Technology, Business and English. The questions concern the role of the University today. Interviewed were Gerald A. Gunderson, Ph.D. (University of Washington), Assistant Professor of Economics; William B. Esselen, Ph. D. (University of Massachusetts), Commonwealth Head of the Department of Food Science and Technology; Joseph Frank Ph.D. (Harvard University), Head of the English Dept.; and James B. Ludtke, Ph.D. (State University of Iowa), Professor and Chairman of the Department of General Business and Finance.

Question:
In the recent past, the diverse role concept of the university in the education of its students has been questioned. What do you feel the role of the university should be?

Gunderson: In the broad view, education becomes merely learning to do something better. The question of what is to be learned should be determined by the students. This is the role of the university. Also, the ivory tower approach no longer exists. At the same time, we find the state school in a very schizophrenic arrangement. The state granting funds to the university might allow it to have a large say in education but, surprisingly, it doesn't for the goals of the state and student are not the same.

Esselen: The primary role of the university is to provide for the education of the student through professional scientific training and the humanities. Perhaps "how to better understand our fellowman" sums it up. The secondary role of the university is to provide for its roles in research in order to extend the frontiers of knowledge and enrich instructors by keeping them up to date. Through research, the teachers' knowledge should carry over to the students, and the students in turn see the professor attempting to better himself. Research is creative effort, no matter what the field of study is. The third function is continuing education outside the classroom and university. The application of an effective extension service must be carried to all areas of society.

Frank: It is up to the university to provide extensive diversification at the undergraduate level. At the same time, it must recognize the need for vocational orientation at the graduate level. In the English Department we hope to do more with student teaching, team teaching and unconventional courses. It is up to us to provide inter-disciplinary study and also recognize that contemporary literature includes much more than the printed word.

Ludtke: With the framework of teaching, research and public service the university must become involved in many diverse areas of study, some of which have an immediate and direct bearing on manpower needs, and solutions to economic, political and social problems. However, I would think there would be a primary emphasis on liberal education, with a clear understanding that one need not pursue a major in the College of Arts and Sciences to receive this liberal education.

Question:
Do you feel UMass has done its part as a university in accomplishing the goals you mentioned?

Gunderson: I believe the university has done better than average. Our role here is rapidly changing. You must remember that ten years ago this university was Mass Aggie. We are shifting to new programs and in terms of progress this is excellent. We are also developing a very respected faculty.

Esselen: Yes, I feel the university has done very well, but there is still so much we can do.

Frank: (Dr. Frank expressed the desire not to comment on this issue as he has only been at the University for 3 1/2 months).

Ludtke: Our major shortcoming has been in the field of public service. However, I cannot offer a quick solution on how to overcome this problem. We have probably been a little slow in developing long-range educational plans for UMass and devising long-range strategies to improve the educational system.

Question:
What can UMass do to improve itself in the future?

Gunderson: The gradual modification of individual class teaching is the key. The class of the future will keep its old shell but inside will be different, for what is taught will be different. I find the student body on the whole improving. I'm getting better students in my introductory courses and better public education has been the reason for this. In the future we must reorganize the administration, which is presently divided because of the separate functions of the offices of the Treasurer and Provost. The new administration plan will allow better relations with the legislature and allow spending to become efficient in our educational system.

Esselen: The students must be given more freedom of choice. More electives must be provided and perhaps we might start thinking of shifting some four-year programs to five-year programs. It appears that there are a lot of fields, especially those of the sciences, which should move to this type of thing. Perhaps the word here is the "well-rounded education"; this is what we should seek. Too often subjects available at the university that are important in developing the individual are not available after graduation. They should therefore be learned here.

Frank: (See Frank above).

Ludtke: Establishment of a long-range planning is vital to future improvement. Involvement of the faculty and the students in these plans is also essential. The challenge will be to develop a management and information system, along with a program budget system to allocate the scarce funds so that the goals of the educational system are properly met.

Question:
What is your opinion of the Trustee controlled university?

Gunderson: I don't believe the Trustees exercise much power. They have been a rubber stamp group that hasn't shown any outstanding moves like those that have taken place at the University of Rochester. They are average trustees.

Esselen: The trustees have done okay. I have no strong feeling on the matter. Students probably think otherwise, but there are two sides to the question. A lot of progress has been made because they are more cognizant of students' ideas and recognized their needs. Why they didn't act in such a manner ten years ago is probably because they did not recognize it was a problem.

Frank: It's not an ideal situation, but it's better than direct political intervention.

Ludtke: I would be interested in exploring the feasibility of replacing the Board of Trustees with an elected faculty board. Some of the European Universities have boards of trustees entirely composed of faculty. I really had no strong feelings on the matter because I didn't think there were any alternatives open at the present. In the final analysis, the most important thing is the quality of the people involved. Whether they are appointed members, students or faculty, they must be alert to the changes in public higher education.

U.S.-Israeli Ties Condemned

WASHINGTON (AP) - Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin has sent a stiff note to President Nixon reportedly contending the United States is responsible for Israeli military strikes against Egypt.

The note was understood also to affirm a Soviet determination to provide increasing support as necessary for the Arab States.

The note was being interpreted by U. S. officials to day as primarily an effort by Kosygin to get Nixon to put pressure on Israel to curb its attacks on Egypt. Alternatively, informants said Kosygin may be building a case to justify a new escalation in the Middle East Arms race.

The White House today confirmed receipt of the note but refused to disclose its message or the nature of the U. S. reply. It was delivered by Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin to Presidential Assistant Henry Kissinger on Saturday.

That is was the spear-head of a Russian diplomatic offensive - designed in some way to assist Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser - was indicated Monday when Soviet messages also were delivered by ambassadors in London and Paris to Prime Minister Harold Wilson and French President Georges Pompidou.

Come and see why we pride ourselves in strong tradition and a fine reputation in our 60th anniversary year.

Why?

Why is it that the University sticks to its policy of admitting 1500 extra students per year, when classes and dorms are overcrowded?

Why is it that the Little Hatch and the Dining Commons do not give out change, except with a purchase?

Why is it that the food services don't poll the students to find out if they want special meals like Rock Cornish Game Hen and steak nights?

Why is it that the first $50,000 from dorm vending machine money go the Athletic Scholarship Fund and not to the dorms?

Why is it that a student can pay $2000 for an education here and still not be able to register in courses of his choice?

Why is it that the Faculty Senate made a gigantic stride in encouraging mediocrity by passing the rule that freshmen cannot flunk out?

Why is it that there is a proposed Student Union fee increase from $30 to $90? For a building which the Martin Luther King Council has had to beg for space. For a building in which only two or three floors will be of use to students.

Why is it that although students will be averaging approximately $70 rent a month for half of a room, they are not allowed to stay in their rooms during vacations?

Why is it that the University Store is not a cooperative like those at Dartmouth and Harvard Colleges?

Why is it that the University Bookstore passes out a circular entitled, "Where Your Textbook Dollar Goes" and you can still buy books cheaper at any of the co-ons?

Why is it that there is still the PE 100 requirement? Surely learning about bowling for two semesters is just a pleasurable, but useless, waste of time.

Why is it that student telephone directories cost money? Isn't the $25 we pay per semester enough?

Why is it that the Administration is not ready to mess with the heads of residence with rent increases, but will defend to the death the increases for students?

Why is it that anyone thinks that anbody will gain anything from having the Democratic Convention at UMass if students won't be around?

Why is it that the selection of the new Chancellor is a foregone conclusion?

My Own Trip

Pollution and M. Shumway

Pollution. Air, noise, water. Do we at UMass really think we can do anything about it? Let's point a pin at the bubble.

The ten mile strip of Route 9 between Northampton center and Amherst center is slowly but steadily becoming the ugliest garbage pit east of the Connecticut River. Its neon light gas stations and motels will soon rival Route 5 in Springfield as a stretch that will make the most routine journey a painful experience. The sincerity of our cries against an increasingly malignant environment is belied by our apathy toward those conditions over which we have some realistic control.

The Amherst Motel across the street from Zayre's provides an excellent example of how absolutely obscene a sign can be. Whoever put up that pretentious gaudy atrocity should be banished from the Pioneer Valley forever for showing not the slightest concern about serving the area in any way while milking it of its capital and its beauty. Yet this is only a sign of what's to come.

Mr. Robert Shumway has recently cashed in on an agreement he wangled a year and a half ago to obtain the rights to the property on which five houses now stand on the northwest corner of the intersection of Route 9 and University Drive. Against the desires of the present owners of the homes and many other concerned citizens he plans to build a Shell gas station and a hamburger joint on that property. No one is legally able to do anything about it.

I would suggest two steps at this time to try to reverse a trend which, if allowed to continue, will turn the valley into a pit. First, I urge all residents of the area to boycott Mr. Shumway's soon-to-be-built establishments and any other enterprises, especially the newer tawdrier ones, which display a lack of concern for those they serve. We can show the business world pretty decisively, if we desire, that there is no market in the Amherst area for the crap they care to peddle. Secondly I suggest that the Collegian inaugurate an investigation of the Amherst and Hadley planning boards to see what's in store for the near future. I may not be too late to have a say in whom we'd like to open up shot here. The last thing the Amherst-Hadley residents need, for example, is a MacDonald's type thing between Ripples and Drummer Boy.

WASHINGTON - The story of Michael Brody, heir to an oleomargarine fortune in millions, thousands or hundreds depending on which newspaper you read on which day, sounds like it was written by two very hungry Hollywood writers.

They go in to see the head of the studio.

"J.B., we have this great idea for a movie. Tell him, Al."

"Well, J.B., it's about this 21-year-old kid who plays a guitar and has long hair and believes everyone should love each other. He inherits $25 million from his grandfather, who invented a butter substitute."

J.B. says, "Both of you get out of here!"

"Wait a minute, J.B. There's more to it than that. He walks down the street handing out thousands of dollars to anyone he likes. Pretty soon, there's an army of people trying to get to him for schemes they want financed."

J.B. looks at the two men. "Do you want me to call the studio police?"

"Please J.B., let Sam tell you what we've got in mind. The guy can't go anywhere without people following him and screaming at him for some of the money. People sit outside his home, his apartment. They call him night and day. They tear his clothes; they break his guitar. He has to hire a bodyguard. The press won't let him alone.

"He holds a press conference and announces he has the solution to the Vietnamese war."

J.B. clenches his fist. "How the hell did you guys get into my office in the first place?"

"Sam, tell him what happens next."

"Then he demands to see President Nixon. He says he's got something very important to tell him. he goes down to the White House, but the guards won't let him in. So he says he'll meet with Brezhnev in the Kremlin instead. "You take it, Al."

"While all this is going on, the guy is being dogged day and night by nuts. He's starting to flip. He screams at the people that they're all greedy, and he won't give them any money if they act like animals."

J.B. pressed the buzzer on his desk. The secretary came in. "Show these men out and if they come back again, call the nearest mental institution."

"J.B., this could be a great movie. Bigger than 'Easy Rider.' The guy gets so sore at the people that he hires a plane and flies to the Caribbean with a planeload of reporters. But he can't find any peace there, either. So he flies back to New York and decides to make a record about peace."

"Now, this is the part you're going to like, J.B. It's the finish to end all finishes. Tell him, Sam."

"The guy goes on the Ed Sullivan show! Ed interviews him and then he sings a song."

"Can't you see it, J.B.? The whole country is watching him and he tells them that money isn't everything , and the most important thing is to have good vibrations."

Both writers hold onto the desk as the studio police start pulling them.

Al yells, "Now for the switch at the end. The guy doesn't have $25 million - he only has a lousy $4 million so everyone gets sore at him, and he finally discovers that you can't buy love."

As they are being dragged down the hall, Sam cries, "All right. If you think it's too far-fetched, we'll take out the part about him going on the Ed Sullivan show!"

Campus Comment

Absurdity

It has come to our attention that the University of Massachusetts Administration is considering raising the residence hall rents of the traditional dorms (state owned) to a total of $1100 a year from the present $800. As members of the House Council of Wheeler House we are adamantly opposed to any such action for the following reasons:

1. A room in which two students live for eight months in a year measures approx. 12' x 12', has two beds, one bureau, two desks and chairs, one naked light bulb, cracked walls, erratic heating, and two small closets (4' x 22").

2. A residence hall of approximately 180 students has only two study rooms of the same size as the rooms above.

3. Recreation/lounge areas consist of the main lobby (measuring 22' x 16') and a ping-pong - T.V. room (measuring 36' x 22') again for the same 180 students.

4. Aside from the above mentioned room furniture, lounge furniture consists of 4 couches, (2 without cushions), 18 stuffed chairs, 9 lamps, and four rugs to sit on when the chairs do not go around.

5. On top of all this we have to contend with: warm water in the drinking fountains, 5 showers working satisfactorily (cold AND hot water), no electric outlets in the shower rooms, toilet fixtures that are often out of order, and two washers and dryers (often not functioning) all for 180 people.

For all the above reasons, and more, we feel the proposed room rent increase is absurd. Should you feel that our position is unjustified, we invite you to come and stay with us as our guest.

Free Press

Professor DePillis' letter dealing with your article, "HISTORY DEPARTMENT STRIFE SEEN RENEWED", may inadvertently strike a blow at a "Free and Responsible Press". He describes your article as "sensational and misleading" on the basis that there is no factionalism in the Department of History regarding professor Gerald Gruman's appeal for tenure. It is unlikely that a group of faculty members, so recently factionalized regarding departmental reform, (reform that Professor Gruman strongly supported) would cease to hold their allegiances in this extremely relevant situation.

Professor DePillis is obviously concerned with the welfare of the department, but he seems to be short-sighted in his attempt to "play down" the importance of this matter. ("But at this point airing the matter under a misleading headline only perpetuates the personal and professional damage suffered by this department in the last four years." Professor DePillis, Tues, Feb. 3.)

Only if this matter is aired and re-aired will the Collegian be living up to its responsibilities as a "Free Press" and be able to shed some light on the mystifying situation that has stifled the history department in recent years. Justice must be done, but this can only be accomplished when the reading public, not just one committee, has access to all the available facts.

The Kinetic Art To Present Film Showcase

THE KINETIC ART, a showcase for international prize winning films from nine countries, is making a nationwide tour this season and will present three film concerts here on February 10, 17, and 24 at 7 and 9:15. The series is sponsored by the Student Union Movie Committee. Tickets are $1.00.

The twenty-six films vary from 55 seconds to 55 minutes in length and are receiving enthusiastic acceptance from theatre and concert goers, art patrons and college students seeking a new and stimulating approach to film entertainment as a performing art, according to M.C.A. Inc. of Hollywood, backers of the project.

The series has already keynoted such distinguished film festivals as New York's Lincoln Center, Atlanta's High Museum, the Saratoga (N.Y.) Summer Festival, and the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington D.C.'s Lisner Auditorium.

Critics have praised KINETIC ART: "Cannot be duplicated in any other art form," comments the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR. . . . "Nothing short of fantastic" is the Utah CHRONICLE'S opinion, while Vincent Canby of THE NEW YORK TIMES calls the series: "Beautiful. . .(with) a lively sense of the visual. . .as exhilarating as it is indescribable."

UMass and Smith College Open Art Exhibits

Contemporary American Art

The Amherst College musical group SUNDANCE, of last year's "Dream Engine" theatre productions at Amherst and Mount Holyoke College, will perform at the opening of the exhibition, at 8:30 p.m. Feb. 7. The opening will be for Museum members, Smith faculty and students, and Five College Community members. Dress will be informal.

The museum regards the exhibition, with 47 pictures, as representing "an important contemporary direction in American painting which deals in a special way with figural images. While subject matter is representational, it cannot be considered as traditional realism."

In his introduction to the catalogue, Acting Director of the Smith College Museum Michael Wentworth discusses definitions of "realism" and "painterly", and the works brought together because they share loose, rapid brushwork as we' ns figural images - figures, still-..fe, and landscape.

Such artists as Jane Freilicher, Paul Georges, and Fairfield Porter, included in the exhibition, have worked in this manner for some time. Other younger painters such as Joe Giordano, John Bradford, and Charles Moore have arrived at this approach more recently.

Wentworth points to the new direction with enthusiasm and observes: "The desire of these young painters to celebrate the things of their world, their high ambition, and their seriousness of purpose at once gives us something to look forward to and something to admire."

The exhibition will continue through March 1. The museum is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Israeli's Leading Artists

An exhibit of paintings and lithographs by Israel's leading artists is currently on display in Smith College's Center for the Performing Arts.

"Young and Old Masters of Israel" will be shown through February 21 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. in the lobby of the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre. Sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations at Smith and Amherst Colleges in cooperation with the Northampton Jewish Cultural Center, the exhibit was made available by the Pucker/Safrai Gallery of Jerusalem and Boston.

Among the artists represented are Jossi Stern, Shemuel Katz, David Sharir, and Reuven Rubin. This exhibition is the first in a series of programs on the life and culture of Israel entitled "Israel' 1970."

Other events to be held during the next three months include a cabaret night, lectures, concerts, a second art exhibit, and a film. All will be open to the public without charre.

One Man Show

A one-man show of paintings by UMass artist Wang Hui-Ming will run Feb. 6 through Feb. 27, at the Boris Mirski Gallery, 166 Newbury St., Boston.

Wang is an associate professor in the UMass art department whose work has been featured at a number of one-man shows. His work has also been in group shows at the Institute for Contemporary Art in Boston.

UMass Gymnasts Face Top-Rated Penn State

UMass gymnastics fans will have an opportunity to see one of the highlight meets of the current season when Penn State University meets the Redmen in the Boyden Auxiliary Gym tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Penn State, perennial power in the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastic League, has thus far beaten Army and lost to Springfield College, 158-.20 - 158.15. At present, results of the Penn State - Navy meet have not reached the UMass athletic office.

Last season Penn State finished 8-0 in regular season and won the Eastern Championships. At the NCAA Championships, the Nittany Lions finished second.

Although hurt by graduation, Penn State boasts two fine performers in Captain Dick Swetman and Tom Dunn. Last year these two performers finished second and third respectively in the parallel bars event at the NCAA Championships. Both of these athletes work the all-around event and are to a large extent responsible for much of Penn State's strength.

The Nittany Lions' loss to Springfield was their first defeat at home since Army accomplished the feat in 1957.

This year the Redmen have their best chance ever to beat Penn State, a team they have never topped since UMass entered the Eastern League in 1964. UMass showed that scoring over 157 points against Southern Connecticut was not due to luck as they repeated the feat against Army last Saturday.

A victory over Penn State will require a strong team effort on the part of the Redmen. Such an effort, however, is well within the capabilities of the UMass gymnasts.

The Redmen will be counting heavily on Rick Riley on side horse, Scott Stover on horizontal bar, Joe Reed and Norm Vexler in the all-around event, Mike Kassavana in floor exercise, and Steve Cary on parallel bars and long horse vault.

Equally important will be the performances of the second and third men in each event. Since the top three individual scores are totaled to determine the team score, the outcome of a meet can be determined by the scores of the second and third men on each squad.

With a strong team effort by UMass, a second Penn State loss is highly possible. Whatever the outcome, UMass gymnastics fans will be enjoying college gymnastics competition at its highest level.

SOPH ACE - Jack Edwards, UMass soph wing, has been named ECAC Division II Soph of The Week for his stellar play.

UMass Rugby Basks in Tropical Sun

For the first time in its brief history, the UMass Rugby Team entered in international competition. As guests of the Freeport Rugby Football Club, the UMass ruggers spent five splendid days on Grand Bahama Island playing and playing rugby.

In two games against the Freeport club, UMass tasted defeat, but showed amply its valor. In the first game versus a Freeport 'A' team, undefeated these last two years, the UMass team could not present a sufficient offensive showing and was forced into playing a strong but futile defensive game in torrid 80 degree weather.

Freeport led at halftime 11-0, but as the game progressed into the second half, the Redmen ruggers, led by Jim Keating, played great defense. Too soon, however, the climate took its toll and Freeport scored nearly at will resulting in a final score of 39-0.

A day of rest prepared the club for the second game's effort. Freeport and UMass struggled through a first half, largely scoreless, until Freeport's premier kicker put through a penalty kick. UMass' offense was largely the pressing defense of the forwards and hard hitting of the backs. Numerous times the ball lay within Freeport's ten yard line but no tries for UMass. Freeport scored once more in the second half and the score remained 8-0.

The Bahama trip did not produce victory for UMass players, but certainly provided an experience never to be forgotten. The team scrimmaged with the sailors from the H.M.S. Mohawk . . . a memorable experience. They saw the Islands first hand.

They played first class rugby. A number of players deserve particular recognition, Jim Keating for his leadership, Frank Desiata and Jim Dever for their strong offensive efforts, the kicking of Kevin Kline, and the player praised by the Bahamians for his tremendous job as booker, the utter novice, Paul Dinerman.

The Rugby Club having returned to Amherst, is in the process of preparing for a most hopeful and ambitious spring season. Games this spring include Boston College and Amherst, as well as the Rugby Tournament to be held here in May.

The team willmeet to discuss the spring plans and to welcome all new members and friends of rugby in the Student Union - Commonwealth Room - on Wednesday, February 4 at 7:30 p.m.

BC, Down at Half, Comes Back to Top UMass, 83-76

Bettancourt Nets 25; Julius was Julius

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

CHESTNUT HILL - Playing like it was the finals of the NCAA the UMass basketball team fell short of Boston College, 83-76, here, last night as a 13 point Redman lead dwindled in the face of a first half Eagle press giving the home team momentum for the second half lead that the fighting visitors just couldn't overcome.

Early in the first half UMass quickly built up a 6-0 lead on a John Bettancourt drive, a Jack Gallagher tap-in, and a Julius Erving 15 footer before BC was able to score.

The Redmenkepta small six point lead for most of the first ten minutes as the score stood at 21-15 with 9:40 left. At this point the fun began; first for UMass, then for BC.

Dick Samuelson, Bettancourt and Erving hit both ends of one and one foul situations and the latter two canned short jumpers to give the visitors a 13 point, 31-18, advantage with 6:49 showing on the clock.

A Frank Fitzgerald 20 foot jumper made it 31-20 two minutes later; BC jumped quickly back on defense and proceeded to employ a costly full court press. Bettancourt temporarily gave the Redmen a 33-20 lead on two free throws, but the comfort of a big lead was short-lived.

Seven Vin Costello points and two each from Pete Sollene, Pete Schmid, Jim Downey and Greg Sees brought the Eagles to within two at the half, 37-35.

Boston College abandoned the press in the second half but gained a quick lead on their opponents with fine outside shooting and strong floor play.

A Fitzgerald bomb a minute into the second half evened the score at 37-37. A Jim O'Brien 20 footer, a Costello jumper and a Sollene layup put BC further ahead, 45-39.

GOOD EFFORTS BUT NO CIGAR - John Bettancourt had his best scoring night at UMass with 25 and Julius Erving had 26 points with 19 caroms but it was not enough as Redmen ran out of gas in second half.

A ten point lead was established with 9:59 to go, but BC could not take solace in this fact as the Redmen, led by the outside shooting of Bettancourt bounced back time and time again over the remainder of the affair.

With 6:16 to go, UMass was down by only four, 59-55. BC made the score 65-57, with 4:57 left. That advantage was increased by one, 70-61, with 2:40 remaining. A minute later, the lead was still nine, 75-66.

However, two straight Erving hoops and a long jumper by Bettancourt brought the Redmen to within six, 78-72, with 1:21 left, forcing the Eagles to call time out.

An Erving basket matched by a Tom Veronneau foul hoop made it a five point deficit for the Redmen, but a 3-1 fast-break lay-up gave the Eagles an 81-74 lead with 37 seconds to go and the contest was no longer in doubt. UMass got one more basket, BC two free throws and the final score stood at 83-76.

HOOP NOTES - The Redmen extended themselves in this tilt but, as was the case a year ago, went down to a bitter defeat.

Eaglets 78, UMass, 70, BC Sweeps Evening

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Chestnut Hill - Although taking a two point lead into the second half, the Little Redmen were defeated last night by the Eaglets of Boston College, 78-70. It was the sixth loss of the season for UMass against three wins.

Boston College was paced in the second half by a well balanced offense and a defense which never allowed the Little Redmen to penetrate to the basket. The Eaglets scoring was paced by 6'7 Dave Freitag who had eight points in the critical final stanza along with Don Macaloon and guard Bob Smith.

Leading the Little Redmen in scoring were forward Chuck Olsen who canned 24 and Mike Polakoff who hit for 12 of the team's 28 points in the second half and 27 for the game. Also deserving credit was Andre Polly's strong rebounding game in a substitute role.

UMass led the entire game until there was 15:30 remaining when Bob Spitz hit a jumper for BC to give the Eaglets a 50-49 edge. However, Polakoff and Chuck Peters came right back for the Little Redmen and it looked as if UMass was still in control.

Mike Farricker came back with the hoop which cut the Redman lead to one, but then Olsen took over. The 6'5 forward netted three straight jumpers within a minute and a half and UMass had a 59-52 lead.

The next three minutes were all BC. They ran off ten straight points and suddenly it was a new ball game with BC up by three, 62-59 with 9:31 left.

UMass could never catch up. Despite the consistent bombing of Polakoff, the Redmen could never penetrate and BC made many easy hoops inside.

With 3:12 left, the Eaglets, with a six point lead, 72-66 started to freeze. UMass was forced to foul and couldn't put the ball in the hoop when they got the chance.

Tom King finally made a basket for the Redmen but only 36 seconds were left and his team was down 77-68.

Finally Polakoff layed one in with only five seconds left to make the final score 78-70.

It was a disappointing loss for the Little Redmen who played a fine first half. The bright spots in the game were the big scoring nights of both Olsen and Polakoff. The key to the loss was UMass' field goal percentage of only 39.7 due to their inability to penetrate.

Springfield Downs Wrestlers

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

UMass' hopes of New England wrestling supremacy were buried last night at the Springfield College Field House, as the Redmen were beaten by the number one ranked Chiefs, 27-7.

The Redmen never led in the meet and didn't win a match until the issue was no longer in doubt, when Tom Andrewes won his 177 lb. match 3-1.

Actually, the final score could have been much closer if the Redmen could have come out on the winning of a few close decisions. Springfield jumped to a quick 9-0 lead after the first three matches, two of which were won by defending New England champs, Sheldon Goldberg put the Redmen on the scoreboard when he battled to his third straight draw , a 1-1 tie in the 142 lb. class. Clay Jester and Springfield's Lint duplicated the score in the 150 lb. class and the Chiefs held a 13-4 lead at the halfway point.

Jim Godkin lost a tough 6-5 decision in his 158 lb. match when a two point takedown was not given to him in the first period on a questionable call by the referee.

Any ideas the Redmen had of getting back into the meet were quickly doused by Springfield's Art Ziegler. The Chief's strongman, a third place finisher in last year's New England tourney, wasted little time in pinning Kent Mignocchi to win the 167 lb. match and also clinching the win for Springfield.

After the win by Andrewes, Springfield won the last two matches both high scoring affairs. 190 pounder Bruce Buckbee took on another New Endland champ and wrestled valiantly in an 11-7 loss. Redmen heavyweight George Zguris got over aggressive on a few occasions and this cost him in a 9-7 loss.

Coach Homer Barr was obviously displeased with the team's performance. He was happy that his wrestlers didn't get taken down very often, but he added, "we were just awful coming off the mat." "The boys just weren't aggressive enough," said Barr in explaining the loss, "and I don't know yet if the team is back in shape."

The coach praised the work of Buckbee, who has been very impressive since becoming a starter. He also felt that Godkin did a fine job and deserved to win. A win in that match and wins by Jester and Goldberg would have tied the meet and the outcome may have been different. However, that is hindsight and the Redmen must now look towards the rest of the season and a second chance in the New Englands.

Vermont Dunks Swimmers, 68-34

By EDWARD DOHERTY
Staff Reporter

Saturday afternoon before a packed crowd at UVM's Forbush Natatorium in Montpelier, Vermont, the Catamount swimmers defeated the UMass Redmen 68-34. Vermont outnumbered the UMass swimmers nearly two to one, and this great depth accounts for the uneven score.

Still, the swimmers came up with some fine individual performances and, in addition, three men made their varsity debut to bolster the ranks of the team to ten.

Paul Joy, one of the newcomers almost didn't swim in the meet. His status was doubtful due to a ruptured eardrum suffered in practice before the meet. In a courageous effort, Joy earned a pair of seconds in the one-meter diving event and the 200 yd. backstroke race.

Captain Al Northrup matched that performance with two second places himself, barely missing a first in the 200 yd. breaststroke (2:31.1 - 2:32.7). Steady Mark Miller, anchor man on the victorious 400 Freestyle Relay, gained the only first place for the Redmen with a fine performance in the 50 yd. freestyle. Miller placed second in the same style at 100 yards.

Other swimmers earning points for UMass were Eddie Jazab, placing third in the Freestyle and Backstroke at 200 yards, Morris Lynch who took second in the marathon 500 yard freestyle, Herb Schuster, third in the 3-meter diving event, and Rich Vogel, third in the 200 yard backstroke.

In the freshman contest, Vermont again came out on top with a 59-26 victory. For the Redmen, Charlie McAuliffe earned the lone victory in the 200 yard backstroke event.

Five second places were earned by the UMass swimmers: the 200 and 500 yard freestyles, by Paul Reynolds the 200 yard butterfly race, by Bill Davidson, the 100 yard freestyle by Terry Carney, and Charlie McAuliffe captured a second place in addition to his victory to be the high scorer for the frosh swimmers.

With the vacation lay-off over, the swimmers continue action with home meets this week, taking on Central Conn. Saturday. The Central Connecticut team is led by captain and star swimmer Norm Davidson, brother of freshman swimmer Bill Davidson, and has to be ranked as one of the top five teams in New England, according to the Redmen themselves.

UMass has to rate the role of underdog because of their depth problem.

Senate Seeks Committee for Chancellor Selection

By CLARK LABRECQUE
Senior Reporter

The Student Senate last night passed two bills which assert, in effect, the role of the student in the so called "tri-partite community."

The bills concern the possible appointment of Provost Oswald Tippo as Chancellor ofthe University, a decision some members of the Senate feel was made by the Board of Trustees without proper student consultation.

The first bill which was passed unanimously resolves "that any appointment of a permanent Chancellor made through means other than a search committee is unacceptable to the student Senate."

The committee acceptable to the Senate would involve student members. At a Board meeting Jan. 16, it was learned that the Trustees had effectively picked Provost Tippo to fill the newly created post.

At the January meeting the trustees' Executive Committee agreed that they would take no final action until the Student Senate had an opportunity to study the matter.

A second bill, passed with a small number of members dissenting, would place Tippo in the position of "acting Chancellor" until a final decision is made "to assure administrative continuity."

The chancellor's position will become effective in June when a new president is installed.

According to the bills, if the proposed search committee does not agree on a Chancellor by June, either Provost Tippo or someone else, then Tippo would assume the position of Acting Chancellor until an acceptable final decision could be made.

The new University President will work in Boston to give him more effective contact with the legislature while the Chancellor will remain on the Amherst campus.

Senate Vice-President Glenn Elters said that "Oswald Tippo may very well be the man we need but perhaps appointing a permanent Chancellor at this time is not the wisest thing."

He said that the Provost has been "submerged" from student view and he is not well enough known to the students.

"We've got to be fair to ourselves and the University," he said.

Student Government Association Chairman Dawn Dudash, one of four sponsors of the bills, said that the dissent was not a matter of Tippo "the man" but rather the manner in which the Trustees apparently made their choice without student consultation.

Senator Geoffrey Levine said "students have been tramped on."

Lack of Funds Causes Layoffs Of Dining Commons Student Help

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

Those who eat in the University Dining Commons can expect the long lines encountered for the last two days to continue, for at least a little while, or maybe "forever," mused Joel Stoneham, Director of University Food Services.

Half-hour waits were common in most of the dining commons last night. There were shortages of silverware at some of the Commons. And if you didn't notice, there was a lack of employees.

Hardest hit by the cutback in student employees, was the Franklin Dining Commons (Copper Kettle) where the number of employees was cut from 130 to 69.

The reason for the cuts was lack of funds, a common problem on campus. The reason for a lack of funds this semester according to Joel Stoneham was poor budget planning last semester. "We were overstaffed last semester," explained Stoneham.

According to Stoneham, if the dining commons employee level had been correct, the situation which now exists would not be much different than what it would have been starting last September.

Mr. Stoneham readily admitted the mistakes made. But, Stoneham did reassure students that "he didn't like to see long lines any more than they did."

All that can be done to remedy the situation is being done, and the lines should be back to normal "within a week," said Stoneham. One alternative to the long lines may be an extension of the Dining Common Hours. The situation may just "settle" itself after a while.

Mr. Richard Bongiovanni, Head of the Franklin Dining Commons recommends that students use the east side of the Franklin Commons. There will be two lines open on that side.

Licensing of Reporters May Increase Public Confidence

WASHINGTON (AP) - Government licensing of reporters was suggested Wednesday by a member of the national violence commission. He said such certification would increase public confidence in the news media while seeking out "individuals who are totally inept."

"This in no way assures complete perfection of the profession," said Dr. W. Walter Menninger, a psychiatrist and at 38 the youngest of the 13 members on the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence.

It would serve, however, as licensing of doctors, lawyers and teachers serves, "to assure the public that the practitioners of the art are qualified practitioners," Menninger said.

His suggestion drew this reaction from Gilbert P. Smith, managing editor of the Utica, N.Y., Observer-Dispatch and president of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association:

"A license never made a doctor good or competent. Certification has never made a good teacher."

Smith said the doctor's statement "is, to say the least, unworthy of him."

"I suggest that Dr. Menninger knows as well as the rest of us that education, devotion, energy, integrity and a desire for public service are the ingredients that make newsmen or anyone else competent and sometimes excellent in their jobs," Smith said. "And lack of those qualities results in inadequacy in any field."

Menninger, a staff psychiatrist at the Topeka, Kan., mental health foundation that bears his family name, said some segments of American society feel their only channel to the news media is through violent action.

Coolidge Senior Selected Top College Girl on Campus

Miss Frances Salipante, Class of 1970, won the National Top College Girl on Campus contest in the Student Union Ballroom last night. She was nominated by her floor and represented her dorm in the competition, which was sponsored by Angel Flight and Glamour Magazine.

She will go on to participate in regional contests. As winner, she was presented with gift certificates for several stores throughout the Pioneer Valley.

Miss Salipante is an Elementary Education major from Medford. She lives on the 17th floor of Coolidge Tower. She is currently practice teaching with mentally retarded children. Frances plans to be married in June.

Senate Stands Firm On Drum, YanCon, MDC

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate last night upheld a decision by President Cynthia Olken that a motion to reconsider the Senate appropriation for the Drum, a black literary magazine, was out of order under Roberts Rules, which provides that acts which are of a contractual nature may not be reconsidered.

Senator Waters, arguing against the chair's ruling, contended that the Senate passed the appropriation originally not because it thought the appropriation good, but rather to pacify the petitioners, and that if the Senate upheld the chair, it would do so out of fear of the consequences of reconsideration. He further stated that "there are a lot of unanswered questions about the financial aspects of this bill."

In other action, the Senate by a tie vote, with the chair voting in opposition to make the tie, opposed a bill to recommend withdrawal from the Yankee Conference. Senator Twiss, sponsor of the bill, argued that the Conference inhibits the University's athletic development, and that a fully-developed athletic program is an asset to the University.

Other arguments were heard concerning the financial benefits that would accrue to the University through alumni contributions were the University to join another larger and more widely publicized conference.

Opponents of the bill contended that, in the words of Senator Brown, "football would skyrocket", and result in a further prostitution of the University, and a further warping of our priorities.

In other action, the Senate dedefeated a bill to investigate the possibility of a second campus newspaper, after hearing reports citing difficulties in finding staff for the one existing newspaper; passed a bill defining the authority and powers of the area governments with respect to the Senate; and appropriated $1,500 from Homecoming profits to the Wes Honey Memorial Fund. Mr. Honey, was an editor of Yahoo, and worked for the Alumni Association, particularly in planning class reunions. He was widely liked and respected by all who came in contact with him.

In late action, the Senate established an ad-hoc committee to study the current level of communications between the white and black communities, and recommends means for improving communications.

Blackout!

A massive power failure interfered with normal operations at UMass Wednesday. Electric power was out in several classroom buildings from Draper Hall to the School of Education. All the dorms in Northeast, were out of power.

According to Northeast Coordinator Michael West, power was lost a few times for brief periods early in the morning. Then, about 3:00 in the afternoon, power went out and stayed that way until shortly before midnight.

A spokesman at the physical plant said that the actual reason will not be known until today.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - American savers, beset by inflation and promised higher interest elsewhere, have cashed in more savings bonds than they've bought for the last 14 months. But the government expects the trend to turn soon.

SAIGON (AP) - North Vietnamese infantrymen assaulted a remote U. S. fire base north of Saigon Wednesday, then regrouped and attacked an American patrol sweeping the perimeter. But field reports say they enemy fared badly, losing 43 men killed.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Wednesday that expansion of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system probably would doom to stalemate the strategic arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union.

MOSCOW (AP) - Soviet mail is three times slower than 100 years ago, the newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta complained Wednesday.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said Wednesday he doubts President Nixon would respond to new enemy attacks in Vietnam by re-escalating U. S. troop strength.

NEW YORK (AP) - A health agency announced Wednesday the formation of a network of five medical centers in the United States and Canada aimed at helping people who have, or suspect they have, hereditary diseases.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Judiciary Committee members jockeyed Wednesday over voting on the Supreme Court nomination of Judge G. Harrold Carswell, but GOP Leader Hugh Scott said he saw no signs of a filibuster by liberal Democrats.

Nixon to Give $359 Million To Stop Federal Pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon said Wednesday he is giving federal agencies three years and $359 million to stop polluting the air and water.

It already has been federal policy to conform with existing air and water quality standards, but Nixon said previous orders were "ambiguously worded, poorly enforced, and generally ineffective."

Nixon issued an executive order requiring all federal facilities - including "buildings, installations, structures, public works, equipment, aircraft, vessels, and other vehicles and property" - to complete or at least begin necessary pollution abatement actions by Dec. 31, 1972, at the latest.

Agency heads were ordered to send their plans for meeting that deadline to the Budget Bureau by next June 30.

Funds appropriated to clean up federal pollution may not be used for any other purpose, Nixon ordered.

Undersecretary of the Interior Russell E. Train, chairman-designate of the President's Environmental Quality Council, told newsmen the federal budget proposed Monday for fiscal 1971 included $92 million as the first segment of Nixon's $359 million program against federal pollution - $40 million from "reprograming" of Defense Department money and $52 million spread among the budgets of other agencies.

By comparison, Train said, the funds appropriated for federal pollution abatement in fiscal 1968, 1969, and 1970 together totaled $129 million and not all of that reached its goal.

Nixon said in a statement, "Over the past several years, the federal government has become one of the nation's worst polluters."

Train declined to estimate just how bad. Nationwide, he said, the federal contribution to air and water pollution might be a small fraction, "but in specific local situations it could be quite serious."

"The largest single agency involved will be the Defense Department," Train said.

GE Strikers Prepare For Return to Work

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some 100,000 General Electric Co. workers on strike for 101 days prepared to start returning to work Thursday after voting by a margin of nearly 3-1 to accept a new contract.

Voting had not been reported from the remaining 30,000 strikers.

"They'll start going back tomorrow, depending on local operations," said a spokesman for the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers, largest of the 13 unions with 78,000 members in the nationwide strike.

The independent United Electrical Workers representing some 16,000 workers also approved the contract and was expected to send its members back on the job. The American Flint Glass Workers accepted similar contract terms for its small unit in GE's Logan, Ohio plant, and an 80-member unit of Firemen and Oilers in Louisville, Ky., also voted approval.

AFL-CIO Sheet Metal Workers approved the settlement with GE's Hotpoint division in Chicago.

But the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists said it would recommend its 14,000 members in 34 GE plants reject the contract. There was no immediate report from the rest of the unions involved.

The contract would provide an estimated 61 to 82 cents an hour in pay raises over 40 months for most of the workers, depending on whether rising living costs triggered the full amount of cost-of-living pay in the agreement. Some workers, receiving up to 25 cents an hour more in special skills pay would get more.

Railroad Talks Go on No Breaks Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) - Railroad negotiations continued Wednesday with no sign of a break in the labor dispute that almost resulted in a nationwide rail shutdown last weekend.

"I wouldn't say we had any new ideas," said Asst. Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery, the Nixon administration's top troubleshooter in the dispute.

U Maine Administrator Supports Open Admission

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) - Dr. Archie Buffkins, the University of Maine's newest administrator, says he supports adoption of an open admissions policy.

A tax-supported state university, the 35-year-old executive assistant to Chancellor Donald R. McNeil said, "should accept all students who graduate from a high school in that state."

Dr. Buffkins, the first Negro administrator in the state university system, recently arrived here from Rhode Island College in Providence, where he was academic administrator and a member of the music faculty.

The civil rights activist has written to Maine's several hundred black families, offering his assistance in educational or community projects.

"I don't think any black professional man should have the luxury to golf or go fishing that a white man has," said Buffkins. 'His spare time he needs to spend working for the betterment of the black community."

A graduate of Jackson, Tenn. State College and Columbia University, Buffkins contends education should be "more sensitive to humanistic needs. I think there's something wrong with an educational system that trains skills, but not human values."

The education of both blacks and whites, he said, is the answer to the race problems.

"Maybe just my presence here will change the attitudes of some people toward blacks and other minorities."

He is a former participant in the initial sit-ins in the South and has taken part in civil rights marches and voter registration drives. He is chairman of the national Afro-American Higher Education Commission and a board member of several organizations promoting better race relations.

Maine, he said, could develop a model university system.

Subpoena of Reporters Notes Upsets New Media Sources

NEW YORK (AP) - Walter Cronkite said Wednesday that if the government is allowed to subpoena a reporter's notes or a network's unused film it would cause some news sources to stop talking to newsmen.

"What official is going to talk off the record when a reporter's notebook can be laid open in court?" asked Cronkite, a CBS newsman, who appeared in a panel discussion with Chet Huntley of NBC and Frank Reynolds of ABC.

The three newsmen, who appeared at a Newsmakers luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel sponsored by the International Radio and Television Society, said the news media must fight government efforts to subpoena such material.

Within the past week the Department of Justice has subpoenaed reporters' notes news film and other files from CBS, the New York Times, Life, Time and Newsweek magazines in an investigation of the Black Panther party and disturbances in volving the weatherman faction of the Students for a Democratic Society.

Environment Coalition to Meet Tonight

The first open meeting of the Coalition For Environmental Quality (CEQ) will occur this Thursday evening at 8 p.m. in Hasbrouck Room 20. The meeting is designed to organize students, faculty and community officials into a reliable organ of effective action to redress the imbalance of our environment.

Among the organizations already involved are the Action For a Quality Environment, MLK Social Action Council, Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, and an Amherst citizens group called Amherst Environmental Concerns Committee. It is expected that more groups will join and at a meeting Tuesday night organization plans were made with representativies of the five college community. At that meeting it was decided that a central co-ordinating office be established to disseminate information and avoid any duplication of energy.

As orginally conceived, the central focus of the ecology movement was supposed to be the Nation-Teach-In on April 22. This idea for the Teach-In was devised by Senator Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, who in the past has led many floor fights against DDT and pollution. But recently, feelings have run high against such an idea because it would be educational rather than action oriented and would involve only the college community and not the society at large. Channelling the energy of such a diverse group to such a specific day could also dissipate interest in the long run i.e. Moratorium.

What has resulted then, at least on this campus, has been the concept of developing action oriented programs such as preventing the future development of the internal combustion engine or mounting massive campaigns to return nondeposit bottles to local stores. This does not mean of course that April 22 will be ignored, the Coalition is still planning important activities for that day possibly the appearance of a well known ecologist.

Reading Improvement Will Begin February 10

Cong Celebrate New Year With Scattered Attacks

SAIGON (AP) - North Vietnamese infantrymen assaulted a remote U. S. fire base north of Saigon Wednesday, then regrouped and attacked an American patrol sweeping the perimeter.

But the enemy fared badly, losing 43 men killed in a barrage of machine-gun and recoilless rifle fire from the base and a bombardment by artillery, helicopter gunships and fighterbombers, field reports said. Four Americans were reported killed and three wounded.

The fighting came on the eve of a four-day cease-fire proclaimed by the Viet Cong in observance of Tet, the lunar new year, Friday. The enemy standdown will begin at 7 a.m. Thursday. The South Vietnamese government has declared a 24-hour cease-fire starting at 6 p.m. the same day.

Field reports said about two platoons of North Vietnamese attacked Fire Base Tina, 65 miles northwest of Saigon and four miles from the Cambodian border, with rockets, grenades and automatic weapons just before dawn.

A ground assault was thrown back with five enemy killed, reports said.

A patrol of U. S. air cavalrymen sent to sweep the surrounding jungles after daybreak ran into an enemy company and retreated to the fire base. U. S. fighterbombers, helicopters and artillery pounded the enemy positions while the camp's defenders raked the jungle tree line.

The action broke off at noon. American patrols re-entered the jungles, where they found the bodies of 38 North Vietnamese - most of them killed by fire from the outpost.

The patrols also reported finding 140 pounds of plastic explosive nearly 200 grenades, 80 mortar rounds, two light machine guns and more than 20 assault rifles.

Elsewhere, only scattered fighting was reported throughout South Vietnam.

In the latest in a rash of attacks in the Saigon area, the Viet Cong fired rocket grenades Wednesday evening at a police patrol boat about a mile and a half from the docks. None of the crew was hurt but the boat was badly damaged.

U. S. troops based in the Saigon region were ordered to keep out of the capital during Tet except when on official business so as not to risk exposure to terrorists or interfere with Vietnamese holiday celebrations.

It was during Tet of 1968 that the enemy broke its own cease-fire to launch its biggest offensive of the war. The attacks caught South Vietnamese forces off guard. Fifty per cent were on holiday leave.

During Tet of 1969, the enemy followed up a seven-day ceasefire with a 36-day offensive. But this time government forces were on full alert.

Lunar New Year Arrives, Tension, Not War, Predicted

(AP) - The Year of the Dog arrives at midnight Thursday and one asian educator explains that according to Chinese mythology and astrology it will be a year of continued international tensions but not of a major war.

"Since the dog is a loyal animal, it is a year for the United States to cultivate international friendships among her allies," Dr. John B. Tsu, director of Asian Studies at Seton hall University, South Orange, N. J., said.

"By its nature, the dog is a defensive, guarding animal, not an aggressive one," Tsu added.

This lunar new year, determined by the lunar calendar rather than the solar calendar, comes again at a time when the United States is involved in war in Vietnam.

By the lunar calendar, The Year of the Dog is 4668. The calendar goes back to the time of the legendary ruler known as the Yellow Emperor, the first king of China.

Tsu said there are 12 animals assigned by the Chinese to each year in turn. The animals are the rat, ox, tiger, hare, dragon, serpent, horse, ram, monkey, rooster, dog and boar.

"The dog symbolizes loyalty and honesty," Tsu said. "It is also very conscientious and dedicated."

He said that in the United States, Chinese New Year is celebrated for three days - Thursday to Saturday this year. But in Formosa and parts of mainland China, the celebration lasts two weeks.

Since the 1966 cultural revolution in Red China, the new year has not been celebrated to a great extent. One objective of the revolution was to do away with the old traditions.

The Vietnamese people have been celebrating lunar new year, Tet, for centuries. In 1968, the Tet was the occasion for a bloody Viet Cong offensive in Saigon and other cities.

The Chinese mark the new year with dragon parades, lion dances, the exchanging of gifts and feasting upon sumptuous, traditional delicacies.

New Year's Eve, Thursday, is the day when Chinese traditionally pay all debts

Mrs. Nixon Goes Girl Scout Green

NEW YORK (AP) - Mrs. Richard M. Nixon donned a green, knee-skimming Girl Scout leader's uniform Wednesday, hugged two Brownie Scouts and told national scout leaders, "You can count on me to be an active volunteer."

The Board of Directors of the 4 million-member Girl Scouts of the United States of America installed the First Lady as their honorary president.

An honor guard of shivering, goose-pimpled Girl Scouts braved below freezing temperatures to give the First Lady a warm welcome as she stepped from her car.

Chinese Club to Show Movie Friday

The Chinese Student Association of the University will present THE BEAUTIFUL DUCKLING in the Student Union Ballroom Friday February 6. The first Chinese feature film ever to be shown at the University of Massachusetts, the film won three awards at the 1965 Asian Film Festival, and has been acclaimed for its "Unusual Sensitivity to the rhythm and continuity of Chinese rural life." The plot involves the blackmail of a farmer. The film will be shown at 3:00, 5:30, and 9:00 p.m. It runs two hours and has English subtitles. Admission will be $.50.

The Chinese Club will use any money it clears from the film for supporting its many and varied programs. With a membership of over 150 students, the club is the largest foreign student club on campus. Among the various events it has organized so far this year were a social dance in November and China Night in December.

More than 300 students, faculty and friends of the club attended China Night, dining on Peking sweet and sour pork, shrimp with water chestnuts and other Chinese gustatorial delicacies, and watched the fashion show, movie and talent show comprising the program.

The president of the Chinese Club, Mr. K. Baba Tung, when interviewed about the club's activities, emphasized that many of them are free and most are open to the entire University, not just the club members. For example, the club will sponsor a dance and party at the Wesley Methodist Church, 235 North Pleasant Street, Saturday from 8:00 to midnight February 7.

A large share of the funds of the club are for programs to assist newly arriving Chinese students on campus. The film showing on Friday, February 6 will receive support from the special fund allocated to the International Programs Office by the Student Senate to encourage international education activities on campus.

Principal Bans Two UMass Students From Speaking to High School Class

Two students from UMass who had been invited to speak to a Belchertown High School class on Social Problems became part of the course's problems themselves.

Carl Brown and Gil Salk had been invited by Belchertown High School teacher Al Campbell to speak to his classes on the topics of black power and student activism. They were to speak at the high school today and tomorrow.

Yesterday, Campbell called Salk and informed him the school principal had decided to refuse to allow outside speakers to address classes in the school.

Salk stated to the Collegian, that he considers this to be a violation of his freedom to speak, and an even more serious violation of academic freedom.

According to Salk, Campbell said he would try to bring his classes to UMass so that they would be able to hear the talks they were not allowed to hear in their own classroom.

Woman Courriers Arrested With Tet Offensive Plans

In January at least a dozen communication-liaison agents, most of them women, were picked up at check points leading into the city. They were found to have forged I. D. cards. One woman had top secret messages crammed inside a tube of toothpaste. Others had messages stuffed behind the glass of hand mirrors.

The documents carried the same messages: Instructions to various members of the 200-300 Viet Cong cadre group inside Saigon to prepare arms and food caches, and safe houses, for "the coming offensives."

Police officials believe they have forced the Viet Cong off balance inside Saigon, but admit the threat is real.

Police would offer no estimates on the number of armed Viet Cong terrorists and sappers they believe are now in Saigon. But the rash of bombings and assassinations within the city in recent days is attributed to these operatives. More are expected during Tet.

Balls Bagged and Mailed

RUTLAND, Vt. (AP) - Two hundred snowballs, carefully hand rolled and wrapped in plastic bags, are on route to Florida, sent by a group of Vermont first graders to some children who've never seen snow before and want to have a snowball flight.

"Operation Snowball" began when children from the Sabal Elementary School in Melbourne, Fla., aided by school officials, wrote the Rutland, Vt., Chamber of Commerce, suggesting a trade: snowballs for citrus fruits.

Clifford Barnes, director of the chamber, arranged to have the children from the first grades in Longfellow, Dana, Northeast and Northwest schools make the snowballs.

Barnes took the children to an open area Monday for "clean fresh snow" and each child made one snowball. They were individually wrapped in plastic bags, then put in dry ice. A local dairy supplied the bags and ice.

Wednesday, the snowballs were put on a Northern Airlines plane for New York City and transfered to an Eastern Air Lines plane to Florida.

The 166 first graders in Melbourne are planning a snowball fight Thursday morning.

Nixon Replies to Soviets Concerning Mid-East Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon replied Wednesday to a week end note from Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin concerning the Arab-Israeli conflict, the White House announced.

The reply was handed to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin by Assistant Secretary of State Joseph J. Sisco at an afternoon meeting at the State Department.

The White House would give no information immediately on the contents of Nixon's official reply to the Soviet leader's message. But press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said there might be some information "perhaps tomorrow" from the State Department.

Contents of Kosygin's message also have not been made public.

Ziegler said that, following normal procedure, information regarding Nixon's reply was being given to the British and French governments. He said they also had been advised when the United States received the Soviet note.

The Big Four powers have been engaged in efforts to seek some solution in the Middle East through the United Nations.

Students Study Student Power

. Today's Action Course on the subject of student rights - student power will closely parallel a movement growing to major proportions on this campus. The Student Senate Public Relations Committee and Gil Salk of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council are working on the issue raised by the increases in room rents and Student Union fees, and the method of selection the new Chancellor and President of the University. It has been alleged that there was no significant consultation with the general student body on these questions by the Board of Trustees or by Treasurer Kenneth Johnson before the decisions were made.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council was expected to consider forming a committee to deal with these and related matters of student rights at last night's Steering Committee meeting.

The Action Course will spend time investigating Student rights and student power over a broad range of issues, then try to determine and carry out an action aimed at increasing student power. The specific course of study and action will be determined solely by the participants in the course. It will meet from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m. each Thursday in Room 320 South College. A non-credit, basically student-run course, enrollment is open to the entire campus community.

The Senate Public Relations Committee is planning an Open Meeting to be held in the Student Union Ballroom on Thursday, Feb. 12 at 1:30 to discuss ways of getting significant student participation in the decision-making processes of the University. The program will be open-ended. Speakers will include Carl Brown, editor of the Drum, Glenn Elters, Vice President of the Student Senate, Geoffrey Levine of the Student Senate Public Relations Committee, Cindi Olken, President of the Student Senate and student representative on the Board of Trustees, and Gil Salk of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council. Also invited to speak are Kenneth Johnson, Treasurer of the University, and Oswald Tippo, Provost and the man who, at this time, seems likely to be appointed to the Chancellor's post by the Board.

Polish Violinist Performs Bach and Beethoven Pieces

Henryk Szeryng, the noted Polish-born violin virtuoso, will perform two programs in Bowker Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst during his forthcoming visit.

Sunday evening, Feb. 8, Mr. Szeryng will perform the Sonata in E Flat Major, Opus 12, No. 3 by Beethoven, commemorating the current Beethoven Bicentennial year. Also scheduled for performance is Bach's Sonata No. 1 in G Minor for Unaccompanied Violin; Scherzo from Brahms' "Sonatensatz" and Sonata in G Minor by Debussey as well as short works by Julian Carrillo and Maurice Ravel.

Divorces Up In Year of Dog

The Year of the Dog arrives Thursday. According to Chinese mythology and astrology it will be a year of continued tensions but there will be no major war.

The number of divorces has risen sharply in some California counties since the state's new law on marital splits took effect Jan. 1.

A TIME FOR ACTION

River on Fire?

The question of environmental pollution has been brought up considerably as of late. Yet it is doubtful that many typical, apathetic UMass. students really have any idea of the magnitude of the crisis we will face in this decade. Right now it would appear that this campus' awareness, level of involvement, and activism in this area has been rather low. The time to reverse this trend has come or we and our children will suffer the consequences of our apathy.

Tonight at 8 p.m. in Hasbrouck 20 there will be a mass meeting for those who are concerned enough to become involved with the Environmental Teach-in April 22nd. To be decided are the local issues to be concentrated upon as well as the more important ones our society faces.

There are certain local issues that shouldn't be neglected. Among these is the pollution of the Connecticut River. How much longer will untreated industrial and human wastes be dumped into that river? Must the Connecticut rival the Cuyhuga River as one of the nation's great fire hazards? Last summer the latter blazed twice because of so much pollution!

The extent our planet has been polluted is incredulous. One could tell of man's environmental atrocities against himself for days. The time for action has come. Let tonight's meeting be a fruitful and hopeful beginning.

The Wall Street Genius

WASHINGTON - The Stock Market has not been doing too well these days and quite a few people are suffering because of it. But no one is taking it as hard as Junior Thompson, who was known on the street as the "Boy Wonder of Wall" or 'B WOW."

As you recall, 18 months ago when Junior Thompson was 13 years old, he was considered one of the great financial geniuses of the country. With an investment of 25 cents, plus a loan from his sister of 50 cents, Junior Thompson built up a portfolio of $200 million on paper.

Fortune devoted its entire Easter issue to Junior: Life magazine put hi m on the cover; the Harvard School of Business made him a visiting professor. He was made adviser to the council on economic affairs, and he had a hot line direct to the secretary of the treasury.

Junior Thompson's formula for making money was summed up in an interview he gave to the Wall Street Journal. "I select stocks that go up, and I sell stocks that go down." When asked how he knew which stocks would go up and which stocks would go down he replied, "If you have to ask that question, you shouldn't play the Stock Market."

After the interview, large institutions all over the country fired their investors and asked Junior Thompson to take ove r their accounts. Insurance companies, foundations, mutual funds, trusts, banks and even the federal government asked, begged and pleaded for Junior to invest for them.

Before long, Junior was not only responsible for his own personal fortune but he was investing $20 billion of other people's money. Each month the investments rose by 15%, and his clients were delirious. Men who had been in Wall Street all their lives were scorned. Many were retired and pushed out because they kept talking about "earnings," "profits" and "losses": the three things which Junior Thompson said must be ignored when playing the market.

Other investment houses hired teen-agers as their answer to Junior Thompson. The word was out on the "Street": "Don't let anyone over 21 invest your money."

Not all the teen-agers did as well as Junior for the simple reason that they didn't have his know-how.

This is how he selected his stocks. Every morning, Junior blindfolded his sister and gave her a pin. He then laid out the financial section of the New York times on the floor and he told her to stick the pin 10 times into the page. Whatever company she stuck the pin in was Junior Thompson's buy for that day. While the market was going up, Junior's sister could do no wrong.

But when it started going down, Wall Street's faith in Junior Thompson began to waver. Junior tried everything to stem the tide. He changed blindfolds on his sister. He gave her a different pin.

Nothing helped. The market kept losing ground and Junior Thompson's reputation as a financial wizard began to be questioned. The great institutions started pulling out; the mutual funds took their business away from Junior. In six months, Junior Thompson was handling only the investments of himself and his sister.

Last week, as the market hit its lowest moment in years, Junior Thompson was completely wiped out. A small item on the Dow Jones ticker announced that he was giving up Wall Street and going back to Forest Hills High School. His sister is suing him for the 50 cents she loaned him to get started in the business.

Rhetoric. Forgotten Issues

Recent controversy has revolved around the issue of the establishment of a black literary publication as part of the RSO program of student publications. It should be obvious to most daily readers of this less than austere publication that the majority of the arguments both pro and con have been on a base and seemingly assinine level.

On the one hand the proponents of the proposed publication cite worn out examples of historical and current racism and the supposed irrelevance of the already established student media (also a quite worn gripe) as the basis for their "demand" (another rather worn and frayed very). And on the other hand, the proposal's opponents cite lack of funds (an all too common addage and often easy way out of a minor controversy) and the readily available student publications already established for such purposes.

So, in a sentence we have seen a hell of a lot of negative reasons on both sides of the controversy and very little if, in fact, any positive reasons why such a proposed publication should, in fact, be added to the already quite extensive list of established student publications. Thusly, in two words the issue here is "need" and "merit".

On the question of need the issue is, "has this campus reached the stage where a significant percentage of this community feel that they are, in fact, NOT represented in the existing community media and if so, who or what, in essence, is at fault for this lack of representation, coverage, or whatever you want to call it?" And then upon answering this question, the next question should be, "Does the need "merit" the establishment of a new student publication to, in effect, "fill the void" left by the already established publications?"

Therefore, both sides seemingly have a bit of soul searching to do before any real action can be taken. If, in fact, those students behind this pro posal do see a definite deficit in total student media coverage of the entire community here and having exhausted all avenues of remedying this situation within the existing student publications, see an addition, then it would seem that an addition introduced via a soundly structured and rational formal proposal to the Student Communications Board after which with the endorsement of same, the matter should be taken up in the senate chambers would be the sensible course pursued.

Right always requires merit; the antithesis of which is irrational and soft based demand and rejection. The road to this controversy's resolvement requires more than simple demand and just as simple rejection. It requires solid based facts and evidence enveloped in a sound and well strung proposal which establishes need and merit; which in turn must elicit thorough and honest viewing and consideration. And, as of yet, these essential elements have been discarded never used and replaced by tit for tat rounds of childish misbehavior resulting in what this writer would surmise is nothing more than ego gratification for both well intentioned sides.

The Country is In Trouble

To the editor:

Miss Adrienne Shanler presents herself as speaking for a silent majority. This if true is doubly unfortunate because if the intemperate, mytopic, abusive and ignorant views expressed by Miss Shanler do in fact represent those of a majority then the country is in serious trouble. In fact the only attractive quality attributable to such a majority is their "silence", and Miss Shanler has violated that.

But to speak to the issues. Brother Brown's position is very clear and simple. The student senate - predominantly white and middle class does spend some $12,000 collected from black students each year. The blacks have absolutely no choice about paying these fees, and no voice in their disbursement. These funds - along with the rest of the senate budget - are spent in frivilous, wasteful and - in the light of the real and pressing needs of numerous black people in this country - criminally useless ways. These are facts that Miss Shanler would deny.

The case of Mrs. Delee is perfect. Mrs. Delee came to this campus as the representative of a community of black and Indian people in South Carolina. This community was facing oppression by the courts, the police apparatus, and the economic forces of that county simply because they insisted on equal educational opportunities for their children. As a consequence of being fired from their jobs, thrown off of welfare and evicted from their farms they were in some cases facing starvation. The black students on this campus took up a collection to aid these people but the amount raised was hardly enough to alleviate the suffering. They came to the student senate precisely because we felt that they had no right to use the fees extorted from black students for pep rallies, bonfires, and homecoming festivities when our brothers IN THIS COUNTRY are in fact facing starvation and imprisonment, and not only that, facing them as a consequence of Miss Shanler's cousins and brothers in South Carolina. Let us remember that, these people were not suffering as a consequence of a flood, or fire, or natural disaster. They were suffering AS A CONSEQUENCE OF WHITE FOLKS OPPRESSION AND INHUMANITY. So that for some arrogant, supercilious, condescending and totally illegitimate group of white students - calling themselves a senate - to sit there and tell us that OUR money had been already appropriated for any number of irrelevant "student" activities and there was no money to help the people in Dorchester County is totally unacceptable.

The same thing is true in the Drum issue. There is no white publication on this campus that has the same concerns and goals that the black community has. The whites on this campus are not interested in the problems (inflicted by white folks) that face the black community. That's their business, and we are not about to try to convert them. They are welcome to do what they want, but not with money extorted from us. See, Miss Shanler, while you are jacking off on your fantasies, OUR PEOPLE ARE STARVING. And we, this young black generation, are the only people who are going to do anything about it. So we want our money to spend on things that we, not a group of ignorant and arrogant young whites, think are important.

The other thing that you do not seem to understand is that on questions that have to do with the survival of our people - from the oppression of your people - we damn sure don't need your advice. And we are not about to come in begging and pleading for your understanding and charity WITH OUR MONEY. Your incredible arrogance and smugness is matched only by your stupidity. Understand this, and understand it well. If the student senate insists on collecting fees from the blacks then we shall say how that money is spent, and it damn sure won't be for bonfires and beer parties. And we are not begging or requesting, we are TELLING you.

We are not intimidated and threatened by your references to "intensifying the hatred of the majority", the hatred of white folks is something that all nonwhite people have had to live with. You and the rest of the majority can hate all you want to, what YOU WILL NOT DO is mess over the rights and lives and MONEY of black folks any more. And the reason you and your majority won't do it, is not because you have become any more decent, humane, or reasonable, but because we simply ARE NOT GOING TO LET YOU. And to stop you we are prepared to use any means necessary. As long as you understand that there can indeed be peace. As long as you insist on forcing your values (if that's the right word) priorities and paternalism on black people, then there can be no peace. Sorry y'awl don't like militance, but better learn to live with it cause there ain't too many humble, shuffling blacks around anymore.

The Really Important News

To The Editor:

Some students are busy on week-ends and do not have the opportunity to read the Sunday NEW YORK TIMES. For that reason, allow me to call attention to the article describing the impact which the recent Presidential veto, sustained by Congress, will have on the United States Government's program for direct loans to students. The H.E.W. budget included $229 million for this purpose.

Mr. Edward Sanders, Vice-President of The College Entrance Examination Board is quoted as saying: "We estimate there will be tens of thousands of students who will not be able to return to the classroom for the second semester."

Evidently President Nixon, in his personally explained veto of the measure, did not consider this implication of sufficient importance even to mention. But then, in comparison with really important news, it may not matter so very much after all. The swearing-in of Mr. DavidEisenhower into the Naval Reserve rated a page one story and picture; the story noted here received a few inches at the bottom of page 58!

Those of you affected by this action should not forget to write and thank your Congressman - and your President.

Doesn't Make It

Utter Astonishment?

To the editor:

My first reaction to the proposed student room rent hike from $450 to $650 per year was one of utter astonishment and anger. This amounts to approximately $84 per month. Not bad you say? Well, when you consider the fact that the University will receive approximately $160 per month for the corner room (Southwest Tower) in which my roommate and I now live, but will fortunately relegate to some unsuspecting and very cold (at least on winter mornings - the walls are metal, like a jail cell) freshmen next year. That $160 isn't bad for a 13 x 10-1/2 foot room, is it? I might add that the L-shapes are no bargain either.

When I read Mr. Nixon's er . . . Fitzpatrick's statements in today's (Tues.) Collegian, I almost blew my lunch, which most of us know, wasn't worth keeping down anyway. He asked students to avoid confronting the administration. He pleaded to "avoid confronting situations" because of the "scar" they leave on the University Community.

Well, I'm not a member of the silent majority or noisy minority or any other kind of crap, but it would be difficult not to say anything at all. They will probably tell me to "love the dorms or leave them", and I would, but off-campus rent will rise again. (Tent city here I come.)

I'm sure there are other ways of raising money. What seems funny to me is that if the University doesn't get money from the legislature, they just smile, turn around and see the students waiting to pay another $200 a year. My number one suggestion would be to stop admitting so many extra students each year. Maybe if they hadn't done that I wouldn't have been accepted . . . Maybe that's better than being overcrowded and overbilled.

To the editor:

Hasn't the field of Home Economics advanced ANY in the past 20 years? Yesterday I glanced at what is referred to as the "Rainbow" courses of studies. It says on page one that it "emphasizes a liberal education in the sciences, arts and humanities with specialized instruction as preparation for professional careers." I imagine my shock, when on examining the required courses of study, I found that here in this huge university, these course requirements are more restricting, stagnate and narrow than my course requirements were 20 years ago from a small college.

If the Home Economics Dept of the U of M has as its aim producing teachers such as portrayed in "The High School" it is obtaining its goal. Some of the teachers are alive, vital, progressive and challenging. Unfortunately this covey doesn't make a flock.

Which One is the Paulist?

It's easy to tell a Paulist. Just talk with him.

The first thing you notice is that he's contemporary. He lives today, but plans tomorrow with the experience and knowledge of yesterday. That's a Paulist characteristic: the ability to move with the times and to meet the challenges of each era.

A Paulist is also the mediator of his age: he tries to bring together the extremes in today's world and the Church, the liberals and the moderates, the eternal and the temporal.

Next, he is very much an individual. It sets him apart immediately. He has his own particular talents and abilities — and he is given freedom to use them.

If you are interested in finding out more about the Paulist difference in the priesthood, ask for our brochure and a copy of our recent Renewal Chapter Guidelines.

"If One of Mankind is Oppressed We are All Oppressed"

Editor's Note: The following is a speech given by Robyn Chandler, editor of THE DRUM, on December 16, 1969. It was presented at the Student Senate meeting for the purpose of appropriating funds for the black literary experience so that some effective means of communication might be initiated at the University of Massachusetts. The objectives of THE DRUM are twofold.
#1 To provide a sounding board for black students so that they might portray their creative spontaneity, and
#2 To provide a serviceable means of education for the white community.

Those of us who have been dehumanized are regretably aware that colonization has the unfortunate tendency of making its victims hate themselves and not the common adversary. This self-hate psyche must be undone; it must be de-emphasized. We are also aware that any endeavor that has been undertaken for the liberation of the spirit of mankind has been preceeded by careful analysis of the situation. And analysis is the most difficult part of any prospectus.

The University of Massachusetts is not even a mediocre institution, and as the Student Senate, I'm told, constitutes a viable portion of the university it is therefore your moral and functional obligation to recognize the urgency of revolutionizing cooperation and hear the voice of the people.

Present institutions of higher learning have no relevance to the black community here or anywhere. Where has the contradiction come from which allows blacks to be acculturated into a society which debilitates black people shamefully?

Where is the freedom to create values, life styles, and norms which can be perpetuated towards revolutionary unity?

How is it that our educational apparatus also has developed technological robots, instead of human beings with an ever-expanding perspective?

Contradictions must be heightened in order to awaken the stagnant and restrictive mentalities. There must be definition of the political structure and mechanics of the student senate. If it has ceased to function responsibly to black students, then it shall not be permitted to address itself to the needs of ANY students.

In order to launch a distinctively powerful, eloquent, and educational literary experience we need large sums of money. No doubt you will lay good excuses for your negligence in dealing justly with not only THE DRUM but all black issues. You will remind us of our ignorance of the paraphernalia of parliamentary procedure and political processes. You will rub our noses in it when we host yet another complaint against white injustice or raise the spectre of Dorchester County. We will feel quite defenseless when you remind us that a projected budget should have been presented at the beginning of the academic year, and that in the meantime you were busy allocating funds to "priority" cases (?) such as the Flying Redman and Moratorium committees, etc. Let me tell you the real priority, the real battleground is here in this room tonight. No doubt you will have excuses for us, but will you have a good excuse for yourself? You MUST go beyond a dialogue of excuses to be a dialogue of committment.

If one of mankind is oppressed we are all oppressed!

The apathy and misdirection which pervades this campus also engulfs the student senate. We are not here solely for the sake of criticism, but rather to offer the financing of THE DRUM with $2100 as yet the only one way of responding to a stimulus. This is our alternative. By your failure to respond to the humanitarian and political needs of black students you are re-affirming your illegitimacy in functioning as a representative body.

Blacks here (and everywhere) are not producers; we are conspicuous consumers. Something is amiss! It is every night that blacks retire with, not a silent prayer, but rather a relentless pledge for the fruition of blackness, for the triumph of nationhood, and the building of a better people and a better world.

We here must now pledge our total devotion, total resources, and total power of our mortal lives. Some of you may not be able to comprehend the spirit of sacrifice and labour and total surrender which does into the making of a resolution. White folks have the luxury to decide whether or not they want a revolution; blacks don't. WE ARE FIGHTING FOR OUR HUMANITY. The minority complex created by whites can only be broken down by internationalizing the concept, thus reversing the tables and placing whites in a minority position. There is unequivocably no doubt that a black man placed in the white world could hustle the tools of survival; but could any one of you here tonight survive in the black ghetto?

This is what we mean by education and sensitivity of white folks to the black condition.

This is no longer a concept that can be ignored. With a reversal of roles, one can more clearly envision the game of Dominoes being enacted here: one can see the full-time employees of the imperialist machinery at work, for the oppressor HAS all the propaganda machinery. "Calm down" he says, "who says things aren't changing?"

Compromise? NEVER!!

Blacks are living "hand-in-mouth" on the little which white capitalists "donate" to check the rising tide of revolutions now sweeping across the colonized and neo-colonized lands.

Participation is merely tokenism, with the idea of providing yourself with "research material", and to avoid the embarassment of being excluded from the movement of "liberal peace movements" now in vogue.

If it is our job to bring the case of THE DRUM before the public so that its immediate continuation might be reassured in an atmosphere unpoisoned by rascist hysteria, then we will drive towards that goal. And you are either with us wholeheartedly, or you are against us.

I am therefore offering you THE DRUM as an alternative and as a test of your sincerity and understanding, in terms of dealing directly with the apparent and representative issues of blackness here at the University of Massachusetts.

I am offering you the chance to scrutinize the fraudulous priorities with which you have been dealing recently in your present status quo.

I am offering the suggestion that if the student senate has not, and yet will not, deal with that determined branch of the student community - that is, blacks, then I suggest that you have no right or privilege to deal on further issues here tonight, or on any issues in the future. Thus will you cease to function as a representative of the people.

Hard and bitter times are awaiting us. Beware of the inconsistencies manifesting themselves. Enslavement of the body and mind is the antagonistic force in your government (campus and national). "It is a curse to the earth that supports it; and yet you cling to it as if it were the very sheet anchor of all your hopes."

If the liberty of any one faction of the people is massacred, then your government will be buried along with it.

Let us come together to rectify the paraphernalia of inept institutions and bring this monster to its knees!

Med Centers Combine To Fight Genetic Ills

NEW YORK (AP) - A health agency announced Wednesday the formation of a network of five medical centers in the United States and Canada aimed at helping people who have, or suspect that they have, hereditary diseases.

The various centers, according to the plan, will be able to call on one another for help, advice and tests on the genetic diseases they each specialize in, before diagnosing conditions and giving treatment.

A center, for example, may be able to tell parents carrying faulty genes their chances of having a normal chiod.

In some cases, diagnosis of genetic damage while a fetus is still in the womb, could lead to a therapeutic abortion where that is legal.

In other cases, detecting a hereditary disease soon after birth may allow physicians to minimize damage to the infant.

The formation of the network was announced by the National Foundation for Genetics and Neuromuscular Diseases, a voluntary nonprofit health agency.

Dr. George W. Melcher Jr., president of the foundation and of Group Health Insurance of New York, told a news conference at the Overseas Press Club that he believes 20 per cent of all childhood deaths in hospitals are caused by genetic diseases.

Dr. Melcher and Dr. Arthur G. Steinberg, chairman of the foundation's medical advisory board and professor at Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland listed these first units in the network:

Cornell University Medical College in New York City; Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, Md.; the University of California, San Diego School of Medicine, La Jolla, Calif.; McGill University Faculty of Medicine, Montreal, Canada; and the City of Hope Medical Center in Duarte, Calif.

Bologna Summer Program Applications Available

This year, for the first time in its five-year history, it appears that the University's Bologna Summer School Session will have more students from other institutions than from the University of Massachusetts, according to Professor Howard H. Quint, Director of the Program. Professor Quint explains that the reputation of the Program is now well established among colleges and universities throughout the country and is proving highly attractive to students in the Humanistic disciplines, particularly those relating to the culture of Italy. Professor Quint said that the Program will probably enroll sixty-five to seventy students, the great majority of whom will be undergraduates.

Faculty includes Professor James Beck, a specialist in the Bologna School of Renaissance Art from Columbia University; and three members of the University of Massachusetts faculty: Professor Philip Bezanson head of the Music Department; Professor Louis Greenbaum, authority in the history of the 17th and 18th centuries; and Professor Anthony Terrizzi, of the Italian Department. The curriculum will feature courses in Renaissance art, the History of the Baroque, Italian music and elementary Italian. Professor Quint emphasized that the Bologna Program is the only one sponsored by the University which is not based on the study of a single discipline or language, something which gives it its special sense of uniqueness among UMass foreign programs and one to which all students from the various colleges of the University are welcomed.

The teaching week extends from Monday through Thursday and week ends are usually given over to field trips to major centers of Italian culture such as Florence, Ravenna, Siena, Pisa, SanGimignano, Venice, Rome, and Assissi.

The academic program ends on August 9 and students are free to travel in Europe until August 30 when they will return to the United States by charter jet. The group departs from Boston by Pan American charter jet on June 18. The final date for applicatons to the Bologna Program is March 1, although Professor Quint has indicated that, as of now, the Program has almost its full compliment of students. Those who still may be interested in applying should do so at once. Late registrants will be placed on a waiting list.

For information students should contact either Professor Quint, Herter Hall 638, or the Program's secretary, Miss Patricia Wilkey, Herter Hall, 612.

Civil Service Announces New Intern Program

The U. S. Civil Service Commission has sent the University a notice of a new summer program to begin in 1970, the Washington Summer Intern Program.

This program will provide students with practical experience in the area of their career interests and will in addition allow the government to elicit the thinking of young employees. All four-year colleges and universities are being asked to submit nominations for the 400 opening s available. UMass/Amherst may make four nominations.

Intern positions are related to administrative, professional, or technical career fields for which a college degree is the usual means of qualifying at the entrance level. Nominees must have completed at least 60 semester hours by June 1970 or be a current graduate student. Undergraduate nominees must have a grade point average of 3.5 or better. Graduate nominees must be in the upper half of their class. Suggested criteria in addition included demonstrated leadership ability other honors and awards, and career goals and interests. Nominations must be sent to Washington by February 28, and notifications will be sent out by April 30th.

STILL SOME SENIORS WITHOUT A FUTURE

If you are a senior and haven't yet had or signed up for your senior photo, come to the INDEX Office, S.U. this week (Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) and reserve your place in the 1970 INDEX. This is the last week!!

Sullivan Still Discourages Offers To Move Pats Out of Boston

BOSTON (AP) - Bill Sullivan, president of the homeless Boston Patriots, says the club generally is discouraging applications for transfer of the pro football franchise until all efforts to remain in Boston are exhausted.

Sullivan made the comment after meeting for about an hour in his office with Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida, who would like the Patriots to move to his state.

Sullivan, who has headed the Patriots since he helped found the club as a charter member of the American Football League, met with Kirk between phone calls and telegrams which have swamped his office since Monday.

Several cities in the United States along with Toronto and Montreal are seeking the Boston franchise, which was left without a suitable home playing site Monday when Harvard re-affirmed an earlier decision against leasing the university's stadium for seven games.

"In general, we have discouraged any applications for franchises because we feel that until we have made every effort here we shouldn't encourage anybody to go on any wild goose chase," Sullivan said.

He noted that the Patriots' board voted unanimously at its last meeting not to move. However, he added, "sometime before our next league meeting next month, we'll have to talk to interested cities."

Sullivan has said repeatedly that while the Patriots do not want to move, as a publicly owned corporation, it owes it to stockholders to talk to anyone who wants to secure the franchise.

Sullivan said he met with Kirk at the latter's request because "I feel the governor of a state was a little bit different than some of the gentlemen contacting us about franchise possibilities."

"You certainly accord him the dignity of his office," said Sullivan.

Under terms of the American Football League's merger with the National Football League this year, each club must have a stadium with a 50,000 - seat capacity.

Harvard has the only stadium which would meet that standard.

Sullivan is hoping that some plan can be finalized before March 15

MANY SENIORS FEAR JUNE DRAFT CALL

Many members of the class of 1970 are already beginning to worry about being drafted into military service after graduation this June. Some have planned ventures to the north to visit Canadian friends.

There is a very good chance that you will lose contact with a good many of your classmates in the years ahead. If you are pictured in the 1970 INDEX you will be remembered.

If you are a senior and haven't yet had or signed up for your senior photo, come to the INDEX Office, S.U. this week (Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) and sign up for your picture.

Hoop Players and Fans Denied Favorite Win

For the seventh straight time UMass basketball players and fans were denied the victory they would most like to savor, one over B.C. A 48-point second half by the Eagles wiped out an early 13-point Redman lead, and paved the way for an 83-76 win.

"We played dumb." This was the post-game analysis of UMass coach Jack Leaman. "A lot of times we had three-on-two's, and couldn't capitalize," he added. Not only did the Redmen fail to convert on the overloads, but they also turned the ball over 15 times.

One of the more interesting facets of the game was the difference in the schedules of the two teams. B.C.'s big time schedule seems to prepare it better for games with the likes of UMass, than does UMass' meetings with the likes of Vermont and Iona prepare it for B.C. In horse racing they'd say, "UMass moves up in class," when it plays B.C. The class jump was too much on Tuesday.

Leaman is on a committee with B.U.'s Charlie Luce, Northeastern's Dick Dukeshire, and Providence's Dave Gavitt. The quartet is looking into the possibility of holding such a tournament. Right now it looks very doubtful for this year, but the four still hold hope.

Leaman explained, "We're thinking in terms of a four-team tournament that could be held in a place like Worcester." Of the 16 teams, four, Brown, Dartmouth, Harvard, and Yale are in the Ivy League, and are assured of an NCAA berth should they win their league. Three Yankee Conferences, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, are university division in name only, and have never won a Conference title.

This leaves nine teams: UMass, UConn, URI, Providence, Fairfield, B.C., B.U., Northeastern, and Holy Cross. An alternate suggestion could be having an eight team affair on the lines of the ECAC hockey tournament with the four top seeds hosting the first night, and the semis and finals moving to a central location.

Boston would be put as a tourney site. Not only do they fail to know if a basketball is blown up or stuffed in the Hub, and interest would not be overwhelming, but the only decent place, the Garden, is committed to high school tournaments in early March. Springfield, Providence and Amherst all have areas proposed, as of yet unbuilt, that would be perfect hosts on an alternating basis, upon their completion.

BITS 'PIECES - Julius Erving had an 'average' night, 26 points and 20 rebounds. For anyone else in New England, a performance like that would have been sensational. Ray Ellerbrook suffered his poorest shooting night in years, 2 for 13.

Leaman was delighted with the large group of UMass supporters that made the trip on a miserable night. "That," he enthused, "was the first time we've had a super crowd on the road since Ive been here." He added, "I only hope our students don't quit on us because we lost." The students won't quit on the team because the Redmen didn't quit on the court.

In the spirit that this fish-wrapper reported the attempt to get Henry Willmore last year, we'd like to tell of a certain young fellow that's due to visit this week end for coach Vic Fusia. His name is Eric Torkelson, a 6'3, 190 pound All-NY halfback from Burnt Hills. Assistant coach Dave Kelley reports that the youngster is interested in Marine Biology (a UMass strong point) and that track coach Ken O'Brien might be interested in him for his 49 ft. triple jump, best in the Empire State.

Rampaging Rider Invades UMass

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

An 11-6 Rider College basketball team which has won nine of its last 11 games, including its last four in a row, invades Curry Hicks Cage tonight at 8:00 to face a UMass squad that is coming off of a frustrating loss to Boston College. At 6:00, the frosh face Greenfield Community College.

The Broncs, whom the Redmen crushed, 78-49, in last year's season opener, can not be taken lightly. . . . .obviously. They're record once stood at 2-4 but since then they have taken a new course and have sacked the likes of St. Joseph's, 79-73 (recall that St. Joe's was the team that upset highly regarded Davidson a few weeks back), American University, 62-61, and St. Francis of Pennsylvania by a solid 70-56 count.

Rider has been sparked in its recent tournabout by 6'4 sophomore Bill Katz. A transfer from the University of Pennsylvania, Katz didn't become eligible until January but since that time has been scoring at a 19.4 points-per-game clip. A hustling player with a good sense for the game, Katz will start at guard.

The leading scorer for the Broncs is Rich Wallace, averaging 19.5. The 6'3 senior guard and team co-captain is a top percentage shooter and a good assist man.

Rider boasts another top-flite sophomore in the person of 6'3 Barry Spears, a swing man who performs well at guard or forward. He consistently hits in the double figures and is the team's leading rebounder.

O ther Broncs sure to see lots of action are Glenn Albano, a 6'3 junior forward who was last year's third leading Rider Scorer, Ray Ramsey, another forward who stands 6'3 and is the team's other captain, and Steve Jefferson, a soph center and tallest man on the team at 6'7.

Two other players, 6'1 senior guard Rich Januilis and 6'4 junior forward Ed Wenkler, the top Bronc rebounded last winter, will also play key roles for Rider.

The Redmen who fought tirelessly against BC only to leave Chestnut Hill empty handed on the short hand of an 83-76 decision, will probably start the same combo of Ray Ellerbrook, John Betancout, Julius Erving, Dick Samuelson and Jack Gallagher.

HOOP NOTES - Gallagher was selected as the top UMass performer of the past week at yesterday's Varsity 'M' Club luncheon ....At that dinner, coach Jack Leaman showed films of last week's win over Boston Coolege....copsl slip of the typewriter key...make that Boston University....The attendance at the BC affair was listed at 3009, close to half of which were Redmen fans....UMass basketball has built up a rabid and knowledgeable following among the students on campus, whose support for the Redmen, at home and away, has been nothing short of fantastic....Ellerbrook had a forgettable night against the Eagles, hitting only two of 13 shots from the field and totaling only five points....The UMass captain can be expected to show more of the same shooting that helped the Redmen to their wins over Iona, BU and Northeastern.

MR. JULIUS ERVING - UMass' stellar soph, shown here shooting against Frank Fitzgerald, had a fine night against Boston College. As the Boston Globe put it, "Many fans had come only to see the sensational UMass sophomore Julius Erving and he didn't disappoint them, scoring 26 points and hauling in 19 rebounds." Rent Protests

CONTROVERSY OVER ROOMS AND RENT has been common in the past three semesters, as is evidenced by these photos. Top-Last year Central Area residents fought a proposal which would have had them pay the same rent for "traditional dorms" as students living in "Residential Colleges." They won. Middle-Protests sprang up this fall in the Northeast when students returned to campus to find dorm furnishings in what they termed "a state of advanced decay, making enjoyable dorm life impossible." Some repair has been completed. Bottom-The need for expensive repairs in many old dorms on campus is illustrated by ancient plumbing. (MDC photos by John R. Kelly III, Steve Schmidt and Ken Emery.)

Rent Hike Opposition Prompts Open Meeting

By SUSAN SPATRICK
Staff Reporter

The proposed student room rent hikes and fee increases are prompting statements of "student power" and "student rights" to be uttered by the normally apathetic UMass students, according to several Student Senators.

And this "new awakening will get a chance to materialize at two meetings next week," according to those Senators.

Assistant Treasurer Robert H. Brand will explain the Administration's rationale behind the proposed rent increases at an open Student Senate Meeting Wednesday night in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:00.

This topic will be the subject of another open meeting Thursday afternoon from 1:30 to 5:30 in the Ballroom.

But, the second meeting will also specifically focus on student rights and student power, according to Senate organizers. The emphasis will be on the rent hikes, a student voice in the selection of a new President and Chancellor, overcrowded classes, and the general structure of the University itself.

The theme of the open meeting according to Senate Public Relations Chairman Geoffrey Levine, will center on the fact that the University is supposedly designed for students, but that the Administration seemingly answers to everyone but the students.

Levine predicts that these events will bring out the need for students to be at least consulted in decisions which affect their own life styles.

Levine hopes "these meetings will let the Administration, the Board of Trustees, the Legislature, and ultimately the people of the State know about the poor conditions existing at the University."

Levine pointed out that for only the second time in two years, the Senate and the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Council are cooperating on a venture from the start. Both he and MLK Executive Secretary Gil Salk are coordinating the Thursday meeting.

First CEQ Meeting Draws Overflow Crowd in Hasbrouk

By AL SIROTA
Staff Reporter

An overflow crowd attended the first meeting of the Coalition for Environmental Quality in Hasbrouck last night, and heard plans for establishing a structure to deal with the "ecological crisis."

Three minor introductory committees were formed to deal with: research items in general, and which will further break down into separate committees on air, water and land pollution, population, humanism and wildlife; a publicity committee; and an action committee.

Examples of possible action by the group mentioned were protests, lawsuits against polluters and support of anti-pollution legislation.

MLK Council Plans to Go After "Action Education" on Militarism

At Wednesday night's meeting of the Steering Committee, the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council launched what members termed a broad program of action and education for the coming semester. The Steering Committee approved programs submitted by former Executive Secretary Gil Salk dealing with race, militarism, and student self-determination.

In other action, it approved a resolution, submitted by Bill Abbott and amended by Carl Brown, which establishes a seminar to research racism as it occurs in the United States. Plans were also made for the upcoming major reorganization of the King Council.

All of the new committees are actively seeking members who are willing to put in some hard work in the coming weeks, stated a King Council spokesman. Interested members of the campus community may sign up for committees at t' King Council table in the Student Union or at the office in 207 Hampshire House.

The Committee on Militarism plans to organize a fight against the Defense Dept. budget patterned after the ABM battle. It will also organize low-key demonstrations and heavy publicity against defense contractors such as Dow, ITT, and Honeywell. Plans also call for action against ROTC and educational dorm programs about the war against Vietnam.

The proposal for the Committee on Race calls for possible support for the Black Studies Program after consultation with black proponents of the program. Efforts against discrimination on construction projects will be picked up again, as the Committee tries to get the anti-discrimination clause drawn up by UMass professor and ACLU lawyer Isadore Silver included in all state and federal contracts. The Committee will also present educational programs, primarily in dorms, dealing with race and racism, according to members.

The Committee on Student Self-Determination will pick up on and formalize programs Salk already started independently, with the help of the Student Senate. It will develop and carry out programs to oppose the unilateral decisions to raise room rents and Student Union fees, and work to ensure significant student participation in the recruiting and selection of the University's new Chancellor and President.

Abbott and Brown's proposal called for establishing group experience seminars studying a variety of topics under the general heading of racism. The seminar will investigate colonialism, the history and culture of black people, the role of black women in revolution, the reasons for black study programs, a comparison of black and white feeling, and motives of whites in social action. The group will be chaired by Abbott, with Brown and Robyn Chandler acting as advisors.

Morse Denies Rumors He Wants Ted's Senate Seat

WASHINGTON (AP) - Although some Massachusetts politician watchers expect he will, Rep. F. Bradford Morse repeatedly insisted Thursday he won't seek the Republican nomination this year for Democrat Edward M. Kennedy's Senate seat.

At a news conference to annouce plans for a trip to Vietnam, Morse repeated his statement that "as of today, I have no intention of running for the U. S. Sanate."

The conference sounded like this:

Q. How late would you wait to make a decision?

A. I honestly and truly haven't given running for the Senate any thought for a number of years. I gave it considerable thought a couple of years ago but haven't given it any since that time.

Q. Well, we'll use an old Bobby Kennedy quote: Are there any foreseeable circumstances under which you would be a candidate for the U. S. Senate?

Pause. Then, softly:

A. Yes.

Q. What are those foreseeable circumstances?

Laughter.

A. Oh, foreseeable circum - stances! None that I can fore see. None that I can foresee. No.

Q. What was that question about foreseeable circumstances?

Laughter.

A. None that I can see.

Morse, of Lowell, Mass., was elected to the House in 1960 and won re-election four times.

Ken edy is such a heavy favorite for another term in the seat he won in 1962 that Republicans were having trouble finding an opponent until GOP State Chairman Josiah Spaulding declared his intention to try for the nomination.

American Planes Hit No. Viet. Positions

SAIGON (AP) - American fighter-bombers attacked enemy missile and gun positions in North Vietnam Monday for the second time in a week after unarmed reconnaissance jets came under intense anti-aircraft fire, the U.S. Command disclosed Thursday.

Two firing sites were silenced and no U.S. planes were hit, a U.S. spokesman said.

The battle took place in the area of Ban Karai Pass, an infiltration route leading into Laos through the North Vietnamese mountains about 20 miles north of the demilitarized zone dividing the Vietnams.

The disclosure was made as proclaimed Viet Cong and allied cease fires for Tet, the lunar New Year, quieted the battle fields of South Vietnam. The allies accused the enemy of several major and minor violations. Included was an ambush in the A Shau Valley west of Da Nang. Three U.S. Marines were killed and two wounded. A terrorist bombing killed a Vietnamese and wounded 16 at a restaurant 15 miles northwest of Saigon.

Spokesmen said the air to ground engagement in North Vietnam broke out when two unarmed U.S. reconnaissance jets "came under intense anti-aircraft fire from enemy gun positions inside North Vietnam."

As fighter-bomber escorts attacked the gun site, the enemy fired off a surface to air missile - SAM - which missed. The SAM site was then attacked by the escorts whose bombs silenced both firing positions, spokesmen added. Only five days earlier, a U.S. fighter-bomber and a rescue helicopter were shot down near North Vietnam's Mu Gia Pass farther north.

After the first incident, North Vietnam accused the United States of a "grave act of war," claiming American planes launched bombing raids against populated areas. It repeated the charge after Monday's encounter.

Although the United States stopped bombing North Vietnam Nov. 1, 1968, it continued reconnaissance flights to keep tabs on enemy build-ups and movements. Nine U.S. aircraft have been lost over the North since the bombing halt.

President Nixon Cries "Power to The People"

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

CHICAGO (AP) - President Nixon said Thursday it is time to return power to the people. "Let's get it back to the people and to the cities and to the states where it belongs because the power should be theirs," he said.

The President flew with most of his Cabinet and advisors to two meetings - the first in Indianapolis Thursday, with the mayors of nine medium sized cities and the second in Chicago where he was to discuss environmental problems Friday with Midwestern governors of four Great Lakes States.

In Chicago, Nixon told reporters the session "was very good because these mayors laid it right on the line." He said it was unusual because most of the time was taken up by hearing their views.

Nixon met with his Urban Affairs Council and the mayors in a closed session on city problems such as law enforcement and the model cities program.

Nixon said more listening by his advisors would highlight Friday's session with the governors.

"I'm going to cut down on the federal presentation so we can hear more from the governors," he told reporters.

KENITIC ART, like this, will go on display at UMass next week.

Kenetic Art Show Opens Tuesday

"Live in a Tin Can," or "La Vita," created by Bruno Bazzeto of Milan is the intriguing title of an animated film which opens the three-part KINETIC ART concert series next Tuesday, February 10 at 7 and 9:15 in the SU Ballroom under the sponsorship of the SU Movie Committee.

The film is twenty minutes of alternately hilarious and satirical counterpoint pitting life in its monotonous and familiar reality against rare moments of escape into fantasy. "La Vita" is what life is all about.

Black comedy of bizarre combat in an antique carnival setting is Prague's Jan Svankmayers offering on Feb. 10 night's program which critics describe as "defying description . . . there has never been a film like this before."

Other challenges to one's sense of sight and sound scheduled for the evening include "Phenomena" by famed artist Jordan Belson of San Francisco, "Happiness," 55 seconds of pure charm by Germany's Lothar Spruce, "Cruel Diagonals" a searingly dramatic post war episode, talented Japanese Yoji Kuri's "Two Grilled Fish" and "Why Did You Kiss Me Awake?" a dadaist film joke by Hellmuth Costard, the ENFANT TERRIBLE of the New German Cinema.

COLWYN BAY, WALES (AP) - Philosopher Bertrand Russell was cremated Thursday.

Russell, 97, who died two days ago, was cremated without funeral service, eulogy or what he had called in his will "fuss."

Lady Russell, his American born fourth wife, a son by a former marriage and his wife, and two members of the Russell peace foundation staff constituted the mourners in a small crematorium chapel.

Michigan Students' Rent Strike Continues

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) - More than a year ago, a fellow University of Michigan student knocked on the door of Norm Finkelstein's off-campus apartment and talked to him about joining a rent strike.

Along with other students, Finkelstein, then a junior, was fed up with what he thought were unfair lease terms, high rents and poor apartment maintenance.

So he joined.

The student strike, according to sponsors, now has about 1,000 participants, down from a peak of 1,200 last year.

It has now become largely a matter of principle, but there are a number of bread-and-butter issues. Particularly important is the question of leases.

Most landlords insist on 12-month leases. Students are in residence only eight months, however, and therefore must find summer subtenants - who usually pay rates lower than the original rent.

The student strikers vow they'll withhold rents - risking eviction or court action - until their landlords recognize their tenants' union as bargaining agent for students renting off-campus.

They also plan to try to form a national student tenants association and plan a conference here later this month to discuss the possibility.

Each student instead of paying his monthly rent to the landlord, puts it in an escrow fund. Originally the tenants' union established an account at a Canadian bank where the rent funds were held in escrow pending settlement with the landlord - in or out of court.

Lately, local courts have been forcing student to pay their rent into a court-controlled fund so that the landlord will be assured of payment after a jury makes its decision or the case is settled out of court.

Similar rent strikes have already been started at the University of California at Berkeley, the University of Wisconsin at Madison and the University of Colorado at Boulder.

One grievance of the Ann Arbor students is what they consider high rentals. Most of the school's 35,000 students live off-campus, where rents for nearby apartments often run as high as $320 a month for a small, two-bedroom furnished apartment usually shared by four persons. Comparable apartments in the outlying areas of Ann Arbor - which has only minimal public transportation - generally rent for under $200 monthly.

The tenants' union has been vague about specific demands, saying that they will emerge in negotiations which will follow recognition of the union. One consistent demand, however, has been for eight-month leases.

At one point, the union was demanding across-the-board rent cuts of up to 20 per cent, but that has been dropped as an immediate issue.

The realtors, however, also seem prepared to hold out indefinitely. While agents admit that rent withholding has had some financial impact on them, they say they are not yet prepared to bargain.

The university has maintained a hands-off attitude, according to Dr. Barbara Newell, vice president for student affairs. The tenants union has an office in the student activities building, but office space is allocated by Student Government Council, not by the university administration.

Hershey Successor Uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) - Charles J. DiBena, the White House choice for the job of draft director, said Thursday he hasn't decided whether to accept the post. But there are strong indications on Capitol Hill that he faces powerful congressional opposition.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, the ranking Republican member of the panel, reportedly are opposed to DiBona.

Abernathy To Speak April 22

Dr. Ralph Abernathy, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and Dr. Kenneth Clark, noted sociologist and author of several books, will be spending one day each on the campus this spring as part of the Martin Luther King, Jr., lecture series.

Senior Class Treasurer Lynn Nevins announced at the Class of 1970 Executive Council meeting last night that Clark will be on campus April 14 and Abernathy on April 22. Both men will spend the day attending classes and then deliver a lecture.

In other action the Executive Council voted to support the Student Senate in its attempt to gain greater student participation in the selection of a chancellor for the Amherst campus, and to express its opposition to the recently announced room rent hikes.

Oust Driscoll Movement Gets Unexpected Boost

By ROBERT NORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

The Student-Faculty group which is trying to oust Southeastern Massachusetts President Joseph L. Driscoll has received help from an unexpected source - the Chancellor of Wesleyan University.

Chancellor Richard Ohmann was one of several educators who spoke at a rally. He relayed to President Driscoll four "charges" drawn up by the student-faculty coalition.

These accused the president of:

- "Repeated violations of academic freedom."
- "Premeditated disruption of the educational process."
- "Extreme authoritarianism . . ."
- "Obscene actions: among them the misuse of school funds to hire detectives for spy activities . . ."

Driscoll was off-campus and unavailable for comment.

Other speakers on the program attended by several hundred SMU students and faculty and off-campus backers were Noam Chomsky, MIT professor of linguistics; Louis Kampf, MIT associate professor of literature; John McDermott, MIT lecturer in political theory, and Michele Russell, director of the Black Literature Program at Brown University, Providence.

Also speaking were Judith Adler and Carol Brightman, former SMU teachers who were fired.

Miss Brightman read a letter she had just received from President Driscoll, directing her to stay off campus.

She and Miss Adler, however, vowed they would return to SMU and teach despite Driscoll's order.

In addition to the support offered by the speakers, the student-faculty group at the embattled, 2800-student state university received telegrams of encouragement from a number of persons, including:

Dr. Benjamin Spock, the famed baby doctor; Fr. Robert Drinan, dean of Boston College Law School; Richard Falk Milbank, professor of international law at Princeton University; Rabbi Sanford Seltzer, director of the New England Council Union of American Hebrew Congregation, and the Rev. William Sloan Coffin, Yale University chaplain.

Chancellor Ohmann, explaining why he came here from the Wesleyan campus in Middletown, Conn. said, "The main thing was to show solidarity of academic people whose free speech seems to be in danger."

The speakers came on invitation from the rally sponsors, which included the SMU chapter of the New University Conference, the ad hoc strike committee, the Black Student Union, "Torch", the school newspaper, and "Graffiti," the school's underground newspaper.

His talk on "The Healthy Aspects of Black Racism" is open to the public without charge and is presented by the students Distinguished Visitors Program.

Brown's book about growing up in Harlem has been called "the most extraordinary autobiography of the generation." It is now required reading in many high school and college social science classes.

"Manchild in the Promised Land" was published in 1965, the year Brown received his B.A. at Howard University. He is now a law student at Rutgers University. He writes regularly for national magazines and has done book reviews for the New York Times.

He also lectures and teaches social studies seminars and writing workshops at colleges campuses throughout the U.S.

Up Against The Walls Blues

When I was in the third grade, air raid drills were as common as fire drills. A special alarm would sound sending twenty-five of us in my classroom through the well-practiced exercise of scrunching up in a ball under our desks with our arms wrapped around our heads lest flying glass should blind us from the future that a nuclear holocost might leave.

By the fourth grade they had a better idea. When the alarm sounded we all marched double file to the basement of the school where we lined up in the corridors, hands over our eyes, our foreheads leaning against the brick walls.

The terror those experiences generated left scars on my psyche that will never mend. The fact that missiles aimed at New York City would have buried my Sands Point School in a tidal wave with the rest of Long Island, even before the missile reached its target, seemed to evade the minds who mapped such futile actions as air raid drills.

These same minds now wonder why I allow my hair to grow so long. What a great feeling it is to shake my head, cover my eyes with a wall of hair, and see nothing of such nonsense that is our world. The pruspect of having to find happiness in the context of air raid drill scars is enough to make a radical out of anyone, regardless of his toddler feeding schedule.

What's for Dessert

Nice line today. Same faces as yesterday. One line open here on the East side of the common. That guy may not get to his 1:25 lab. Twenty-five minutes since he left his 11:15 class? East and no class. What's that? Bacon, tomato, and cheese sandwiches? Okay. Not bad. Guess I'll read the Collegian while waiting. Cut-back caused this? No tomatoes on the sandwiches. From 130 to 69 workers here. Badly hit. Wonder how many students have missed classes because of this? No bacon either on the sandwiches. Things can't get worse. Says here future rent increase possible. Cheese and toast, huh? Seems more we pay the worse the service gets. Didn't board go up last year? Howlong does it take to return a tray? Plain bread, cheese, and tomato sandwiches now. Line still crawling. What's for dessert? No one is smiling today. Not even the lady checking meal tickets.

The Land of The Free .

To The Editor:

Adrienne Shanler, through her article in the Daily Collegian has showed to all black readers and only white enlightened readers that she is among the ranks of George Wallace, Strom Thurmond and Richard Nixon in her opinion of and attitudes toward the Black God and Goddesses, (Gods in their relation with whites), that are held and kept in mental and physical captivity in the "land of the FREE and the home of the BRAVE.

Shanler states she is a member of the "silent MAJORITY" with which I agree whole heartedly; in other words, Shanler's idealogy wholly and perfectly represents the vast majority of the white people's (students, faculty, administration, personnel) idealogy towards the Black Gods on this campus. Cases such as Black Gods, are supposedly raping white girls on Orchard Hill and I was informed that when a white girl's money was missing on a certain corridor two Black Goddesses staying on the corridor were suspected, reinforce my opinion that a heavy cloud of racism prevails on this campus.

There are two extremely different cultures existing in the "land of the FREE and the home of the BRAVE", they being that of the Black Gods and Goddesses and that of the white people (they're not really people in their definition of the term). Due to the white people's cold, ruthless, machine-like attributes (?) and a lot of luck they happen to be the ruling culture. However, in reality, intellectually, physically, morally and humanistically the white culture is the inferior. At the University of Massachusetts this white culture has organizations such as the Flying Redmen, The Angel Flight etc., and printings such as the Collegian, Yahoo, and the Spectrum. It is Shanler's lethal and heinous advice that we Black God and Goddesses debase ourselves and participate in the stated ignominious entities. Shanler is suggesting that we abide by the old adage "If you can't beat them, join them", which is just a white rationalization for "copping out". It is not in the blood of a Black God to "cop out" as he has proven by his mere SURVIVAL over the past 300 years in this white-inflicted hell.

God Carlton Brown, I warn you, take heed to Shanler's unintentional advice the University will definitely expel you if you forcibly try to TAKE what is rightfully YOURS and every other Black God and Goddess. They have enlightened us to this fact by their expelling from life God Malcolm X, and God Martin Luther King Jr., their expelling from society God Huey Newton and God Bobby Seale and their expelling from the country God Eldridge Cleaver, God Stokely Carmicheal and God W.E.B. DuBois.

Again God Carleton Brown, I advise you not to be taken by Shanler's white culture orientated hang-up of dealing just with people's idiosyncrasies. We all are aware that in reality it is the white person who is ignorant, unreasonable, immature and a troublemaker, which through his mere existence, presently and in the past, has reinforced this opinion the non-white peoples of the world have of him.

To you Shanler and the people she represents I say definitely "the time has come for reason, sanity, and peace to prevail on our troubled planet today but this will never come to be as long as the white man's presence is felt.

PHILIP PETTIJOHN

And The Home of The ??

To The Editor:

Miss Shanler in her (Feb. 3 letter) response to brother Brown's letter exhibited typical middle class fundamentalistic attitudes toward black people and black institutions.

For 400 years black people prayed to a white Christ, sat-in, begged in, and turned the other Cheek-in, in the hope of becoming part of this welfare state called Amerika, but to no avail.

Now, black people, in an attempt to find their stolen mythology and history are being asked to come back into a fold that they were never part of. Miss Shanler asks, "Have you tried submitting material to the spectrum?" For what? Be real! Black people have been reading and writing western and European styles and attempts until they've had intellectual diarrhea.

The material that goes into the DRUM is real, basic, and down. It comes from the hearts, minds, and the souls of a people who have the ability to laugh in the face of adversity. The material in the DRUM relates to black people. What does that mean to good white folks like you? Where do you fit in? It means that you have the honor of reading a dynamic experience, of steeping yourself in a culture that had universities when Europeans were still acting like the first cousins to the primates. It means that black people can communicate with each other and share a black literary experience without being surrounded by middle class trivia and being reminded of the requirement courses that many time can't relate to survival in this capitalistic jungle. It means we can use a language that is strictly ours and not be called lewd, obscene, or any of those Calvinistic terms meaning frigidity, stifled or the inability to be one's self.

Where do you fit in? You don't. Sock-it-to-me, hang-ups, what's happning, and it's your thing all come from the black, Miss Shanler. Have you ever been on the block (the ghetto) Miss Shanler? In other words you are out to lunch (as you would say in the middle classurbia). It is therefore impossible for you to be a judge of black aspirations without being a witness on the stand that is our black birthright.

I suggest you use your "silent" time to become some kind of aware to the little girl world of fantasy you have created for yourself.

Student Senate. 'Representative"

To The Editor:

You, the students who think you are being represented should look again at your "representative" assembly, the august Student Senate. Those of you who know or have heard somewhere that they do, indeed, conduct senate meetings on Wednesday nights should attend one.

A brief preview of what you will find? Certainly! You will find chaos, disorganization, and discord. You will see personal animosities come to the forefront in debate and sidle across the senate floor from corner to corner.

Yes, you will see boredom and lack of interest on the masks of the senators who find it difficult to read a motion, let alone think about it or consider the situations and consequences. But, then again, being a senator is a prestigeous position, if not a responsible one, and one must only show up to fulfill his duties. Unfortunately, legislation proper is not within the field of vision (nor are the basic rules of politeness and common courtesy).

You will find it very similar in fact to a volley ball match. The half-deflated, worn ball is bounced from one pair of hot grubby hands to another. Of course, there is no proper referee so it doesn't matter how many participants the ball hits on the way nor does it matter how many are kicked and elbowed in the process. Further, it even takes on the aura of an authentic physical spectacle. Listen to the jeerings and hisses throughout the entire game. But, don't try to distinguish who's jeering whom and for what. It's impossible.

All this and much much more for the small fee of finding out where your Senate Council Chambers are.

One final word - there are a few fine players but don't be disappointed if you see them leave the field (as others have in the past). They have come to realize that the goals of the game and the methods employed have changed and no longer wish to be part of such an outrageous FARCE!

Now The Time Has Come

To The Editor:

This is a reply to Mr. DePillis' letter in Monday's COLLEGIAN. Mr. DePillis claims that further coverage of Dr. Gruman's case by the MDC will only cause the History Department to factionalize again, and that therefore, the MDC should leave the matter in the hands of the Tenure and Grievance Committee. It may be true that the truth about this case will embarrass some people, but this does not mean that the truth should be suppressed. Many History professors have left UMass in silence; the time has now come for the truth about cases like Dr. Swenson's to be made public. Mr. DePillis, as an historian, should be concerned about the facts involved, so that mistakes made in the past are not made again in the present.

JOHN D. ARIANSEN

EDUC Seen as Model For Other Departments

About one year ago a group of English majors decided to form E.D.U.C. - an organization which would be orientated toward making student opinion heard and respected in the English Department.

Since its formation E.D.U.C. has gained a great deal of power. For example, it now conducts its own course evaluation surveys, interviews all prospective teachers makes recommendations on the hiring of new faculty. E.D.U.C. is probably the most successful example of a new trend in student power rising on this campus - the development of departmental student counsels.

As of yet, students at this University have no effective mouthpiece to use in voicing their concerns for academic reform.

The Student Senate, the only major student power on campus, has been primarily concerned with social legislation. By developing an organization whose superstructure is based upon academic representation (as opposed to the social structure of dormitories), a departmental cousel may be able to remedy the lack of student voice in academic affairs.

Departmental counsels may be able to; gain the power to vote in determining departmental curriculum and requirements, gain a say in hiring, firing and tenure granting decisions, and develop course evaluations which are solely responsible to student needs. These counsels could wield a great deal of power in our academic environment yet, ironically, up to now the departments themselves have shown more interest and initiative in helping form such counsels than the students.

A number of departments, such as History, Psychology, French, Spanish English and Zoology have begun to form such counsels. In order to strengthen these undertakings and help organize more departments a loosely bound federation of existing counsels - the inter-departmental student counsel - has been formed. In the following articles of this series members of this federation will try to provide interested students with a blue print for the development of departmental counsels and a more detailed explanation of their function.

Pacifist Group Organizes

The Pacifist Group, formed last semester, has begun weekly meeting again. The group's purpose is to try to bring together pacifists and strong adherents of nonviolence who wish to discuss the problems of nonviolence in a violent society.

Originally acting as a support and internal education group, the organization is now considering plans to seek RSO status and present educational programs to the campus. It is also considering ways to reduce the possibility of violence in confrontations between activist groups and the "establishment."

Meetings are regularly held on Tuesday evenings at 6:00 p.m. in the 12th floor lounge of JQA.

Play Review

Godot Seen Superb

By KEVIN WM. DONOVAN
Fine Arts Staff

"They give birth astride of a grave, the light gleams an instant, then it's night once more."

The University of Massachusetts Roister Doisters are currently (Feb. 4-7) presenting a superb production of Samuel Beckett's Pulitzer Prize winning drama, WAITING FOR GODOT, at Bowker Auditorium.

Above all else, the play is boring. Yet it is a calculated boredom, designed by Beckett to affect the audience in much the same manner that the intermitable ennui of existence oppresses Vladimir and Estragon.

Director Pedro Silva has molded his fine cast into a marvelous and completely credible interpretation of Beckett's work. Not only are the actors eminently successful in their individual characterizations, but they also react to each other with deft precision, careful to display a non-communicative indifference whenever appropriate.

David Anthony Zucker is outstanding as the initially pompous and self-assured Pozzo who is later relegated to an impotent blind man, and David Marsh as Lucky, his driveling, wheezing slave, is incredibly grotesque. Joseph Wilkins and William Over as Didi and Gogo are also magnificent, instilling vibrant life into perhaps the most significant work in Existential drama.

"Reivers" Flick Seen Like Oatmeal

By SUSAN SCHMEHL

The new Steve McQueen flick "The Reivers" adapted from William Faulkner's novel of a young boy growing up in Mississippi is, to use a corny phrase - heart-warming. Nonetheless the story of a young eleven year-old boy's initiation into the bawdy realities of life and people is a rambling, sometimes nostalgic glimpse into life as seen by the innocent boy. While young Lucius' parents are off to attend a funeral, Boon and Ned, the family's "handymen" of sorts set off with Lucius in tow for a four day spree in Memphis along with Boss' "borrowed" new yellow automobile.

The humor and pathos of life is glimpsed with little of the reminiscent gloss that recollections often lend themselves to. The three return from their venture and the boy is amazed that nothing has appeared to change while he was gone. Yet, unknowingly, he has taken a stride in growing up in the world that will eventually engulf his childhood.

This film is akin to listening to a fantastic storyteller, gradually absorbing and involving you with the boy's brief spurt of growth. "The Reivers", which could easily, by its very nature, have turned into a sappy-sweet memory, comes through as, for lack of a better description, a warm movie. You leave it feeling like a little kid when your Mom has given you hot oatmeal for breakfast on a cold school morning. You may not like it but it makes you feel good just the same.

Frosh Hoopsters Win Easily, Down Greenfield Comm., 67-47

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

In a ho-hum contest played at the Cage last night, the UMass freshmen downed a tough (???) Greenfield Community squad, 67-47. The win left UMass two games under the .500 mark at 4-6.

Coach Peter Broaca was forced to play the game without Mike Polakoff, the team's big scorer, due to illness. Bob Kalbfell and Mark Starr were used as replacements for Poakoff and Starr came through with his biggest game of the year with twelve points.

UMass led almost the entire first half from the time Chuck Peters broke a 9-9 tie at the 14:24 mark. Chuck Olsen and Scott Golden were the big guns in the offense with Olsen netting twelve in the first half and Golden ten.

The the Little Redmen could never really pull away due to the outside shooting of 6'2 guard Tim Kachelmeyer. The Oakland, N.Y., native consistently hit long range jumpers and canned six field goals in the half.

Olsen, Starr, and Andre Polly hit consecutive hoops to start the second half and build the UMass bulge to nine, 40-31. Kachelmeyer then made two charity tosses but Olsen hit another one at 16:12 and the UMass lead never fell below nine the rest of the way.

Led by Olsen, Starr, and Polly, the Little Redmen kept building the lead as Kachelmeyer and Greenfield turned cold. With 2:52 left, Olsen made his last hoop of the contest to give UMass its largest lead, 65-44. White closed out the scoring for the frosh with a minute left on a short jump shot. Ken Tirtle got that one back for Greenfield making the final score UMass 67, Greenfield 47.

The highlight of the game, for the fan's anyway, was the defensive performance put on by a small dog at halftime. The mutt played fine position basketball and seemed to be all over the floor.

Olsen came through with his second straight game over twenty points, finishing with 24. Lolden was also in double figures for the frosh, hitting for fourteen points. Kachelmeyer ended with 23 for the losers.

Besides Polakoff, guard Joel Saperstein did not see any action due to a leg injury. This left Broaca short-handed on guards and forced him to move Kalbfell and Starr up from forward.

Saturday night the Little Redmen meet Rockwood Academy. If last year is any indication of what Rockwood can do the frosh will certainly have their hands full.

Red Sox Sign Gibson, Matchick Also Joins Fold

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Red Sox announced Wednesday that 13 more players including last year's No. 1 catcher, Russ Gibson, have signed their 1970 contracts, bringing the number in the fold to 27 out of the 44 scheduled to be at training camp in Winter Haven, Fla., within the next few weeks.

Utility infielder Tom Matchick, acquired from the Detroit Tigers in an off-season trade, is another of the new signees along with pitchers Ray Jarvis and Bill Lee, catcher Tom Satriano and outfielder Don Lock, all holdovers from the 1969 Red Sox team. Lock is not on this year's roster but is a special invitee to camp.

The other signings announced Wednesday are all of rookies - pitchers Jack Curtis, Jerry Janeski, Rogelio Moret, Ed Phillips and Dick Mills, catcher Carlton Fisk, and outfielder Ben Oglivie.

Most prominent among players who have not signed to day are pitcher Jim Lonborg, catchers Don Pavletich and Jerry Moses, infielders Rico Petrocelli, Mike Andrews, George Scott and Luis Avarado, and outfielder Reggis Smith.

General Manager Dick O'Connell said he anticipates no signing problems, and added that several unsigned players have actually agreed to terms but just haven't made if official yet by signing their contracts.

Frosh Grapplers Split

By ERIC OPPELAAR

This weekend had it's up and downs for the UMass Freshman Wrestling team. On Saturday the Frosh met Central Connecticut here and fought their way to a hard earned 15 to 14 victory. The winners for the Little Redmen were: Tom Hayward, at 126, with a decisive 7 to 0 win over his opponent; Bill Genenthal, weighing in at 134, with a 5 to 2 victory; Bill Farschman, at 142, beating his man 15 to 1; Rick Tribbitt, at 150, with an 8 to 2 decision; and at 190, Ed Carllson defeating his opponent 8 to 4. The Little Redmen were up and looking good.

Tuesday was a different story. Springfield College carried the match away with a 36 to 8 victory. UMass received five of its points via forfeit from a weight class mix up and the other three through the efforts of Ed Carlson who was the only winner for UMass.

The Frosh have got a full week to get in shape for UConn. Maybe this time the lockerroom will be a little noisier.

UMass Swimmers Host Cent. Conn.

By EDWARD DOHERTY
Staff Reporter

In Saturday afternoon action this weekend, the UMass varsity and freshman swim teams will host their counterparts from Central Connecticut at 2 for the varsity and 4 for the frosh.

Close races in nearly all events are anticipated for coach Joseph Rogers' mermen.

After the Central Connecticut meet the varsity will be prepping for a home meet against Worcester Polytech Wednesday afternoon. The freshmen are headed for Springfield on Tuesday to resume action.

A good turnout at Saturday's meet by the UMass student body may be just what the swimmers need to spark them on to a respectable record.

Gymnasts Bow to Tough Penn St., 162.6-156.35

NORM VEXLER
Ties for top in side horse

UMass faced Penn State in an important gymnastics meet Wednesday night, but the Penn State Gymnasts enjoyed their best meet of the season as they downed the Redmen, 162.6-156.35.

The Nittany Lions, obviously up for the meet after their loss to Springfield College, could do no wrong as they jumped to a 1.1 point advantage after the first event and continued to increase it throughout the meet.

The Redmen were a bit shaky in the first three events, suffering a number of major breaks which put them over three points behind at the half-way mark. The Redmen settled down in the second half but the damage had already been done.

Joe Reed captured individual honors for UMass as he won the still rings event and took a third on parallel bars. Reed scored 9.0 or better in three of the six events to place second behind Tom Dunn of Penn State in the all-around competition.

The high scores of the meet were by Swetman and Dunn of Penn State. Swetman scored a 9.6 on the horizontal bar and Dunn a 9.5 on parallel bars.

In floor exercise the Nittany Lions jumped to a 27.0-25.9 lead on two 9.05 performances by Dick Swetman and Tom Clark. Penn State's Jim Corrigan was the third highest scorer with an 8.9. Mike Kasavana was the high scorer for UMass with an 8.7, followed by Reed's 8.65 and Godwin's 8.55.

The side horse event saw UMass outscored, 26.1-24.45. Norm Vexlerner scored an 8.95 to tie Penn State's Swetman for top honors. A number of major breaks accounted for UMass' unusually low team score in this event.

The Redmen began to rebound in the still rings event as Reed won with a 9.1. However, the depth of the Nittany Lions enabled them to outscore UMass in the event, 26.75-26.15. Penn State entered the intermission with a 79.85-76.50 lead and their strongest events, parallel bars and high bar, were yet to come.

In the long horse vault Penn State dominated the three top spots with Clark, Corrigan and Swetman at 9.3, 9.2 and 9.1 respectively. Reed and Steve Cary were high for UMass at 9.05, with Tony Vacca at 8.95.

On parallel bars, Tom Dunn of the Nittany Lions received a 9.5 to beat out teammate Swetman for the top position. Behind Swetman was Reed of UMass with a 9.0 and third place.

The highest score of the meet came in the final event by the last Penn State performer. Swetman, who else, scored a 9.6 on highbar with an almost flawless routine to win the event. Dunn was second for the Lions with a 9.2. Ed Mysliicki of UMass was third with a 9.0, edging out teammate Scott Stover at 8.9.

The Penn State effort was by far its best of the season. The Lions increased their team score by more than four points over the meet which they lost to Springfield College by five one-hundredths of a point.

Even if UMass had had its best night of the season, it would still have been almost impossible to catch the Nittany Lions on Wednesday evening.

Redmen Waltz By Rider, 82-67

Erving Notches 30 Gallagher also Stars

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

In a hum-ho type of contest, UMass overpowered Rider College 82-67 last night before an estimated 3000 Curry Hicks Cage fans. The win upped the Redman record to 9-6 while dropping the Broncs to 11-7.

UMass was coming off its most bitter defeat of the year just two days previously, and Rider arrived around 30 minutes before game time, so conditions weren't exactly perfect for an exciting game. It was just a workmanlike, wire-to-wire victory for the Redmen.

Despite the sometimes lifeless action, there were two bright spots besides another win, for UMass. There was Julius Erving, who, in what is becoming a normal performance, poured in 30 points and added 20 rebounds. And there was senior Jack Gallagher, playing the best ball of his career the past few weeks, adding 14 points most in key situations, when the issue was still in doubt.

The Redmen never trailed. Dick Samuelson and Gallagher hit two straight in the first minute, and after a Rider free throw, Samuelson hit again. U-Mass had a quick five point lead after two minutes.

Rider, however, remained close for the first 10 minutes, chiefly on the great shooting from guard Rich Wallace. They closed to within one at the 13 minute mark. Then John Betancourt hit a long range jumper and Erving a foul shot to pull the Redmen out by four.

The two teams traded hoops for the next couple of minutes, Erving doing the bulk of the Redman scoring. Finally, with around nine minutes left in the half, UMass began to edge away. Samuelson and Betancourt hit free throws, Gallagher a tip in after five straight misses, and UMass was up by six.

Gallagher and Wallace traded buckets, but UMass went into an all-court press. It produced nine straight points and a 13 point lead. Erving hit seven of the nine, two coming off of a great Betancourt steal, while Ray Ellerbrook got two more on a layup following another steal forced by the press.

Rider came back to within ten, but UMass closed the half by outscoring the Broncs 10-2 over the last 2:40. Betancourt, Ellerbrook, Erving and Gallagher all scored over the stretch, giving UMass a comfortable 50-32 halftime lead.

While the first half had some fast action caused by the press, the second half slowed down. Rider could never mount a consistent attack, and the UMass shooting, which was excellent in the first half, cooled off considerably. The result was a pretty dull 20 minutes . But there were still plenty of highlights.

Erving scored six straight points at around the 13 minute mark, after Rider had closed to 14. Mike Pagliara got the Redmen running while Chris Coffin played the last 10 minutes and was a strong rebound man.

The largest lead was 22, at 55-33, when Erving canned a free throw. The last seven minutes were marked by Coach Jack Leaman employing his entire squad.

Late game proceedings were livened up by a great under the basket drive by Rick Vogeley, a classy Bob Dempsey hook, that while misconnecting, did have the crowd murmuring with awe, and the aggressive play of big Bill Kesgen.

Erving's 30 led all scorers with Gallagher's 14 next for the Redmen. Ellerbrook chipped in with 10 markers.

Wallace led Rider scorers with 24 points.

Track Opens Dual Season

By EARLE BARROLL Staff Reporter

The UMass track team opens its dual meet schedule tomorrow at Dartmouth with the prospects of a carbon copy of last years meet in which the verdict was undecided until the final two events. The meet begins at 12:30 and will take place at Leverone Field House on the Dartmouth campus.

Coach O'Brien sees the meet as a real close one and expects the final point spread to be about three points either way. He also feels that Dartmouth might take his Redmen lightly seeing that this is their first meet.

Dartmouth's strength lies in the field events. Their three weightmen have already bettered the marks of the UMass weightmen who competed at the BAA and KofC meets. Two of these Indians have set schooi records and UMass will be hard pressed to score against them.

Dartmouth also has good pole vaulters and long jumpers. Coach O'Brien is counting on Jim Graves, Dave Canterbury, and Rocco Pettito to give Dartmouth a battle in these events.

The high jump will be a close event with Cal Carpenter and Ed Shaughnessey, both of whom cleared 6'4 at the Boston Gardens, representing UMass.

The Redmen will balance off their field event weaknesses with their middle and long distance runners. Al Mangan will be running in the 600 yard event, with Dave Evans, Bill Donaldson, and Ron Wayne taking the line in the 1000 yard run. Wayne and Larry Paulson are in the mile field and in the two mile run, Wayne will be competing in his third race of the meet along with sophomores Bruce Blackburn and Don Dunsky, who will be making their varsity debuts in this event. Evans, Donoldson, Paulson, Mangan, and Wayne have already competed this year at the BAA and KofC meets.

The Redmen and Dartmouth have two common battle grounds, the 60 yard dash and the hurdles. Coach O'Brien feels that these could be the deciding events in the meet. The team that comes out ahead in these two events could be the eventual winner of the meet. Walter Mayo and Ron Harris will run the dash and Mark Lefevre, Gerry Spellman, and Jim Graves will be running the hurdles.

Last year Dartmouth was the victor, and this year UMass will be hard pressed to take these events. The reason: Both relay teams for the Redmen will be made up of runners who will have already run races in the meet. It is hard to run two or three all out efforts in the first meet of the season.

The meet boils down to the following questions. Can UMass overcome Dartmouth's dual meet experience? Will the strengths and weaknesses of both teams even out? Who will win the dash and hurdles? Can the Redmen runners come back after running in previous events and win the relays? These questions will be answered tomorrow at Leverone Field House.

Next Game UM vs. UVM

To play their fourth game in eight days Saturday night, the UMass basketball team will take the five-hour trek to Burlington, Vermont to meet, for the second time, the UVM Catamounts. Game time is eight o'clock.

The Redmen embarked on their eight-day, four-game affair last Saturday night at the Cage against Northeastern and since have played Boston College (Tuesday night) and Rider (last night's 82-67 affair).

The last time UMass faced Vermont was on Dec. 6 at the Cage. UMass was victorious over the Catamounts, 90-73. After the Fray, UVM was left with a 1-2 record and proceeded to stretch that into a 2-12 mark. However, the Catamounts have hit somewhat of a comeback trail and have won four straight.

The biggest Catamount as of late has been sophomore Ray Ortiz, a 5'10 guard. Other big Catamounts include seniors Frank Martiniuk and Ray Greenman, 6'1 and 6' respectively. Tom Clay, a 6'2 junior, had 18 points against the Redmen in December and will see a lot of action.

Icemen Look for Sweep

By DICK BACKER Staff Reporter

Hoping to conclude a sweep of their current four game homestand, the Redmen will host Bowdoin College tonight at 7:00. Tomorrow evening they take on an equally tough Merrimack squad, face-off is at 7:30.

The Redmen won the first two games of the homestand in "cardiac" fashion. Last week they edged out an 8-7 win over Hamilton when Jack Edwards banged home a John Hartnett rebound with two seconds remaining in the game. Monday night against Vermont, UMass played their finest hockey of the year as they defeated the Catamounts in overtime, 2-1. P.J. Flaherty was tremendous in goal, equally brilliant was the inspired play of Mike Waldron, Dennis Grabowski and Eric Scrafield. The winning goal was set up by Bob Bartholomew's pass to Charlie Donovan. Donovan attempted to go around Vermont defenseman Ted Yates but was ridden off the puck in front of the crease. Hartnett, trailing the play, flipped the loose puck over the Catamount goalie's right shoulder for the score.

Since the semester break, U-Mass has finally played the hockey they are capable of. Although they lost to Pennsylvania 9-3, January 28th., a new spirit and never say die attitude has prevailed. The Redmen as individuals, but more important as a team, have put out a constant 100% and many times more than that.

This weekend series is extremely important if UMass hopes to gain a Division II playoff berth. Currently their record is 5-3 in Division II play and a sweep would bring the Redmen considerably closer to this goal.

Defeating Bowdoin is easier said then done. The Polar Bears, 5-0 in Division II play and 8-2 overall, are led by Co-captains Erlain and Steve Handy, defensemen Bob Petrie, Whit Raymond, forwards Jim Block, Ed Good and Nick Foulkes, and get outstanding goaltending from Mike Talbot. Coach Sid Watson employs three lines and two sets of defensemen during the game. His squad plays an offensive-minded game usually outshooting their opponents by a wide margin. If UMass is going to win, they will have to forecheck effectively, and take advantage of power play opportunities.

Merrimack is tougher than their record indicates. Their main problem has stemmed from inexperience on defense. "We're scoring well enough, but our defense has been our weakness," commented Merrimack coach Tom Yaulen recently at a press interview. This game should be a high scoring affair, a delight to all fans.

OFFSIDES --- Considering the recent ho-hum affairs at the Cage, more fans have been showing up at Orr Rink. Their presence has not gone unnoticed by the team. The fans have been treated to some excellent hockey, fast moving, hard-hitting, and above all, exciting. This weekend should be no exception, since Bowdoin and Merrimack are formidable.

RSO-Dorm Feud Engulfs Scanlon, Tierney

The controversy between R.S.O. (Recognized Student Organizations) and several Central Area dorms will continue to grow this week as the DAILY COLLEGIAN learned that Assistant Dean of Students Gerald Scalon will ask John W. Tierney, Residence Director of Greenough House, to deposit in RSO, funds which have been collected in the dormatory.

Students living in Greenough, as well as in other dorms on campus, contend the money collected in the dorm should remain in the hands of the students within the dorm.

The student Senate policy states that the funds collected for any student organization such as dormitories' dues, must be deposited with RSO. The rationale behind this is that RSO should manage and investigate student finances and that this is necessitated by the possibility that student funds may be misused.

Since the Student Senate does not recognize a student government within Greenough, although the dorm contends that one does exist, the Senate Ways and Means Committee holds the residence director of Greenough, John Tierney, responsible for the money. Late last week, the Committee asked the Administration to do what it can to see to it that the Greenough dorm dues are deposited in RSO.

In a letter to the COLLEGIAN, (full text appears on p. 11) Tierney said in part: "I think it's high time dorm governments live without this guardian angel (RSO). If we are at all an educational institution then we had better be able to learn from our mistakes. More important, we should be encouraging the kind of experimentation that will lead to alternative governing forms. If we are to set up any viable form of dorm governing / coordinating system, then that system has to have its roots and its responsibilities wholly anchored in the dorm."

Scanlon, head of RSO, when contacted last night said he plans to contact Tierney on Tuesday, and will ask him to bring the money to RSO. When asked what will happen if Tierney refuses Scanlon said, "We'll cross that bridge when we get to it."

CAS Receives Black Studies Program Report

By JAMES GOLD
Staff Reprter

The Committee on Afro-American Studies has made a formal proposal for the establishment of a Black Studies department at UMass, and submitted the report to the College of Arts and Sciences last week.

In accordance with a mandate from the Administration, the committee recommended that a formal academic department, to be called W.E.B. DeBois Department of Afro-Americans Studies after "the intellectual father of Pan-Africanism", be established here.

The department is to offer an undergraduate major in Afro-American studies as well as courses suitable for non-majors intending to play a role in a black community. Specific requirements and structure of the department are to be developed after its formal establishment of it, however general guidelines have been set up.

The Department will concern itself with the entire aspects of the political and cultural history, the present situation and possibilities for the future of the black community. Studies will cover various disciplines including history, the social sciences, literature, arts, language, and other areas revelant to black studies.

Because of the "completeness" which the department desires, studies of black communities in Africa and other parts of the Western himisphere besides the U. S. will complement the department. Also, the international aspects will be reflected in the faculty and students involved within the department.

The study program will include both traditional scholarship and modern teaching methods, including work-study programs to involve the student with research in and about the black community.

Also taken into consideration is the possibility of a Five College Department in Black Studies, in this way, according to the proposal, the "unique resources of all Five Colleges" would be utilized. Eventually, a black cultural center will be developed. This will include "preserving developing, and presenting to the general community the various expressions" of the black culture.

An A.P. Survey

Black Studies Courses Controversial

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The cry for black studies stretched across the land last year, threading through peaceful protest and violent confrontation.

What has resulted from the demands that ranged from special courses to separate black studies departments?

As Associated Press survey of campuses in 40 states and the District of Columbia shows:

1. Some 250 institutions offered for the first time last fall courses related to black studies.

2. At least 14 institutions began offering bachelor's degrees in black studies in separate programs and the Atlanta University system and San Francisco State College plan masters degrees in black studies.

3. There has been little movement toward establishment of separate black studies departments.

4. Controversy still swirls over the quality of black studies courses; whether black studies courses should be integrated or restricted only to black students; and over their staffing and administrative control.

Regarding a separate black studies department, the administration of Murray State College, Murray, Ky., rejected the request as "catering to a small group." At the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, the dean of faculties reported "demands for a separatist black studies program was something we could not accept."

Typical new courses reflect the contributions of blacks to American literature and history. Other courses suggest more exotic content, such as black rhetoric black psychology, and history of black Christianity. All courses are accredited, but nearly always are elective.

Educator s caution against using enrollment statistics as an indication of success or failure of black studies. They have pointed out that many students "audit" - or merely sit in on- courses that are new in the catalogues. They also noted that even at large, urban institutions with impressive black studies programs, controversy persists over student control, course content and whether black studies should be integrated.

At the University of Colorado at Boulder, a course in America's black revolution drew 500 students. Only 75 were expected. But the university's total black studies program attracted only 200 students, far less than university officials expected. A black Colorado student, Sandy Qashington, said, "the start is real good, but there could be a lot of improvements." There are just over 26,000 students at the school.

At the University of Indiana, with 47,000 students, a new course "The Black Community as an Internal Colony," drew 86 students, twice the number anticipated.

There was a general reluctance to attribute the relative campus calm during the fall semester to black studies gains. Edgar Beckham, associate provost at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., said the school's new Afro American Institute "fortunately was not successful in quelling controversy, but it was successful in focusing the controversy in productive ways."

At Beloit College, Wisconsin, scene of firebombings and boycotts last year, David Mason, an assistant to the president, observed "We have no specific new courses relating to blacks, but it is possible that certain courses may now be more related to black studies approaches than they were before."

The major points of disagreement as the spring semester began appeared to be the degree of student control and students' resentment over what they claimed were traditional courses being rechristened black studies. Only in isolated cases have students gained any voice in the administration of 50 black studies programs.

Whites and Blacks Join To Stop Desegregation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - About 1,700 whites and a few Negroes rallied Sunday to protest a court-ordered desegregation plan for local schools which will force the bussing of up to 10,000 pupils.

One of the speakers, Ernest Curlee, urged parents to cancel newspaper subscriptions and purchase only essentials in order to fight the plan.

Curlee said these actions would force the "chairmen of the boards of publishing companies and people with big money" to get involved in helping the "American people regain their freedom."

The protest was directed at a plan approved last week by U.S. Dist. Court Judge James B. McMillan to desegregate the Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system, the state's largest, this spring.

The plan calls for extensive bussing of elementary school pupils. The rally drew a few Negroes, although representatives of the sponsoring Concerned Parents Association had visited black neighborhoods to encourage support for it.

Signs carried at the rally read: "Silent Majority Speak Out." "Ban the Bus," and "Keep the Neighborhood Schools." A youngster in a Cub Scout uniform carried a placard reading "I get Bus Sick."

Claude Brown to Speak On Racism Tonight in S.U.

"Manchild in the Promised Land" author Claude Brown will speak at the University tonight at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

His talk on "The Healthy Aspects of Black Racism" is open to the public without charge and is presented by the students Distinguished Visitors Program.

Brown's book about growing up in Harlem has been called "the most extraordinary autobiography of the generation." It is now required reading in many high school and college social science classes.

"Manchild in the Promised Land" was published in 1965, the year Brown received his B.A. at Howard University. He is now a law student at Rutgers University. He writes regularly for national magazines and has done book reviews for the New York Times.

He also lectures and teaches social studies seminars and writing workshops at college campuses throughout the U.S.

Chicago Riot Trial Finally To Go to Jury

CHICAGO (AP) - The trial of seven persons charged with inciting rioting during the 1968 Democratic National Convention goes to the jury this week after nearly five months of testimony, disruption and bitter conflict between the defense and Judge Julius J. Hoffman.

The U.S. Dist. Court jury of 10 women and two men already has heard nearly 200 witnesses.

The defense said Saturday it will call two witnesses to answer the government's rebuttal case which lasted a week and involved 23 witnesses.

After that and some legal odds and ends, the defense probably will make the procedural motion for a directed verdict of acquittal. If Judge Hoffman, 74, denies the motion, both sides will deliver closing arguments.

The prosecution has attempted to prove that the defendants' statements, speeches and conversations before the August, 1968 convention in Chicago clearly showed their intent to create a riot situation. The government tried to show that the defendants were not sincere in their negotiations with city officials to secure parade and park permits for convention week demonstrations.

The defense has tried to show the seven men on trial had no intention of creating riots.

Orchard Hill Area Govt. Opens Spring Session

The first area government meeting of the second semester was held on Thursday night February 5, in Grayson Lounge on Orchard Hill. Of particular interest to the area were two committee reports. It was reported that the Board of Trustees had approved the financing of a cost-feasibility study for the proposed multi-purpose dining facilities for the hill. It was also reported that within a week construction of an area for outdoor skating will begin. The central bowl is planned as the area to be flooded.

Two acts of legislation were passed. The first recognized the fight to keep Grayson faculty resident, Mrs. Theresa deKerpely, in the dorm despite efforts to retire her at the end of the semester. The act, "Whereas Mrs. deKerpely Grayson Faculty Resident, has provided the college community with boundless services and whereas her status for future employment as faculty resident is in question, be it resolved that the Orchard Hill Residential College Area Government strongly supports the efforts of Grayson House to retain Mrs. deKerpely and intends to make this stand clear in a letter to the Provost,", was passed unanimously.

The area government also passed its approval on the proposed Residence Hall Act 1970 in its statement, "Whereas the role of Area Government has been a weakly defined statement, and whereas the Student Senate has shown its desire to promote a purpose for area governments, and whereas student power will never by a viable reality in the politics of a large university if it is not united, be it resolved that the Orchard Hill Residential College Area Government approve the proposed Residence Hall Act - 1970 and recommend its passage at the February 11, 1970 Senate meeting.

The area also voted to express its strong disapproval of the proposed room-rent increase and established a committee to look for ways to alleviate the need for the hike or ways to prevent it from becoming a reality.

The next scheduled meeting is set for Thursday, February 19, at 10 p.m. in Grayson Lounge.

Education Should Try New Directions

Education's chief priority should be to change society, the dean of the school of education at the University of Massachusetts said last week.

"We have to find ways to make our kids smarter than we are so that they can find ways to solve problems we haven't," Dean Dwight W. Allen said.

His address on "Priorities on Education" climaxed a three-day conference on "Emerging Patterns in Today's Schools" held at the Concord Middle School and attended by more than 400 teachers and administrators from throughout the northeast. The conference was sponsored by the Concordpublic schools and Educational Coordinates, a consulting firm.

Allen, who also serves on the board of directors of Educational Coordinates, said that "the worst indictment a school can have is to be stable and predictable. Youth today has a new social awareness.

Enumerating other priorities in education, Allen urged the educators to reexamine staff functions and differentiation. "Any teachers that can be replaced by a machine should be," he said. "Anytime I see a teacher cranking ditto machine I hurt. I'm paying three times as much as I should for that service, and it's a profligate waste of resources."

He also called for an evaluation of the formal patterns in teaching and learning. "Let's allow a ninth-grade student to take 12th-grade English and see what happens," he suggested.

Allen concluded that "most schools are too complacent. They say that the traditional way is ipso facto good. My goal is to make a school become uncomfortable so that it will consider new directions and alternatives."

Southern Governors Unite Against School Busing

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) - A group of Southern governors, rebuffed by the courts in efforts to block immediate school desegregation through busing, met Sunday and decided to take their case to Congress.

The chief executives of Alabama Georgia, Mississippi and Louisiana met for almost three hours here, then issued a statment.

"We plan to meet with our respective delegations in Congress and other interested members of Congress in Washington at the earliest practical date so that we may advise them of the gravity of our public school situation and seek a unified course of action to obtain relief from the chaotic conditions now facing our schools," said their statement, read by Gov. John Bell Williams, of Mississippi.

Williams, who called the meeting, and Govs. Albert Brewer of Alabama and John McKeithen of Louisiana, said during a brief news conference after reading the statement that they planned to go to Washington together to meet with their congressmen.

The governors said they expect chief executives and other elected officials from various other Southern states to join with them in the unified campaign.

UMass-Argentine Exchange Underway

The University of Massachusetts has entered into an exchange program with the Argentine Council of Student Exchange in Buenos Aires. Under this new program, three students from Argentina arrivedon campus on Friday, January 24 to spend one month learning about campus life at a major coeducational university and sitting in on courses related to their studies in Buenos Aires.

Julio Velasco and Guillermo Suarez are majoring in Engineering; Horacio Freitas' field is pre-medical studies. Although this is their summer vacation in Argentina, they are working for examinations they will take when they return to Argentina, as well as participating in three courses each at the University of Massachusetts. Mostly, however, the young men from Argentina want to see what it is like to be a student in an American university. In Argentina nearly all students commute to university and there is very little campus life.

As part of the exchange the Office of International Programs is able to offer to University of Massachusetts students the opportunity to spend six weeks in Buenos Aires next summer. They will live with Argentine families, and participate in a program designed to acquaint them with the life and culture of Argentina. The only cost for participation in this program apart from miscellaneous personal expenses is round-trip travel which can be obtained at a reduced rate.

All University of Massachusetts students are eligible to apply for the summer program in Buenos Aires. A knowledge of Spanish would be an asset but is not a requirement. Students wanting more information about this program should contact the Office of International Programs, Whitmore. They might also wish to talk with the visiting students from Argentina. They are living in Prince House or can be contacted through the International Programs Office also.

Turning Point

MANHATTAN, KAN. (AP) - Frank Angelo, managing editor of the Detroit Free Press, says the Detroit riots were the turning point in riot news coverage.

"Since then," he told journalism students at Kansas State University, "the public is getting a more accurate and comprehensive picture in respect to racial problems and the civil rights movement."

Angelo received the Pulitzer prize in 1968 for his newspaper's coverage of the 1967 Detroit riots.

Angelo referred to a proposal made in Washington by Dr. W. Walter Menninger of Topeka that newsmen be licensed just as are lawyers and other professional persons, and said:

"It is nonsense. Who is going to determine who should be licensed?

"It is almost impossible to set up a criteria to license news men that wouldn't lead to some form of control."

Modern Israel Explored At Smith Tomorrow

"Legends of Our Times," a commentary on contemporary Israeli and Jewish experiences, will be the subject of a lecture tomorrow (February 10) at Smith College.

Elie Wiesel, prize-winning author and chronicler of the Holocaust, will speak at 8 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium. Sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations at Smith and Amherst Colleges, the Northampton Jewish Cultural Center, and the Smith Student Lecture Committee, his talk is open to the public without charge.

Hungarian by birth and a teenage survivor of Auschwitz, Wiesel's journalism career took him to Paris, Israel, and ultimately New York where he currently resides.

A prolific writer whose essays and stories have appeared in leading world journals, Wiesel is the author of seven books. His most recent novel, "Beggar in Jerusalem," published last month, was awarded the French Prix de Medicis. Other honors have included the Prix Rivarol and the National Jewish Book award.

This lecture is the second in a series of ten programs on the life and culture of modern Israel. Other events this month in "Israel: 1970" are an exhibit of Israeli art works on display through February 21 in the lobby of the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre in Smith's Center for the Performing Arts; a lecture February 16 on "Israel, Socialism, Imperialism, and Arab Liberation" by Dr. Maurice Zeitlin of the University of Wisconsin; "Sallah," featuring Haym Topol, on February 24.

Financial aid applications, for all forms of assistance for Summer School and the 1970-71 academic year, are now available in the Placement and Financial Aid office, Room 239, Whitmore. A new application must be filed each year whether or not aid has been received previously.
THE DEADLINE FOR FILING IS MARCH 1.

MLK Council to Meet For Reorganization

The Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council will hold an open meeting tonight at 9:00 p.m. in SBA 120. Radio station WMUA will carry live coverage.

The purpose of the meeting is to provide orientation to the upcoming reorganization of the entire King Council. On the weekend of Feb. 21 and 22, the King Council will hold a reorganization conference. At this conference, the Steering Committee, currently the decision-making body of the King Council, will dissolve itself. It will be replaced by the program, structure, and philosophy determined by those attending the conference, which will be open to all who are interested in participating.

Tonight's open meeting will feature addresses by Carl Brown, Kenneth Mosakowski, and Gil Salk. Each will discuss the problems which the King Council has been facing organizationally, describe the general structure of the upcoming conference, and outline their individual views as to what direction the reorganizing might take. They will not present hard-and-fast rules for reorganization, but rather provide ideas from which participants may use their own ideas and inventiveness to help shape the final outcome.

There will also be an opportunity to question the speakers and to hear about current King Council programs. People wishing to join committees may do so at this meeting.

The meeting is open to all who wish to attend. Those in programs currently sponsored by the King Council are particularly urged to attend, as any change may mean an end to that particular program. Those dissatisfied with the King Council as it now exists are also urged to participate so that their views will help in the reorganization process.

And . . .

There will be a meeting of the Martin Luther King Jr. Social Action Council Committee on Race this afternoon at 3:00 p.m. in the Berkshire Room of the Student Union. The first meeting of the semester, it will be used to discuss plans for the coming term.

Among the plans are working to get an anti-discrimination clause included in all state and federal contracts. The clause was drawn up last Spring by Isidore Silver, a professor in the School of Business and an ACLU lawyer.

The Committee on Race will also attempt to ensure that black candidates for the positions of Chancellor and President will be actively sought and fairly evaluated. It will discuss the Black Studies Program with its black proponents, and will use their advice in attempting to gain student support for the Program.

The Committee will also plan educational programs to be run in the dormitories using films and other media as aids.

Members of the University community interested in working with this committee are invited to attend the meeting or leave their name at the King Council office in 207 Hampshire House. The telephone number is 545-0648.

Israel Remains Calm and Confident

(ED. NOTE: The following is the first of three articles written by DAILY COLLEGIAN Editor-in-Chief Don Epstein, who has just returned from a study-tour in the Middle East with twelve other American college newspaper editors.)

By DON EPSTEIN
Editor-in-Chief

JERUSALEM – As Arab leaders met this weekend in Cairo to plan and coordinate new military action against Israel, the citizens of this nation remain calm, cheerful and confident that if a new war erupts soon it will not be fought within the pre-June 1967 boundaries. In fact Israel appears surprisingly quiet and peaceful despite the fact that battles rage on the Suez Canal, several hundred miles away.

The Israelis insist upon direct negotiation with their Arab neighbors before they will relinquish any of the land captured during the six day war. The Arabs, led by Nasser of Egypt, insist that the Jews return to the pre-war boundaries before any discussions could be held. This the Israelis will never do because it would once again put arab tanks within fifteen miles of Tel Aviv, Israel's largest city. However, the Israelis have no intention of annexing all of the occupied territories.

"We will insist on strategic boundaries that we can defend," said Moshe Kol, a member of the Israeli cabinet to a group of American college newspaper editors. "For example we want to stay on Sharm el-Sherkh (southeastern tip of the Sinai peninsula). The Straits of Tiran can only be defended by us. We cannot depend upon the United Nations, we tried once before."

Kol, the Minister of Tourism, said the Israeli cabinet has made no firm decisions about boundaries. "All we ask is for the Arabs to recognize our right to exists," he said.

The minister said that his government would prefer to negotiate with all the Arab states at the same time, although Israel would negotiate with any one individual Arab state at any time.

However, the cabinet member ruled out the possibility that Israel would negotiate with separate representatives of the Palestinian refugees. "They are inhabitants of Jordan," Kol said. "The leader of Jordan is Hussein. If they are not happy with Hussein let them change the government. We will negotiate with any legitimate government of Jordan."

Kol told the editors that Israel has already had unofficial talks with King Hussein of Jordan. "Hussein wanted to start negotiations," he said, "But Nasser said no. Egypt feels it must control all negotiations."

Many Middle East observers say that no true peace can exist until the problem of the Palestinian refugees is solved. These refugees have no love for King Hussein and do not want to become citizens under him. To solve this problem, the Israeli government would be willing to give up a part of the West bank, according to Kol, which could become a separate nation for the Palestinians.

Another topic of discussion is whether the current Israeli air raids against military installations in the suburbs of Cairo are designed to bring about the downfall of Nasser. Both Kol and Professor Dan Scheftan, head of the institute of research on Middle East affairs at Tel Aviv University, say no. "No other Arab leader could be any better for Israel," said Schueftan. "No other Arab leader can come to Israel and say let's make peace. If he did do this than he wouldn't stay alive for long."

According to Schueftan Israel can live with the status quo. Officially Israelis refuse to predict what will happen in the near future; however many Israeli citizens privately predict that a new war is imminent.

Schueftan said that the Arabs now have 170 per cent of what they had for arms at the beginning of the 1967 war, most if not all of it, supplied by the Russians

The Israelis have no interest in extending the current cease fire boundaries. One government official said, "What the hell would we do with Cairo, Amman and Damascus if we captured them. We have enough problems with the occupied territories we hold now."

So far resistance in the occupied lands has been minimal despite the fact that there are approximately one million Arabs living in these areas. Arab residents are free to travel wherever they want to, even across cease fire lines. Many students living in Sinai are free to attend Cairo University and return home whenever they wish. The local governments within the captured lands are still run by Arabs and the Arabs pay taxes only to their local government, not to the Israeli national government. In 1969 the Israeli government spent over $10 million on projects within occupied Jordan and did not receive a penny of it back. For the first time modern methods of agricultural production have been introduced to Arabs who farm the fertile land of the West bank. Certain areas of the Sinai, which until now have been a barren desert, are being developed into trade and tourist areas.

The Israelis, and even the Arabs, that we talked to were confused about President Nixon's Mid-East policy. "One week Secretary Rogers tells us to pull back and the next week President Nixon tells us to stay put," said one Israeli. Most of the persons questioned agreed that Israel would feel better if it were a Democratic Administration in power now instead of the Republicans.

It is obvious, even to the Jews, that in recent months Israel has lost percentage points in world opinion. No longer does the tiny state of three million play the role of underdog to its neighboring states of over 100 million people. However, the Israelis explain their nation must maintain the upper hand since the Russians and French continue to ship arms into the Arab nations and the military balance of power could conceivably change over night. Also the Israelis point out that while their Arab neighbors can afford to make mistakes, they cannot, since just one mistake on their part, could lead to the destruction of their homeland.

It should be noted that in recent weeks Nasser has not been calling for the Israelis to return to the pre-war borders. He has been calling for all the Arab nations to join together to destroy Israel once and for all.

The Israelis listen to Nasser, but realize that such en eventuality is extremely unlikely as long as they are able to maintain the upper hand.

As Cabinet Member Kol said, "We will not move from the Suez Canal or from other occupied lands until we are guaranteed peace and no more war."

Israeli and Egyptian Jets Battle Over Nile Delta

NY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli and Egyptian jets fought an air battle Sunday over the northern Nile delta deep inside Egypt. The Israelis claimed two Egyptian MIG21s shot down and the Egyptians said they destroyed one Israeli Phantom Neither side conceded losses.

The Egyptian jets engaged the Israeli planes as they attacked two Egyptian army camps north and south of Cairo.

The raiding jets struck at Inshash, 12 miles northeast of the Egyptian capital, and a camp near Holwan, 15 miles south of Cairo, the military said.

The Israelis said the MIGs were hit by cannon fire at "medium altitude". One was seen exploding in the air and the other crashed in flames, the spokesman said.

The Egyptian account of the downing of an Israeli Phantom said it was one of four taken by surprise by Egyptian MIG21s on a training mission near the raided area north of the Feita.

This is the third Phantom jet the Egyptians claimed to have destroyed. An unofficial tally of Israeli claims puts the total of Egyptian warplanes knocked out since the 1967 war at 66.

Both sides said Egyptian jets attacked Israeli positions along the central sector of the Suez Canal near Firdan. Cairo said the fighter bombers strafed "army encampments, artillery and tank positions." TelAviv said they caused no casualties or damage.

Israeli jets later struck for 50 minutes at Egyptian targets at the southern end of the canal, a spokesman announced in Tel Aviv.

Israeli pilots reported a massive explosion at the target near Holwan. Cairo said 12 civilians were injured.

Holwan on the Nile river is one of Egypt's largest industrial centers. Egypt and the Soviet Union are cooperating on a giant steel complex being built in the city.

It was Israel's ninth reported strike over the Nile since Jan. 7. It was believed to be the first time Egyptian jets have challenged marauding Israeli planes deep inside Egypt.

Air raid siren possibly triggered by the Israeli raids wailed in the Cairo suburb of Heliopolis where leaders of five Arab nations are meeting to coordinate strategy in the Middle East conflict.

Windows were rattled by an unexplained boom and the thud of anti-aircraft guns was heard.

It has been 11 days since the outskirts of Cairo were a target for an Israeli air attack but observers said an Israeli raid to impress the leaders of Egupt, Jordan, Syria, Iraq and Sudan was probable.

In other developments, Tel Aviv reported an Israeli border guard was killed Sunday when he drove over an explosive charge planted in a road near Ramallah on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan.

A minor guerrilla organization declared in Beirut it opposes the return of Lebanese security forces to Palestine refugee camps in Lebanon.

The Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine charged that the move was aimed at gradually forcing Arab guerrillas out of Lebanon.

Al Ahram, a semi-official Egyptian newspaper, reported Sunday that the Egyptian frogmen who carried out the attack on two Is-

Repression, the police politics of control, is coming down upon our heads. The war in Vietnam is NOT ending; it is escalating, and the draft will still get you, no matter what your number is. When a state begins to lose control, it will resort to any means necessary to maintain that control and that means police and laws. There are close parallels between this country today and the government's efforts (along with our willingness to comply) to control our lives and the world and pre-World War II Germany.

Cairo Summent

CAIRO (AP) - Leaders of five Arab nations resumed their meetings Sunday in President Gamal Abdel Nasser's yellow domed Zahraa Palace to work out a unified plan for dealing with Israel's stepped up Mideast offensive.

Just before the Sunday morning session began, air raid sirens sounded and Cairo residents heard the thud of bombs and the crunch of anti aircraft guns firing at Israeli jets attacking the industrial center of Holwan, only 20 miles away. Israeli jets also struck Inchas, 25 miles from the capital.

Political and military committees were formed Saturday on the first day of the meeting among leaders of Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Iraq and Sudan. Informed sources said they would report during a meeting Sunday night at Nasser's palace in the fashionable suburb of Heliopolis five miles from the city center.

North Vietnam Rejects Plan

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) - The North Vietnamese said Saturday they have rejected a plan to neutralize the strategic Plain of Jars in northern Laos. The proposal was made by the Laotian Premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma.

The Laotian government has begun evacuating residents from the area in case of an offensive by North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao troops there.

The North Vietnamese Embassy said Charge d'Affaires VuTien met Saturday with Khamphan Panya of the Laotian Foreign Ministry and informed him of a statement issued Friday by the North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry.

Ripon Society Rates Brook, Kennedy High

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - The Ripon Society, a group of young liberal Republicans, have devised a senatorial rating system that is designed to show the "new cleavages" that will replace the "fading polomics of the New Deal."

The ratings, announced Sunday, measured voting records on 29 bills, comparing the senators' votes to the Ripon position. Under the system, a senator voting consistently with President Nixon's announced preferences would have received a 34 per cent rating.

Sens. Charles A. Goodell of New York and John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky received nearly perfect scores. Massachusetts Sen. Edward W. Brooke ranked third with a 90 per cent score, while Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts was one of the highest scoring Democrats with 80 per cent.

The society opposed President Nixon's position on four of 14 issues, including his nomination of Clement Haynsworth for the U.S. Supreme Court and a proposed Anti Ballistic Missile system ABM.

The society conceded that voting records do not tell the entire story.

"Neither virtue nor wisdom nor courage can be adequately scored on a percentage basis," it said.

There will be a meeting for all Psychology majors Thursday, February 12 -- 8:00 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The Psychology Department presently has over 850 majors, an increase of over 40% in two years. With so large a department, student organization and student participation in the department is necessary in order that each student has a voice and feels a part of their educational experience.

An undergraduate affairs committee is already established (Sept. 1969) and consists of 5 faculty and 5 students. The function of the committee is to make recommendations to the department in all areas involving undergraduate education.

Thus far it has been instrumental in gaining student votes on the Executive Committee (1 undergraduate and 1 graduate) and in Faculty meetings (5 undergraduate and 5 graduate). The Committee has also set up six sub-committees to look into different aspects of the department in order to initiate reform. The areas are:

SUMMER INTERNSHIP: To continue a program started last summer in trying to place qualified students in summer jobs related to Psychology.

COURSE AND CURRICULUM CHANGE: To make proposals concerning new courses and curriculum changes, such as interdisciplinary courses and inter-departmental majors, plus more and different Psych courses.

STUDENT QUESTIONNAIRE: To develop a profile of the student population of the department in order to more directly find out their needs.

STUDENT ADVISING: To set up a more efficient and meaningful advising program for majors.

HONORS PROGRAM: To review the existing honors program and make suggestions as to how it could be improved.

EVALUATION: To find effective and valid means of evaluating courses and instructors for the purpose of improving the quality of the courses offered.

The main purpose of the Thursday meeting is to get student viewpoints and ideas on how to set up a student organization or channels (perhaps a psychology student Council) which would enable the psychology majors to have meaningful representation on the undergraduate affairs committee, the executive committee and at department faculty meetings.

We need the help of all psychology majors.

Please come. Make your voice heard.

Rent Increase

There have been very few events in the past which have exicted the great mass of UMass students to the point where they participate in a non-academic activity. But whenever the student body has become involved in any kind of demonstration or program in great numbers, the motivating factor has always centered on student economic needs.

It now appears that the Administration, by proposing a 33% increase in student room rents, has invited a major student protest, one which -- if led skillfully -- could advance beyond the bounds of purely economic needs.

No one is disputing the fact that the University's Building Authority is in a serious financial situation. The Authority has to complete financing for the new dormatory complex next to WOPE and, because of existing state limits on its buying power, cannot float any long term loans in the present market. The Authority, the Administration also claims, has no money to complete payments on several completed building projects and is unable to finance any major renovations of older dorms.

The Treasurer's office will be circulating about 15 charts to illustrate the Building Authority's troubles this week, and these charts will provide Treasurer Johnson with the bulk of the argument he will present to the Student Senate Wednesday night.

But this is not the issue.

A University is supposedly designed for its students, and all of its policies and programs, therefore, should be primarily designed to help students. But the UMass Treasurer's office has refused to comment on any alternative plans for raising the money the Building Authority needs. They have implied that raising rents was their first brain storm, and that they are content to wish students luck in paying a larger bill next year without first determining if a larger bill is really necessary.

The increased room rents, along with other rising expenses next fall and the increased difficulty of getting scholarships and loans may prevent some students from returning to school next fall. Thus the Treasurer's Office, in attempting to raise rents, is harming, rather than helping students.

It has been argued by many students that the major reason the Treasurer's office, along with other Administrative departments at UMass, often acts against the student well-being is that virtually all administrative decisions are made without any real student participation.

No student opinions were heard before the Treasurer's decision to raise rents leaked out, and this fact is considered by many Student Senators as "The Administration's ultimate slap in the face."

These Senators are planning a major campaign, beginning Wednesday night, to force the Treasurer's Office to at least look for alternate means of fund raising. They plan to tell the Administration bluntly that students can no longer be excluded from making decisions which effect them. And unlike other "student power" demonstrations of the past, it appears that this time the Senate will be able to gather impressive student backing.

Last year when students demonstrated against a plan to have residents of tradition dorms pay the same rent as residential colleges, they won. The Administration's proposed rent increase this year will affect more students, and the protests which several Senators are planning should be larger than those of a year ago.

As Senator Geoffery Levine said last week, "By trying to jam this increase down student's throats without asking for any student opinions, the Administration has gone too far...they've asked for it and they're going to get it."

Keeping The Peace

WASHINGTON - The secret to a strong diplomatic posture these days is to have a healthy arms-export sales policy. No underdeveloped country is interested in having a major power for a friend unless fighter planes go along with it.

One of the most active major powers in arms sales these days is France, which has just announced it sold 110 Mirage fighters to Libya.

Pierre la Guerre, who is director of the French Peace Through War Equipment Commission, told me:

"France has been unjustly criticized for selling French fighters to Libya, but we feel this gesture will help bring about peace in the Middle East."

"How can you bring about a peaceful settlement if you give Libya airplanes?"

"The key to peace," Mr. LaGuerre said, "is trust. We have to get the Arabs to trust us. They will only trust us if we give them fighter planes to use against the Israelis."

"But won't that beat up the war?"

"Au contraire. Once the Arabs have the planes, we can bring our influence on them NOT to use them."

"You mean, if you didn't give them the planes, then they wouldn't listen to you if you asked them to find a peaceful settlement to the Middle East?"

"Exactement," Monsieur La Guerre said. "We do not fool ourselves that we will have great influence just because we sell Libya 50 fighter planes. We must also sell Iraq fighter planes and Sudan fighter planes and Saudi Arabia fighter planes.

"We must win the Arabs' confidence by selling them as many airplanes as they can afford."

"Why don't you give the Israelis fighter planes, too? I understand you have 50 of them which they already paid for."

"Nothing would please us more than to give Israel the 50 planes they ordered and paid for. But if we did this, we would lose our influence with the Arab world, and then the Arabs would never agree to a peaceful solution to the crisis."

"You're not giving the Arabs planes because Israel sailed five embargoed missile boats out of Cherbourg's harbor without the French government's permission are you?"

"We would never withhold planes because the Israelis pulled a dirty sneaky trick like that. The French government may be opportunistic, but it's not petty. Our main concern is that if we don't sell planes to the Arabs, the Arabs will buy their planes from the Soviets. Does the Free World want the Arabs to have French planes or Soviet planes to keep the peace in the Middle East?"

"That's a difficult question," I said.

"Every plane we sell the Arabs is a blow to the Russians. When Libya announced it was buying French fighters, the Soviets realized we had struck a blow for peace."

"I thought the French had an embargo on arms to the Middle East."

"We do. The embargo is on countries who are directly involved in the conflict. Libya and Iraq have nothing to do with the fighting."

"But Libya doesn't have any fighter pilots. What are they going to do with 50 fighter planes."

"They can trade them for French tanks and rocket launchers we just sold to Yemen."

Repression at Home

There is a lot going on we never hear about. Every once in a while the Daily Grind news media lets slip a hint of a struggle taking place in this country and in the world. The mass media, rooted in the assumptions of a life-denying culture, has its ways of distorting and manipulating events and situations. If something is threatening to the status quo, you can believe you won't read any honest account of it in the Daily Grung. The point is, a struggle against the status quo IS taking place, and, in reaction, the government is becoming increasingly repressive. Repression can be political, cultural, and economic and we are getting it from all angles.

Do you remember all the terrible things we learned about totalitarian states? Are you familiar with the righteous horror with which we regarded the activities of the German HUNS and those demonic Japanese NIPS and those greasy Italian FASCISTS or whoever happened to be the enemy of our definition of freedom that year, that era. Does a very Christian shudder run down your spine when you think of the mass graves and ovens of Nazi brutality? Recall all your images of a horror police state, of a government gone insane and the people letting it destroy their lives. Have you ever been stopped on the street and required to show your papers, your identification? Have you ever been required to stand in long lines for hours and hours?

Well, keep all those things in mind, because we just may soon have a police state for our very own. One such, already exists for anyone who effectively steps out of line - The Black Panthers, draft resisters, community organizers. Even though it states in our constitution that we have a right to alter the state by any means possible if it no longer serves the interest of the people and that we have a right to at least talk about the most brutal means of change, armed revolution, we had better not try to.

To be outspoken about what you believe if your beliefs contradict the citadal of "public opinion" means to be considered dangerous or weird. John Sinclair, a political-cultural figure in Michigan, has been jailed for ten years for possession of TWO JOINTS OF GRASS. (Remember? Grass means death, insanity, rape.)

All the large cities in this country now have adequate riot control equipment . . . and among those

24-ring Circus

To the editor:

Excuse me, but I'd like a meaningless living experience.

I have no use for the capitalized concepts (Meaning, Maturity, Responsibility, Sensitivity, Commitment) which are currently used to justify any half-baked plan.

I'm referring to the new 24-ring circus policy, otherwise known as "open housing" or "a meaningful living experience."

Let's decide whether we're running a university here or a circus. Once we agree on a common goal, we can tailor all policies to implement that goal. If we want a circus, we should make a definite Commitment and go all the way.

Go-go girls in dorm lobbies, underground movies in Whitmore, acid rock bands in Bartlett, day-long happy hours in Hasbrook.

When my dorm voted in 24-hour open house, I immediately started looking for an apartment, found one with perspective roommates I liked very much, and began the procedure for moving out of the dorm.

But then I was told there would be no abatement on the room rent - none whatsoever - and there was no dorm I could move into where they didn't already have 24-hour open house or weren't about to vote on it with a high likelihood of it's being accepted.

So I'm trapped.

No privacy. Guys walking into my room without knocking. Drunk guy in bathroom taking mirror off the wall, smashing his fist through the window, yelling obscenities in the hall.

Party going on in nearby room, stereo blaring. No assurance that it will end at a reasonable hour. Can't walk around comfortably ugly and half-dressed. Have to get dressed up to go take a shower.

I can envision walking into the bathroom someday and finding some guy throwing up in the toilet. Excuse the bad taste involved in mentioning this, but I don't want to gloss over any implications of a meaningful living experience.

And, we are told that if there is any theft or vandalism on our corridors, we must all chip in to pay for it. I don't even want these people here, but I'm supposed to pay for their destruction.

If the majority of students want this open housing, I don't ask them to submit to my wishes. To avoid unpleasantness (and there has already been plenty), I'm willing to quietly move out.

But I'm not allowed to. No alternatives. Trapped.

I simply want to study. Is that too much to ask for at a university? And I'd like a little privacy too.

I'm not going to quietly accept this situation. If something is not done for those of us who came up here under the apparently false assumption that a university is for learning, I will raise as much hell as possible.

If there is anyone else here who wants a meaningless living experience, start complaining.

Who Controls Your Money?

I'm writing this because there doesn't seem to be anything else I can do now. I'm committeed out. This is in no way a formal letter from the Greenough Community, these are only my feelings on the subject. It all started sometime last spring. Greenough and a lot of other Houses were getting tired of R.S.O. They were sick of its paternalism and exasperated with its implied "in loco parentis" control over the monies collected within the House. So last spring the groundwork was laid for what amounted to a money holdout for this fall. Dorms all over campus were going to withold their monies from R.S.O. The overall effect was to force the Student Senate to work on an R.S.O. Financial Policy that would allow the individual dorms to have primary control over the monies collected. It was generally felt that we could comply with state laws by submitting our books at the end of each semester to allow for central accounting.

I think it is essential that a group feel they can have effect. Invisibility, anominity, and a sense of powerlessness are general illnesses in our society. Somehow people must be given the faith that they can shape their own destinies. There is too much passivity in our social systems. And I think a large part of the fault lies within the organizational structures. The form of the organizational structure dictates, in some way, the type of behavior expected of a participant. In another word, benevolent paternalism dictates docility. If freedom is to ever work, a mental set has to be operative that challenges, and critically examines issues, conditions or situations. If rote acceptance becomes even an implied norm, then 1984 is only fourteen years away. The forms of government we set up within the university are models of those that exist outside. And that in itself is pretty menacing if the net effect is to train or condition people for docility.

The R.S.O. office as a central collecting and disbursing agency may be efficient from an administrative viewpoint but from the perspective of a student, it is unnecessarily limiting -- stultifying. There are a lot of side issues. The amount that can be drawn out at a particular time and spent in one place is limited. And R.S.O. vouchers are not accepted everywhere. So again from a perceptional point of view, the R.S.O. office controls how much you can spend, where you can spend it, and what you can spend it for. I can remember back in the fall when the student senate appropriated money for Free University City. The money was then effectively frozen until members of Free U. together with Senate Executive Group sat down with a Dean and asked him why the money was tied up. His response was that he wanted to warn the student senate they might be pouring money down a rat hole. I can remember when I was just 16 and I wanted to spend $300.00 of my own money on an old car. My father stepped in and was going to refuse to allow me to spend it. I'll never know whether the car was worth it or not because he won that particular argument. He pulled rank and locked up my bank account.

R.S.O. is something like a benevolent father. It controls what we spend, how much, and what we can buy. And it also is kind enough to cover for our mistakes. If a dorm government misuses its funds, R.S.O. is there to help. It will cover your mistakes. Isn't it nice that they are watching out for us.

I think it's high time dorm governments live without this guardian angel. If we are at all an educational institution then we had better be able to learn from our mistakes. More important, we should be encouraging the kind of experimentation that will lead to alternative governing forms. If we are to set up any viable form of dorm governing/coordinating system, then that system has to have its roots and its responsibilities wholly anchored in the dorm. Setting up overseers knocks out the props from under a local government and weakens the communications links between governing form and constituency. If monies are collected within the dorm, then the people within the dorm have the responsibility to see that it is spent the way they want it spent. If some dorm officer embezzles or spends money in some autocratic way, then the PEOPLE should hold him responsible, not some overseeing body. If we are to involve people in the active control and planning of their own collective destinies, we can't do it with structures that discourage his participation.

I'm always wary of laws or rules that have as their only defense "protection" of an individual or group from itself. And about a week ago, I went to a senate Ways and Means Committee meeting that subpoenaed 22 dorms in order to protect them. Some 22 dorms had violated R.S.O. financial policy in one way or another. Most had simply decided that they were going to spend their own money in any way they saw fit. Well, after assurances that they were not in any way a judicial body but just a fact finding group, the hearing proceeded. It was the most demeaning experience I've ever seen one student group submit another to. Images of the House Unamerican Activities Committee and the Spanish Inquisition danced through my mind as I watched one dorm officer after another take his place and be thoroughly browbeaten with intimidation. At the end of the night, to my knowledge, only four dorms survived this meat grinder. Butterfield, Chadbourne, Brooks, and Greenough would not take their cases to some judicial body arguing all the way for some reform of an oppressive and paternal regulation.

Again this amazing committee met, I guess it was Feb. 5, and decided that because they didn't recognize any of our dorm officers (a technicality), and because they could not prosecute me, a graduate student, we would be denied our day in court. That pompous group has acted as a judicial body and declared us guilty without allowing us the power of either argument or rebuttal. Next they issued some sort of order to Dean Field, who is my superior in a chain of command way, to order me to turn the dorm money over to R.S.O.

I don't know the fate of the other dorms yet, but I do know that if they divide us and manage to get us to comply in some way or another then all the heat will blow over and the energy to promote change, to attempt to gain control of our own destinies will dissipate to the four winds as we wink into the tepid water of another mundane semester.

Oh the student senate can have its moment of heroism if its clever enough to rise to the occasion and fight the rent and fees hikes, but the question of whether the individual serves the system or whether the system serves the individual will remain submerged as long as half the campus can be subpoenaed to protect itself from itself.

Our senator just came in and told me to expect a call from Dean Scanlon since Dean Field was out of town. He asked an officer in R.S.O. what happens if I don't turn the money in. The response, He's a University employee isn't he, -- well he doesn't have to remain a University employee.

Do It Again, Mr. Wilson . . .

Mr. Wilson's letter (The Country is in Trouble) was beautiful, just the reply that Miss Shanler's letter warranted. But there were statements in his letter that, while certainly true to him in the passion of his argument, must have been a low blow to a few people (how many I don't know; too few, I'm afraid).

Like for instance the guy who came to my door last night asking for money for Mrs. Delee's cause. He'd been going door to door for five hours, and about as long the night before leaving papers explaining the cause so we'd be prepared. He was cold, tired, and white. So was the guy who'd come a few weeks ago collecting food and clothing for the same cause. Mr. Wilson was probably doing the same thing in some other part of town, or organizing the thing, which may have been a better idea, since if he'd appeared at my door full of fury and demands, sure I'd have given (I'm a coward and anyway, the things were already set aside for that purpose), but a number of other things wouldn't have found their way to the collection box at Zayres. Incidently, if blankets, etc. are still being collected for Dorchester County, and will be for a while, please publicize it again. My old home town is full of frustrated do-gooders.

Whatever Mr. Wilson may think of the motives and humanity of the relatively few whites involved, they serve more of a purpose than he may realize, especially in making people like me ashamed that we aren't doing more. The very fact that it is our "brothers and cousins in South Carolina" that are immediately responsible for oppression makes some of us valuable. Guilt can do a good deal, but it can also be pushed to the souring point.

It would be a help if we could get unhung from this "silent majority" bit. Silence is not only their most attractive quality, as Mr. Wilson neatly puts it; it may well be the only thing they have in common. Scratch the "silent majority" (that's ALL of us who haven't publicized our views) and you find millions of individuals as divided in their thinking (those who think at all) as the people who makes themselves heard. As for those who don't think, forget about them. Usually you can. A dedicated minority, whether in terms of race, opinion, or anything else, has far more power than a majority, however big, that remains silent. Mr. Wilson knows that; that's where he gets his strength. I don't know where the young man who was here last night gets his; he's part of a minority too, determined by ideas and commitment rather than color, but apparently invisible in the face of the myth of the "white community".

A word for Mrs. Delee, too, a great woman; how does she feel on hearing that "this young black generation" takes credit for it all? She probably just laughs. She has more important things to worry about.

It was a great letter, though, Mr. Wilson. Hit us again.

Tests Defended

UMass Research Plan Asks Boland's Aid

Test scores as a standard for college admission are defended by Eugene S. Wilson, dean of admission at Amherst College, in a report released recently.

Wilson's position runs directly counter to the action taken two weeks ago by another selective New England men's college, Bowdoin, which has permitted optional use college board scores by candidates for entrance.

Wilson asserted, "We know that marks and test scores are not certain predictors of academic success; that they do not measure the total worth of a human being.

WASHINGTON - U.S. Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Springfield, has pledged to cooperate with a University professor seeking federal funds for a U.S. Forest Service research branch unit in Western Massachusetts.

Arnold D. Rhodes, Chairman of the Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management at the University of Massachusetts, proposed the unit be established at Amherst to work in conjunction with university environmental studies.

Rhodes estimated the program would cost about $300,000-$350,000 annually. Boland said it would be difficult to get the funds added to the fiscal 1971 budget since the item was not requested by the Nixon administration.

Boland said, however, he would make formal requests to both the U.S. Forest Service and to the Appropriations Subcommittee on the Interior Department to include some of the money this year. He will seek guarantees that funds be requested in the fiscal 1972 budget.

Rhodes seeks a unit of about eight research scientists and a supporting staff of 10 technical, clerical and administrative personnel to be housed on the University campus near Holdsworth Hall.

Basic issues the unit and the University would study are "the interactions between these forested or otherwise tree-associated open-space areas, and the needs of and problems created by the cities and their expansion into the bordering countryside," Rhodes said.

Specific problems the course would examine include:

The role played by trees and forests in removing air pollutants abating noise and improving the environment.

The effect of trees in highly populated areas.

The relationship between open and developed space and the desirable mix of housing, business areas and open space.

How open space areas can benefit the residents.

The Forest Service's main Northeastern station is located near Philadelphia, although it once was headquartered at Amherst.

Boland praised Rhodes' efforts, and said that as a member of the House Appropriations Committee, he would discuss the proposal with members of the Interior subcommittee.

"This project and projects like it are necessary to combat environmental pollution problems," Boland said.

Frosh Pucksters Fall To BC Freshmen, 6-1

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

CHESTNUT HILL - In freshman hockey, the UMass frosh lost to the Boston College frosh, 6-1, on Friday evening at the Heights. The Little Redmen did not only have to contend with a high-scoring Eaglet offense and former Norwood star Neil Higgins in goal, but biased referees.

The officials called 12 penalties against UMass, including a ten-minute misconduct against defenseman Dave Branch because the official, while skating backwards toward the scoring table, bumped into Branch; needless to say no one understood that call or many of the other ones for that matter. The Eaglets were angels, having only two penalties called against them, the last one coming at 19:58 of the third period.

Peter Ericson managed to keep the score respectable after two periods, 3-0, making 20 saves, including three breakaways against him. His counterpart Higgins completely stifled the UMass offense, stopping freshman sensation Pat Keenan for the first time this year. Prior to the BC game, Keenan had 16 goals and 11 assists in only five games.

One reason for UMass' poor offensive showing was the fact that it was the Little Redmen's first game since Dec. 17. Their passing was poor and they had trouble getting the puck out of their own zone against the Eaglets forechecking. Any other offensive momentum UMass could mount the officials quickly stopped by calling penalties.

Ed Kenty beat Ericson to the glove side at 13:01 of the first period and BC lead, 1-0. The Eaglets continued to control play during the first period as they outhustled the Little Redmen, who seemed rusty after their long lay-off.

With 50 seconds left in the period Keenan stole the puck and passed to Don Yaune who unleashed a powerful shot on Higgins. Higgins was unable to control the rebound and a big pile-up resulted in front of the net. Keenan, lying on his back, knocked the puck into the net, but the goal was disallowed because Keenan knocked the puck into the net with his glove.

The Little Redmen were unable to do much better in the second period. Boston College was forechecking effectively, keeping constant pressure on Ericson. The Eaglets scored at 7:21 when Brian Cambell took a pass from Bob Murphy and beat Ericson to the open side of the goal. It was a fine shot and Peter had almost no chance of stopping the puck.

Four minutes later Kanty fed the puck to Brian Murphy in front of the crease. Murphy beat Ericson to the right corner and the score was BC 3, UMass 0.

The Little Redmen attempted to apply more pressure on Higgins, but the Eaglet's defensemen were able to clear the puck from their zone and stop the offensive attempt. Higgins blocked several shots, including a breakaway by Keenan with ten seconds left in the period.

Ericson re-injured his knee and was replaced in goal. Higgins was replaced because the Boston College coach felt the game was beyond the Little Redmen's reach. The Eaglets proved their coach to be right as they scored two goals in four minutes, officially putting the game out of reach.

Rich Riely averted a shutout for UMass, scoring at 4:38. Ed Kimbel scored the last Boston College goal at 14:33. The rest of the game was rather sloppy, and the Little Redmen were constantly forced to kill penalties as the officials were calling everything and anything.

Hockey officials have an extremely tough job and usually perform their assignments well. Friday's game was the exception. If they were the brothers of the Boston College coach, it wouldn't surprise anyone the way they were calling penalties. It is a bad practice to blame losses on officiating, but this is one case where the officiating was a major cause for the loss.

Grapplers Dominate Williams College for Easy 33-3 Victory

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Completely dominating Williams College in a 33-3 victory, the UMass wrestling team had one of its' easiest meets of the season on Saturday afternoon. The win upped the Redmen's record to 7 wins and four losses and they now sport a 7-1 record in New England competition.

Williams had two strikes against itself before the meet even started as it forfeited at two weight classes and the Redmen had ten points without even getting on the mat. The beneficiaries of the forfeits were UMass' Dave Reynolds at 134 lbs. and Bruce Buckbee at 190.

In actual competition, the Redmen won the first five matches on their way to the rout. Nick DiDomenico broke open a tight match with a strong third period en route to a 13-5 win, in his 118-lb. match. Barry Godowsky, a sophomore who was taking the place of the sick Rick Tyma, followed with an impressive 6-0 victory.

After the forfeit at 134, Sheldon Goldberg finally won a match after three straight draws, as he pinned Foster at 1:48 of the second period. This was the only pin of the meet and upped the Redman lead to 16-0 at that point in the meet.

Steve Jones, wrestling in his first varsity match, scored a third period takedown to give him a 6-4 win over Hipp of Williams. Jones was replacing Clay Jester, who was sick, and although he was six pounds lighter than his opponent, he did a fine job.

Williams' Melherney won the 157-lb. match over Jim Godkin, but Tom Young got the Redmen back on the winning road with a 4-2 win. Young was wrestling for the first time since the Pennsylvania trip and he needed riding time to clinch the win.

Tom Andrewes continued to win for the Redmen. He shook off a scoreless first period and completely dominated his opponent and won 12-2. George Zguris wound up the victory with a 5-0 win over Hitchins, who was supposed to be one of the best heavyweights in the New England area.

The win gave the Redmen a lift after last weeks disappointing loss to Springfield. Coach Homer Barr was pleased with the aggressiveness of the team and looks for more of the same in Wednesday's meet at UConn.

Earl Lorden Honored

(Reprinted and condensed from 'The Springfield Republican' in a sports article entitled "Earl Lorden Inducted Into Mass. Baseball coaches Hall of Fame")

MEDFORD - Much of Earl E. Lorden's life has been spent coaching baseball.

For that reason and for the fact he was a good coach, Lorden was inducted into the Massachusetts Coaches Association Hall of Fame.

Lorden, who coached at Turners Falls High School and the University of Massachusetts, retired in 1966.

He spent 25 years at Turners before moving to the University of Massachusetts in 1947.

Lorden enjoyed 13 winning seasons at UMass where his teams won over 200 games. His clubs won two Yankee Conference championships, and shared the title twice.

His teams competed in five District I Tournaments and in 1954 as District I champions competed in the NCAA World Series at Omaha, Neb.

Among Lorden's outstanding players at UMass was Dick Bergquist, the current University of Massachusetts baseball coach.

Lorden was named Assistant Athletic Director at UMass in 1954 and served in that capacity until his retirement.

Fr. Gymnasts Dump B.S.C.

In a home meet Saturday afternoon, the UMass freshmen gymnasts defeated Boston State College, 128.95 - 111.30.

For UMass, Dan Spier won the all-around competition edging out teammate Steve Scuderi, 43.05 - 42.45. Other noteworthy performances were turned in by Jay Aronstein, who scored at 8.05 in the still rings event, and Al Mancini, who took first on side horse with a 7.2.

UMass took first in four of the six events. Leong of Boston State edged out Spier and Henry of UMass in floor exercise by .2 points for first. Montani won the long horse vault for Boston State with an 8.5.

For UMass, Mancini won the side horse event, Spier the still rings and parallel bars and Scuderi the horizontal bar.

UMass Crunches UVM In Yan-Con Tilt, 93-59

Brook, Erving, Gallagher, Shine

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Assistant Sports Editor

BURLINGTON, Vt. - After playing out-of-league opponents for nearly two months, the UMass basketball team marked its return to the old Yankee Conference by thumping Vermont, 93-59, here Saturday night.

Red-hot shooting by Ray Ellerbrook, expected all-around great play by Julius Erving, sparkling defensive work by Jack Gallagher and fine playmaking by Mike Pagliara paved the way as the Redmen ran their record to 10-6.

UMass is now 3-2 in the Conference, good for second place behind 4-1 Connecticut and 4-1 Rhode Island. The last time before Saturday that the Redmen played Yan-Con basketball was on Dec. 16 when they lost miserably to UConn, 88-71. Since that time, they have played ten contests against a variety of outside opponents, against which opposition they were 6-4.

Ellerbrook, who had played his worst varsity ball against Boston College last Tuesday and followed that with a so-so game against Rider last Thursday, really broke out against the Catamounts.

UMass' captain, who hit only two of 13 shots against the Eagles, connected on ten of 11 field attempts and two of three free throw attempts for 22 points against UVM.

Erving did a yeoman's job for the Redmen, as usual. The smooth soph tallied a game high 25 points, picked off 18 rebounds, blocked a few shots and intimidated a couple of Catamounts who had short-lived ideas of driving for lay-up baskets.

Gallagher was again immense on defense as he continues to play a vital role for upward bound UMass. Not only did he give Vermont star Frank Martiniuk and other Catamounts fits on defense, but he led Erving in rebounds at halftime, 11-9. Seeing limited action in the second half, the 6'4 senior finished with 13 bounds.

Given ample time to display his floor-general talents, Pagliara who relieved John Betancourt seven and a half minutes into the fray, came through in fine fashion. The 5'10 soph ran the club well, handling the ball in a smooth, easy manner. He also chipped in with ten points, making good on five of six shots from the floor.

The outcome of the contest itself was assured in the early goings. After five minutes of play had elapsed, UMass was on top, 10-1. Four minutes later, the advantage was 13 points, 18-5.

While the Cats were scoring five more points, the visitors tallied eight and, with 8:19 left, the Redmen were on top, 26-10. While the Cats were scoring five more points, the visitors tallied 14 and, with 3:48 left, the Redmen were on top, 40-15. For all intents and purposes, the affair was over.

By halftime UMass had stretched its lead a little more to 48-20. Important keys to the first half success were five assists by Gallagher and three by Erving.

The second half was substitution time for coach Jack Leaman as the Redmen coasted to leads of 59-28 with about 15 minutes left, 68-40 with 10:02 to go, 79-63 with about five minutes remaining and 93-59 at the final buzzer.

UMass' next opponent, in case one hasn't already been informed, is Holy Cross on Tuesday night at eight at the Cage as the Redmen play the first of their three most important games, all in a row. After the Cross tilt, UMass journeys to Storrs, Ct. and Kingston, R.I., for vital Yan-Con games against UConn and URI on Feb. 14 and Feb. 17 respectively.

HOW ABOUT??? - How about the Redmen shooting 50% from the field as compared to UVM's 28.4%?....Sophomore Rick Vogeley getting eight points and seven rebs, along with committing about six turnovers, in the five minutes that he played?....Bill Kesgen being the only Redman not to score because his teammates couldn't get the ball to him when he was standing all alone under the UMass basket as the final buzzer sounded? ....Bob Dempsey staying away from the old hook shot and relying on a driving lay-up instead for his two points?....Kesgen and Dempsey missing the team bus ride from the Sheraton Motor Inn in Burlington to the UVM gym because they were still asleep in their room?....And, last but not least, how about a Vermont student commenting to one of the Catamount players after the game, "I thought you played well in the first half of the first half.?"

Redmen Bow to Bowdoin . . .

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

UMass hockey ran into the Bowdoin buzz saw Friday night at Orr Rink and came out on the short side of a 2-0 decision before a near-capacity crowd. The win raised Bowdoin's league leading Division II record to 6-0, 9-2 overall and dropped UMass' mark to 5-4 in division and 5-5 overall.

The key to the game was hitting or rather, the lack of it on the part of the Redmen. Bowdoin, easily the best team UMass has faced at home, proved to be a well drilled, swift-skating outfit which used its size to advantage.

With the exception of a few occasions, the Polar Bears were in commnd, although at no time did they threaten to run the Redmen out of the rink.

Bowdoin went out in front at 4:56 of the first period on soph Jim Burnett's goal. Burnett, all alone to UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty's right and out about ten feet took a pass from Tom Murphy who dug the puck out of the corner and let loose with a low scorcher which broke through Flaherty's pads. Defenseman Bob Kullen got the other assist on the play.

In the first period, UMass had several opportunities but could not capitalize on them. The Redmen also had some difficulty in bringing the puck out of their own zone. For the period, UMass outshot Bowdoin eight to six.

Second period action proved to be the key to the game. UMass was flying throughout most of the period. The Redmen were hitting the way they must to win and were forcing good pressure in the Bowdoin zone.

Then, at 17:50, Bowdoin scored its second goal and for all intents and purposes, the game was over.

Tom Lea skated in from the right and broke towards the net close to the crease. UMass defenseman Bob Bartholomew, with him step for step, managed to steal the puck briefly but Lea poked it away from him and flipped it into the corner, to Flaherty's right.

The play took most of the steam out of the Redmen attack. Pressing as they had been for most of the period, the goal shifted the momentum back to the Polar Bears.

In the third period, UMass had a few chances from in close but could not cash in on them as Bowdoin concentrated mainly on getting the puck out of its own zone. Considering the manner in which the Redmen have been playing lately, the Polar Bears were probably very happy to escape with a win as they did. Each goalie had 25 saves, Flaherty for UMass, John Bradley for Bowdoin.

BLUELINE BANTER - UMass defenseman Brian Sullivan was forced to leave early to receive six stitches for a gash over his right eye....Bowdoin had several fine defensemen who proved to be adept at bringing up the puck as well as at throwing their weight around,...Saturday the Polar Bears beat Amherst 8-2 but the game was close until well into the third period.

But Upset Merrimack, 4-3

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

The Cardiac Kids bounced back from Friday's loss to Bowdoin in fine style by upsetting the now defrocked Warriors of Merrimack College, 4-3, on Bill McMann's goal at 18:44 of the third period before a packed house at Orr Rink. The win gives UMass a very respectable 6-4 record in the all-important Division II standings and drops Merrimack to 6-2.

The way things have been going lately at Orr Rink, it may be necessary to keep a cardiologist on the premises for Redman hockey. First, they beat Hamilton on a last second goal, then they beat Vermont in sudden death overtime and now this.

Merrimack had been ranked second to Bowdoin in the division and has had games with several Division I opponents. The Warriors, in fact, hope to move up to Division I next year, contingent on the completion of their new rink.

So, this victory in the first hockey meeting between the two schools shapes up as a big one for the burgeoning UMass hockey program. The win was the third in a very successful four game homestand and puts the Redmen in good position in their home stretch quest for a Division II playoff berth.

Oh yes, the hockey game! The Redmen had leads of 1-0 and 2-1 before Merrimack tied it up in the second period and went ahead 3-2 in the third. UMass goals, in addition to McMann's, were by John Hartnett, Doug Powling and Charlie Donovan.

Hartnett broke the ice at 7:11 of the first period. He took a pass from a flurry to Merrimack goalie Hal McGaughey's right and lifted the puck into the right corner of the cage from about 12 feet out. Assists on the play went to Jack Edwards and Donovan.

UMass goalie P.J. Flaherty was immense at times, coming up with some big saves on Warrior scoring bids from in close. He finished the period with 15 saves to Mc Gaughey's seven as the Redmen experienced some difficulty in lugging the puck out of their own zone.

The Redmen came out flying at the start of the second period with some quick scoring bids, but, at 43 seconds, Brian Sullivan, who was a doubtful starter due to a six stitch gash incurred against Bowdoin, went off for interference.

The Warriors took advantage of the situation and tied the game up 58 seconds later at 1:41 on John Power's goal, assist to Bill Boyce. Powers took a rebound and banged a 15 footer into the open right corner. Just seconds before a Merrimack shot had bounced off the post on an open corner.

Doug Powling put the Redmen ahead 2-1 at 6:47. His shot from center ice bounced, skidded and fluttered its way past befuddled goalie McGaughey. The goal was unassisted.

Merrimack tied the game up at 8:28 on Dennis Goryl's backhander which found its way into the cage between Flaherty's pad and the post. Assists went to Power and Boyce. The period featured fairly even two-way play as evidenced by the fact that each goalie came up with nine saves.

Thus was the stage set for the third period. And for the Redmen it didn't start out too well.

At 4:00 right wing Bernie Waddick banged in a rebound from a scramble to Flaherty's left to give the Warriors their last lead. Joe Cecchini and brother Barry Waddick received assists on the play.

But the UMass heart specialists were not to be denied as Charlie Donovan tied it up at 5:37. Donovan's shot flew into the right corner as McGaughey tried to grab it in vain with his glove hand. Edwards and Hartnett got assists on the play which came almost directly after a face off to McGaughey's left.

Finally, at 17:06, Mark Petit went off for charging to give UMass a one-man advantage which, of course, they took advantage of. The Redmen forced constant pressure in the Merrimack zone before McMann's goal.

The goal, at 18:44, was a tip in off of defenseman Al Nickerson's shot in a scramble. Merrimack pulled McGaughey in favor of a sixth skater in the last minute and put tremendous pressure in the UMass end but the Redmen braved the storm. For the Warriors, it was too little, too late.

ICE CHIPS - McMann deserves extra credit for his play since he was forced to leave during the first period after taking a hit in the boards on his left knee which has bothered him off and on all season... Mike Waldron was called back to the box after serving a penalty, since the timer inadvertantly let him out several seconds early...Each squad had 36 shots on net... Next game for the Redmen will be Wednesday at UConn's 'wind tunnel'.

Senate Searches for an Alternative

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

The Student Senate, to be presented shortly with an administrative proposal for a one-third increase in room rents, has already, through its officers and appropriate committee chairman, and in co-operation with the King Council, mapped preliminary strategy, which includes a meeting Thursday from 1:30 to 5:00 in the Ballroom, to be addressed by Senate President Cynthia Olken, Vice-President Glenn Elters, Pulbic Relations Chairman Geoffrey Levine, King Council Steering Committee member Gilbert Salk, Provost Oswald Tippo and University Treasurer Kenneth Johnson.

Senator Levine stated that subsequent action will depend in part on the administration's presentation, but largely upon the intensity of the student response.

Senator Dawn Dudash, chairman of the Services Committee, is trying to find alternatives to the proposed increase. In addition to having the Treasurer's figures checked by the Housing Subcommittee of Services, she is exploring such possibilities as work-study student janitors, graduate student heads of residence, and subsidization by the state. She is undertaking these studies in the belief that "a reaction without answers, with alternatives, is not going to solve anything."

It would appear that finding an alternative to the proposed increase will be a difficult if not impossible task. The figures which Assistant Treasurer Robert Brand will present to the Senate tomorrow night (and which appear in today's MDC) will show that the decision to finance dormitory projects 8, 10 and 12 through $20,360,000 in short term notes (over a period of three months to one year) at high interest rates, instead of through long-term bonding, is the largest factor in the proposed increase, constituting 57% of the increase. This method of financing was forced on the University by the inability to float bonds at the maximum rate of 5% set by state law.

Other factors in the increase include the escalating costs of maintenance and operations, which include utilities, labor, and general supplies. Since residence halls must by law be self-liquidating, the overall increase of one-third in expenses reflects itself in the proposed one-third increase in rents.

The only apparent alternative to the increase would involve state subsidization to room rents. However, given the legislature's unwillingness to appropriate sufficient money for books (among other things) it appears unlikely they they would be willing to subsidize undergraduate rents.

Mr. Robert Brand, in an interview yesterday with this reporter, pointed out that the state would be all the more unwilling since they presently pay residence hall staff, and external maintenance costs, such as snow removal. Brand stated that he knew of no plan on the part of the administration to approach the state for such an appropriation. Instead, the University is emphasizing an increased request for state scholarship monies, to relieve the burden of the increase for those who need relief most.

With regard to future short-term financing, Brand pointed out the recent recommendation of the Bond Council of the Building Authority to Governor Sargent that the five per cent limit be lifted in order to permit the Authority to stop short-term financing.

Thus the Senate may be forced to conclude that the only possible way to bring some relief from the rent increase is to participate, as it did last year, in the University's budget drive, and hope for a larger degree of success.

Candlelight March To Protest Rent Rise Scheduled for Today

By MARK SILVERMAN
Asst. Managing Editor

A candlelight procession of protesing students tonight opens a week of debate over the administration's proposed room rent increases.

Other events scheduled for this week include tomorrow night's open Student Senate meeting with Asst. Treasurer Robert H. Brand and Thursday's day long meeting in the Student Union Ballroom.

Organizers of tonight's candlelight march explain that the event will begin with a bonfire at 7:00 in the Quad, and will develop into a "silent, solemn march of protest" which will wind its way in front of President Lederle's house, through the Central Area, down to Southwest, and back to the Quad.

The bonfire and march are open to the entire University community, a spokesman says.

The organizers of the march claim that it will be "just a symbolic gesture of student dissatisfaction" with the proposed room rent hikes.

Last weekend a petition protesting the increases was circulated throughout the Quad and was signed by 1,300 of that area's 1,400 residents.

At tomorrow night's Student Senate meeting in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:00, Asst. Treasurer Robert H. Brand will explain the University's rationale for raising rents next year.

It is expected that the basis of his argument will center on the University Building Authority's financial difficulties. A series of charts which illustrate the crux of this argument appear on pages 8 and 9 of today's Daily Collegian.

Student Senate spokesmen have indicated that they will not dispute the Asst. Treasurer's argument, but will "confront him with the necessities of finding alternate means of fund raising because the increases could prevent many students from continuing their college education."

MLK Council Open Meeting Calls for Self-Reform Now

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

Last night's sparsely attended open meeting for reorganization of the MLK Council painted a bleak picture of what can be termed the past, unorganized MLK Council.

Speaking first on the panel was Gil Salk who described the MLK Council as "too much of Gil Salk and too little of anything else." He said the MLK Council must recognize the different needs and abilities of individuals and incorporate them in a total effort to accomplish a long run revolution.

He stated that in the past few months he has refrained from a leadership role in the council and that as a result the council has collapsed. He emphasized the need for people to commit themselves to leading the revolution because power exists only if it is used in the sense of "power to the people and you are the people."

Salk also urged that any actions taken under the name of Martin Luther King should be non-violent in keeping with the philosophy of the late civil rights leader.

Carl Brown, a member of the steering committee, pointed out that the idea of the MLK Council is supposed to be action. As of now, it has been a place for community forums instead of action. He felt that his only reason for being on the steering committee was because of his blackness, and he sees the UMass compus as relatively silent on social action.

Brown proposed three guidelines for the reorganization of the MLK Council. They are: an educational function to get at racism both internally and externally, a financial function to sponsor certain groups, especially Black ones who lack avenues to money but have valuable projects, and a great need for a meaningful coalition between the Blacks on campus and the MLK Council.

Ken Mosakowski, the moderator for the meeting, commented on what he considered the MLK Council to be. He termed it a closed group with low membership involving people who have personal hangups. He said, "Personal hangups have no place in social action." He described the council as a bickering organization, and one in which students should re-examine carefully, even if it means the end of the council because "no action is better than bad action."

UMass SDS Plans Action At Whitmore

Informed sources indicate that UMass SDS plans to demonstrate against the presence of recruiters from several companies on campus this week.

The companies, all of which SDS claims to be involved in "war-related profiteering," include Raytheon, Dow Chemical, Defense Intelligence Agency and Philco-Ford.

SDS spokesmen are believed to be planning "obstructive" demonstrations today, Wednesday, Thursday and possibly Friday.

DVP Calls Off Claude Brown Lecture

By DAVID D. WILLIAMS
Staff Reporter

Someone's signals were crossed last night as the DVP lecture featuring Claude Brown failed to materialize. The lecture, which was scheduled to begin at eight o'clock, was called off when DVP officials realized that nobody knew just where Mr. Brown was.

A crowd estimated to be as large as 1400 persons filed out of the S.U. Ballroom and disappeared into the night. About an hour later Brown showed up in the lobby, talked for a few minutes and then he disappeared too. At last report he was said to be taking refuge at the Lord Jeff.

In the meantime, DVP chairman Mike McKenna and Ron LaBrecque went on a merry little goose chase to Bradley Airport where Brown's plane landed. They waited around until it became clear that Brown wasn't at the airport, nor would he ever be, and then called the Collegian office. They were promptly informed to give up and come home.

1400 persons showed up at the Student Union Ballroom last night for the Distinguish-Visitors Program Lecture featuring Claude Brown. They were sorely disappointed when communications between Brown and the DVP broke down and left the former stranded and the latter strangled.

New Viet Cong Regiment Heading For Mekong Delta Clashes With US, ARVN

SAIGON (AP) - South Vietnamese forces massed Monday in the effort to cut off a North Vietnamese regiment believed heading toward the Mekong Delta province of Dinh Tuong.

Associated Press correspondent Davie Rosenzweig reported from Cau Lanh that government troops clashed for the fourth straight day Monday with two battalions of the North Vietnamese 88th Regiment.

There were conflicting reports of casualties, but government spokesmen in Saigon put enemy losses at 117 killed in several actions in the past four days. South Vietnamese casualties were reported as 17 killed and 18 or 19 wounded, Rosenzweig said.

Elements of the South Vietnamese special forces, rangers and U. S. Green Beret led civilian irregulars and mobile strike force troops moved into the area 60 miles west of the capital to reinforce territorial forces. The ground troops were supported by South Vietnamese and U. S. air strikes.

The 8 th Regiment was first detected in late 1969 near Chau Duc, on the Cambodian border about 100 miles west of Saigon.

The scene of the latest fight ing is the farthest east the unit has been spotted. Intelligence sources said there was no firm evidence of the enemy's intentions but that My The, the market city in the delta south of Saigon was a likely target.

Sources in Saigon said American diplomats were meeting with Cambodian officials in Phnom Penn in an effort to win the release of five U. S. sailors whose river patrol boat strayed into Camtdia on Thursday night.

The sources said preliminary talks already had been held and the discussions were expected to continue.

Women's Liberation Meets For Unification Meeting

AMHERST - For two days this weekend the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union was the scene of a meeting intended to unify the various Women's Liberation groups scattered throughout New England.

The gathering got underway Saturday morning with an informal registration to see who was there. Registrants came from as far away as New Haven and from as nearby as Northampton and Amherst.

The UMass Women's Lib is an RSO group which has received funds from the Student Senate to buy pamphlets on birth control and sex education which will be distributed later this spring.

After registration Saturday, small groups were formed and the women fell to in what was termed "a get together to know one another."

Guerrilla theatre was the offering of the Springfield members Saturday afternoon. The group also indulged in sensitivity games for "inter-self knowledge." From late afternoon through early evening a slide show, "Bread and Roses", a frank and devastating look at the American women through the eyes of the Madison Ave. adman, was shown.

Democrats Want U.S. Troops Out of Vietnam within 18 Mos

WASHINGTON (AP) - Democratic party policy makers declared Monday that all U.S. forces should be withdrawn from Vietnam within 18 months, and urged President Nixon to appoint immediately a new top level peace negotiator.

The Democratic Policy Council adopted a statement drafted by a panel headed by W. Averell Harriman, once the U.S. negotiator at the Paris peace talks.

The action came as the policy council put together what amounted to an interim Democratic platform. Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, the council chairman, said the declaration on Vietnam and on an array of other issues provides "a pretty good review of the state of the nation as we see it now."

There were proposals from more dovish Democrats that the party council demand complete withdrawal this year. On the other hand, such men as Rep. Jim Wright of Texas requested that the statement drop any troop withdrawal deadline.

But in the end it was the position taken by Harriman which the council upheld.

It began with a word of Democratic support for "the withdrawal of some U.S. troops," which has been President Nixon's course.

But the Democrats said U.S. withdrawal should not depend upon progress in peace negotiations, the level of violence, or replacement of Americans by South Vietnamese.

The Democrats urged a broadening of representation within the South Vietnamese government and said Nixon "should immediately appoint a high level negotiator" to the Paris peace talks. The Democrats said that would put pressure on the North Vietnamese "to negotiate in good faith. . ."

"By failing to appoint a successor to Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge the administration has created the widespread impression that it has downgraded the Paris talks and written off negotiation," the council said.

The Democrats met one day after the televised state of the nation report of party congressional leaders, a presentation which did not deal with the Vietnam war.

The policy session brought together top figures in the search for a new Democratic national chairman to succeed Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma who resigned effective March 1.

Ecologist to Speak Here

Larry Bogart, founder of Save New England, will speak in the Distinguished Ecologist Lecture series here on Thursday at 8:00 in Room 104, Thompson Hall. Co-sponsoring this event are the Government Department of the University and many environmentally oriented campus and area organizations; The Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, Action for a Quality Environment, M.I. King Council Environment Committee, and Save New England.

Israeli Students Want More Power

(ED. NOTE: The following is the second of a series of articles written by DAILY COLLEGIAN Editor-in-Chief Don Epstein, who has just returned from a study-tour in the Middle East with twelve other American college newspaper editors.)

By DON EPSTEIN
Editor-in-Chief

TEL-AVIV - Within the cities and smaller towns of Israel life goes on as usual. From Haifa in the north to Eilat in the south the Israelis conduct daily activities as if the war were thousands of miles away. There are only a few signs of war within the pre-June 1967 boundaries, save the exception of talk on the street, newspaper headlines or radio bulletins.

However, Israelis realize that their present state of security could be altered overnight. The nation's economic and political life is still very much defense oriented.

As soon as they graduate from high school, Israeli men and women of age 18 enter the army. The men go through a vigorous training period while the women take care of most of the army office work and paperwork. The men serve active duty for three years, the women for two years. After this active duty, the Israeli serves in a reserve unit until he is fifty years old. Every year each Israeli man in the reserves must spend a certain number of days (usually between 25-40) with his unit in active training.

For the Israeli the army is a natural part of life, just as for the American teenager going to college has become a natural part of life. To the Israeli teenager, spending three years in the army is the normal stage between graduating from high school and entering college. Every Israeli is proud of his military service and looks forward to serving his time in the army.

After serving three years in the army, the Israeli man chooses whether to go to work or to further his education. There are a number of universities in Israel, many of them less then a decade old. The major ones are Tel Aviv University, the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, and the Technion (Israel's answer to MIT) at Haifa.

At these three schools the college newspaper editors from the United States held seminars with Israeli students. Although it was generally agreed that Israeli college students are more mature than their American counterparts, it is obvious that many similarities exist.

Israeli students complain that although their country is a young one, their governmental leaders are old and are not representative of the times. The young look upon Defense Minister Moshe Dayan as their inspirational hero and not Prime Minister Golda Meir. They argue that they do not have enough to say in the making of governmental policy, even though Israelis are given the right to vote at age eighteen.

The Israeli students were unable to understand the concept of American draft dodging. They consider it an honor and a routine part of their lives to go into the army and be able to serve their nation. They could not understand why American boys do not want to serve in the army.

The Israeli students wish they had more of the free time which American students have in order to get involved with extra-curricular activities. Many of the students get married while they are in school and hold down a job on the side.

At each university the students are united in a students' union. There is also a national students' union encompassing all university campuses in the state.

In recent years Israeli students have protested, sometimes vigorously, against administrative policy. Currently, students at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem are threatening a strike if the university administration imposes a proposed tuition increase. At the Technion Institute in Haifa students are demanding seats on the institution's board of governors. Greater student participation in the decision making process of the university is a major topic of conversation on all Israeli campuses.

When asked why no campus buildings have been taken over in Israel one university administrator explained, "Our students are professional soldiers. Taking over a building would be kids stuff to them."

Israeli students in general, as a body are not active in politics, as are American students. Students in Israel are not defined as a special sub-culture, as they are in the United States. Israeli students are well integrated in Israeli society. Most students go home every weekend and most hold outside jobs while they attend school.

"Our youth feel they are important in this society and they can identify more easily with the general goals of the society," an administrator at Hebrew University said.

The Israeli student, although he may disagree with certain aspects of it, does not feel alienated from society. This may explain the fact that although hashish and marijuana are relatively cheap in Israel very few Israeli students partake in either drug.

Israeli universities open their doors to thousands of foreign students every year. For example out of the 15,000 students at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, 4000 are foreign students representing 55 countries. This year there are 800 U. S. and Canadian students engaged in a special one year program at this school.

Most of the lectures at Israeli Universities are given in Hebrew while the majority of the textbooks are in English. However, if a foreign student wishes to take one of the regular university courses he may enroll in a special intensive summer Hebrew course.

Chicago Firms Formally Charged With Pollution

CHICAGO (AP) - The federal government charged 11 companies Monday with polluting waters in the Chicago area. The suit was filed three days after President Nixon visited the city and promised a cleanup of Lake Michigan.

The complaints, filed by the Justice Department, marked the first major antipollution action by the Nixon administration and resulted from investigation by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell announced the action in Washington and said also that the federal grand jury will investigate the deposit of solid waste materials in the Calumet River and Lake Michigan.

This also will make the first time such a panel has been ordered to investigate cases of mass pollution.

The charges, Mitchell said, were filed under an 1899 statute which forbids the dumping or reruse into navigable waters. Convictions on the misdemeanor charge carries a maximum fine of $2,500 and one year imprisonment for each offense.

Olinkraft is a subsidiary of Olin.

One individual, Clarence Abrams, superintendent of oil storage and transfer for Pure, also was accused of violating the antipollution law.

Company spokesmen said telephone calls from newmen were the first information they had received about the charges and added that they would have no comment until they knew the specific charges against their companies.

In Chicago, Thomas A. Foran, U. S. district attorney, said he is filing 10 criminal information s and two civil suits against the defendants and that this is "only the first step" in a "new program to enforce vigorously the federa criminal law against water pollution."

Foran said the companies are charged with discharging various types of waste material into the Little Calumet River, the Chicago River, the Chicago Sanitary and Ship Canal, the Illinois River and the Des Plaines River.

Some of these waterways empty into Lake Michigan.

The substances listed include soybean oil, grease, ground limestone, suspended solids, cyanide, petroleum, solvent, kerosene, gasoline and fuel oil.

Will R. Wilson, an assistant attorney general who is chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, said in Washington that the Interior Department's federal water pollution control administration and the State of Illinois have been pursuing a joint program to clean up the federal waters around Chicago, a terminus of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

In general, he said, companies have cooperated. The grand jury will investigate instances in which some firms appear to have failed to adhere to their commitments under the program, Wilson said.

President Nixon was in Chicago Thursday night and Friday and met with four state governors and some Cabinet members to discuss moves to curb Lake Michigan pollution and other pollution problems.

Officials said afterward that the Lake Michigan Enforcement Conference will be reconvened soon to review moves by pollution sources to meet deadlines for pollution abatement.

Egypt, Israel Exchange Raids

Egyptian jets shot down an Israeli warplane and killed four Israeli soldiers Monday, the Israeli military command said.

The Egyptians mounted two air raids across the Suez Canal during the day while Israeli planes made one attack along the waterway. A spokesman said the Israeli pilot parachuted into Egyptian territory and was taken prisoner. He did not say what kind of plane was lost.

Later the Israelis claimed that an Egyptian MIG21 was downed in the same air fight. According to Israeli count, it was the 67th Egyptian jet downed since the 1967 war, in contrast to 10 Israeli planes lost.

An Israeli communique said the second Egyptian raid on the northern sector of the canal left the four Israeli soldiers dead and five wounded. Two civilians were also reported injured.

A military spokesman in Cairo said Egyptian fighter bombers pounded military positions and ammunition dumps between Ras Elesh and Tina after attacking the Deversoir area.

Planes in the first raid, the spokesmen said, attacked "enemy bunkers and an encampment. . . scoring direct hits," and pounded an Israeli convoy.

The Egyptians claimed that all planes returned safely after the two raids.

Israeli planes also made a raid across the canal, hitting Egyptian military targets in the northern sector, Tel Aviv said.

The battle across the water way came as leaders of five Arab nations manning the front lines against Israel ended a weekend "confrontation conference" in Cairo and issued a communique calling for renewed "determination to liberate occupied Arab lands."

The communique of leaders from Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Iraq and Sudan also charged:

"America's continued support for Israel is threatening peace in the Middle East. . ." Other Arab countries were urged "to liquidate this imperialist exploitation."

Pot Too Good to be Just For The Young?

NEW YORK (AP) - Mayor John V. Lindsay said Monday he doesn't know whether his three teen aged daughters have ever tried marijuana, but added: "I shouldn't be the least surprised if they had."

The mayor told newsmen he had discussed the matter only general terms with his four children Katharine, 19, Margaret, 16, Anne, 14 and John Jr., 9.

"I think every parent is concerned," Lindsay declared. "I'm concerned, and I think every parent shares that concern."

Speaking of his daughters, Lindsay continued: "I think they're very sophisticated and knowledgable, as all teen age kids are today. . . .Old folks sit around and drink alcohol and smoke cigarettes and they think this is perfectly okay. But most kids question this, for many don't drink or smoke."

Chancellor Bill

It has been a foregone conclusion the past few months that UMass Provost Oswald Tippo is to be appointed to the newly created office of Chancellor of the UMass Amherst campus. And there is little doubt that Dr. Tippo is the person most eminently qualified for the sensitive and demanding position.

The Student Senate in last Wednesday's meeting affirmed its belief in Dr. Tippo's unquestionable qualifications for the Chancellor's post. However, the Senate rightly disagreed with the rubber stamp attitude with which the whole affair has been handled.

The Senate passed two bills, (s130, 131) that while affirming its approval of Dr. Tippo as acting chancellor, urge that a search committee be made up of student and faculty, to allow for "all campus elements be thoroughly conversant with the views of the candidates" and to "give proper exposure of candidate's views".

The concept of a search committee, involving student and faculty representatives, is a vital and needed addition for the University campus. It would set the precedent of giving maximum exposure to all possible choices, not just for the Chancellor post, but also to any other sensitive appointments that exercise such significant influence over the campus community. When such an appointment is to be made, the entire campus community should be involved.

It is not the fact of Oswald Tippo's appointment that prompts such a bill. It is the principle of allowing the entire campus community to have voice in appointments that affect them the most.

We strongly support the Student Senate proposal for a student-faculty search committee for the post of permanent chancellor, as a foundation for the future active participation in key campus appointments, by the total campus community.

We also strongly urge, not reduntantly, that when such a student-faculty search committee is created for the post of permanent chancellor, that it recommend Dr. Tippo for the position. There really can be no other viable choice.

U.S.C.C.

The University and State Communications Council is a group of interested students, faculty and administrators who are concerned with opening direct communication channels through personal contact with the legislature, other public higher education institutions, the public and the mass media.

The communications existing between the public academic communities and the supporting bodies (ie.e, public and legislature) are insufficiently provided for, thus allowing misunderstanding and poor rapport. Mutual understanding is vital and imperative for the necessary support of public higher education institutions. Therefore the purpose of USCC is to promote and support public higher education in Massachusetts.

The prominent campus issues right now of room rent increase and cafeteria student employment cut back are plain results of not enough funds for university functioning. The rising costs of student feef will affect many students who will find it financially impossible to return to UMass next year. In not only affecting students here, the university must continue to increase in facilities to enable the geometrically increasing amount of Massachusetts applicants to attend college. Greater understanding and communications must be established with the state financed colleges, the public and the legislature for the necessary financial support of public colleges. USCC exists to promote and support public higher education in Massachusetts.

The essential factor for USCC is an addition to the dozen students now, of more students who would be interested in participating in any affairs that involve communications with the legislature, other public higher education institutions, the public, the mass media or the administration here at UMass. There are terrific learning opportunities here in the education by experience. University credit is also available.

Please visit the USCC table in front of the Hatch this Tues., Wed., Thurs., Feb. 10, 11, 12 or call 67809.

Proper Money Control

In order to "set the record" straight I am writing this response to Mr. Tierney's rather inaccurate letter appearing in this column on February 9, 1970.

In the first place very few dorms out of the 52 recognized living units on campus have not deposited their funds in the RSO office. They are not in the majority by any means. Depositing or not depositing dorm funds in the RSO office did not force the Student Senate to investigate new possibilities in the area of financial policy. I know, I began rewriting the Student Senate - RSO financial policies as Treasurer in October 1968, long before any news of this current issue ran in the DAILY COLLEGIAN. Since the Senate itself works through the RSO Office I know as well as anyone the problems in the disbursal of funds such as; delays in obtaining checks, state bidding procedure et al. In an effort to improve and modernize the policies and procedures within the RSO Office the Senate set up a committee which has representatives from each area government, none of who appeared at the last meeting of the committee (could they feel RSO is perfect).

Another point, as the Chief financial Officer of the Student Government Association, I can say with some authority that the RSO Office neither regulates the amount that can be expended nor does it dictate where it may be spent. I frequently liquidate bills through the RSO Office and can remember no time when I was even questioned as to the wisdom of the expenditure, and some of the Senate's bills are singly larger than the entire amount collected from dormitories. The only exception to this is the purchase of alcoholic beverages and most dorms know suitable means of avoiding this.

When this issue first came to a head I wanted to know the basis of the regulation which forces every dorm to deposit funds collected with the RSO Office. Turning to chapter 75 in the ANNOTATED LAWS OF MASSACHUSETTS in sec. 11 one sentence says "All receipts from student activities . . . and other like activities shall be retained by the trustees in a trust fund . . .". Not knowing the exact meaning of this I began searching for interpretation. In asking for interpretation from people who are paid to know including the university attorney, the associate treasurer, and the Dean of Students they all assured me that this meant that funds collected from dormitory students for dorm purposes have to be deposited in the RSO Office. This is true no matter if the group is called a residence hall or a social club.

Throughout Mr. Tierney's letter ran the cry of paternalism, from the facts I received when Mr. Tierney appeared before the Senate Ways and Means Committee it appears that Mr. Tierney is acting just as paternalistic as he claims the Senate is. It is not the residents of Greenough who have direct control of their funds it is Mr. Tierney who has the dorm funds stashed in coffee cans in his office - shades of Silas Marner. Let's stop playing games with namecalling and work for the best interests of ALL the students. What's important to remember is that the policies and procedures in the RSO Office can be changed by changing Chapter 75, the Senate's trying responsibly considering the best interests of all the students, are you Mr. Tierney?

ALAN E. GAUTHIER
Treasurer Student Senate

No Extortion Exists

Mr. John Wilson expressed his views on some of the conditions that are now existent on this campus in the Feb. 5 issue of the COLLEGIAN. According to him, the black students are "extorted" for about $12,000, and that the bulk of this sum goes chiefly to "bonfires and beer parties." He implies that the funds are spent in a manner that is "frivolous and wasteful". "The predominately white, middle-class" Student Senate is appropriating funds to "any number of irrelevant 'student' activities", at least in the eyes of Mr. Wilson. He claims that, although the blacks are forced to pay their fees, they have no voice in their disbursement.

Now, this set of claims does tend to over-exagerate, if one really looks into the issues. The fact that the blacks are "extorted" to pay their fees is not true; every student, black and white, has to pay his various fees. So, everyone is "extorted" if one wants to become technical. Next, the Senate budget covers a wide field of activities, ranging from Martin Luther King Jr. Society to the Belchertown Volunteers. $2,010. was appropriated to the Afro-American Organization this fiscal year. Another $2,100. was issued for the publication of the DRUM. The reasoning behind this dispersal was the realization that there was no publication on campus that deals with the same concerns that the black community has. THE DRUM bill passed on a 44-5-4 vote in the Senate when it came to the floor. This bill also had 42 original sponsors, which is a rather large number of original supporters, illustrating the desire to demonstrate concern.

The next point that the article dealt with was the fact that the Senate is largely composed of "white" Senators. Yet, I wonder how many blacks even ran in their respective dorms for the post. Increased interest in this area could only improve the situation.

This campus has over 14,000 full-time undergraduates. Interests vary as much as do the individuals. What is "relevant" to one group may be unimportant to others. Relevancy is a complex matter; it is so complex that it is almost impossible to clearly define it.

The case of Mrs. Delee is a unique one. She came from a distressed area that was facing oppression. If I remember correctly, a campus-wide canvas to raise money and food was held to try to help alleviate the problem. How successful it was is generally unknown, for the results were not publicized to any great extent. The fact that money might not have been available in the Senate could be due to the fact there are so many other domestic groups in existence, here on this campus, that claim to be relevant.

This article is merely an extension of my feelings, and I do not claim that I am speaking for the majority of people on this campus. The young white generation is, in my opinion, trying to be progressive. They may not move as quickly and as efficiently as they may want to, but they are trying to keep and promote peace. They will make mistakes (as will the young black generation), but then, we are only human. All that can be said now is that I hope we will have enough time and enough opportunities to prove our motives.

Senator at large,
Class of 1973

Absurd Rents

The issue of students' room rent increases promises to be one of the most explosive issues on the University of Massachusetts campus this year.

The proposed increases are from $400 to $550 for the "traditional" dormitories (an increase of 37.5%), from $450 to $650 for the Orchard Hill and Southwest Residential Colleges plus Gorman and Brett Houses, which is an increase of 44.5%. A price of $730 per year has been levied on the residents of new dorms to be opened for occupancy in Fall, 1970.

As a resident of Gorman House, I am appalled at the proposal. To be paying a total of $1300 (for two people) for nine months is a monthly rate of $144.50 for a twelve foot square cubicle. In nearby private apartment complexes, one can pay approximately this amount for a two-bedroom, three-room apartment with utilities. Should University housing cost more than off-campus housing? Is it, then, worth the price to stay as an on campus resident? I think not.

Again, we have a confrontation with UMass Treasurer Johnson. This time, the students will stand firm - a rent hike of this magnitude is an absurdity. However, the issue at stake should not be only campus-wide; both Massachusetts adults and students must reach the legislature. Higher education must be subsidized, not set aside as an additional expense.

YOU PRODUCE AUTHORITY THROUGH SUBMISSION AND BY IDENTIFICATION WITH YOUR CONTROLLERS.

YOU are guilty of knowing how to solve some of the sickening problems of earth and doing absolutely nothing knowingly and despite our ecological suicide. The utilization of the scientific revolution and its research in a warlike method becomes more and more absurd as the weapons so produced become monoliths of mass destruction.

Must we trade personal freedom for security?

THE CONCEPT OF WORK IS TIED TO ACHIEVEMENT ORIENTATION? MATERIAL WEALTH? AND SELF-GAIN. INSTEAD OF EXPLODING WITH CREATIVE MODES OF WORK, OUR SOCIETY HAS STOPPED ITS PROCESS OF GROWTH AND HAS CHOSEN A FRUSTRATING AND INCREASINGLY BORING WAGE PER HOUR SYSTEM.

Violin Concert Rates

By J. W. WADE

There was some authoritative violin playing at Bowker Auditorium Sunday evening - it came in the form of internationally-renowned violinist Henryk Szeryng. Presented by the UMass Concert Association, Szeryng was on campus both Sunday and Monday nights, performing a different repertoire each time. Szeryng played with a depth and quality that transformed his music into a pulsating, vibrant experience. Pianist Charles Reiner was brilliant as Szeryng's second half in the violin-piano sonatas and equally proficient as an accompanist in other works.

Youthful vitality and drama abounded in Beethoven's Sonana in E Flat Major, Opus 12, No. 3. Like a rare dessert, two highly-spirited, almost foot-tapping movements surrounded a precious Adagio of surprising romantic content. Except for a few adjustment difficulties in the first movement, Szeryng and Reiner played with the affinity of two seasoned, yet uninhibited artists.

What followed after Szeryng returned alone on stage to perform J.S. Bach's Sonata No. 1 in G Minor for Unaccompanied Violin was the musical highlight of the evening. It isn't often that one hears the precision and sustained beauty of such a pre-defined, yet absorbing work. The far-reaching Adagio sang with every tone - the Fugue throbbed with rooted strength. It was through intensity and interpretation that Szeryng literally painted a masterpiece in sound.

Scherzo from Sonatensatz by Brahms over-powered the ear with its grandeur and singing lyricism. Brahms spoke through Szeryng and Reiner in all areas and the result was truly beautiful music.

A relatively unknown work, Julian Carillo's Preludio for Unaccompanied Violin proceeded in miniature ideas built on a single image of highly complex melodic line. With much the same stylistic approach, Szeryng and Reiner combined to produce a polished, exciting interpretation of Debussy's Sonata in G Minor. A unique piece that requires the utmost of technical ability, the G Minor swept along with a delicacy and subtle beauty that enchanted even the most conservative of listeners.

In the old days, they smacked us across the knuckles if we read with our hands.

Today, reading with your hand is quite acceptable.

In fact, it's somewhat of a status symbol, because people who read with their hands are graduates of the Evelyn Wood Course.

The hand, however, hasn't always been the symbol of rapid reading. The old method of teaching students to increase their reading speed was to equip them with a reading machine.

The theory was that a motorized arm on the machine would extend out over the page. The arm would move down the page at a steady speed. Hopefully, your eyes would go along for the ride.

The machine, while seemingly a good idea, didn't live up to its expectations. It couldn't slow down when the reader ran into a confusing passage. And it was too awkward to use in easy chairs or beds.

In 1945, Evelyn Wood discovered the hand as a device for reading faster.

Her reason for using the hand as a tool was to "give my students the ability to read groups of words at a time and to increase their concentration so they won't have to go back and re-read so often."

Her principle worked.

Since 1959, 450,000 people have taken the Evelyn Wood Course and have increased their reading speed by an average of 4.7 times.

Using the hand to read faster is a very interesting experience.

If you would like to try your hand at it, why don't you come to a Mini-Lesson™? In one hour's time, we'll have you reading down the page faster than you can imagine.

In fact, you'll actually take home with you a definitely faster reading speed that can be used on newspapers, magazines, correspondence, textbooks, and technical journals.

We'll tell you about some of the other things that have made this the most popular extra-curricular course in the world. We'll also show you how we improve memories, and how we make chapter outlining an obsolete study technique.

It's a wild hour. And it's free.

WASHINGTON (CPS) - Although it's not getting the headlines in the commercial press it used to, student unrest is still very much in existence on the American campus. and therefore has vested interests

Recent illustrations include protests at the University of Detroit, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Duke University, and the University of Tennessee, among others.

University of Detroit students twice held sit-ins at the university's center last week to protest the presence of Navy recruiters on campus. Detroit riot police called in by the administration halted the second sit-in, arresting 17 on charges of "disrupting office business." It was the first time police had been brought in to quell a campus disturbance.

Those arrested were released on their own recognizance. The defense is trying to have presiding judge Joseph Cillis disqualified on the grounds that he is a graduate of the University of Detroit in the case. 300 students sat-in at the Fisher Administrative Center following the arrests, demanding that the university withdraw all charges and pay legal costs.

At MIT, some 200 demonstrators led by SDS occupied the office of the university president for two days, demanding abolition of the student-faculty discipline committee and cancellation of punishment given three students for their role in four demonstrations against MIT's war-related research last fall. Michael Albert, an SDS leader and president of the student assembly, was suspended for his participation in those demonstrations. Two others were put on probation.

The 200 entered the president's office after four men wearing ski masks used a battering ram made of welded metal pipes to break on through to the other side. They hung Vietcong flags from the window. MIT has requested criminal trespass charges against 31 of the demonstrators and has pledged to prosecute all involved who can be identified.

At Duke University in North Carolina, white students and Black hospital workers occupied the office of a Duke University Hospital official for more than five hours in protest against the hospital's treatment of employees. Police arrested 18 on charges of disorderly conduct.

The protesters are members of an employees union attempting to win recognition from the hospital. Duke officials say that under federal wage laws, hospitals are not required to recognize unions.

Police arrested 17 (12 students) when violence broke out on the University of Tennessee's campus during a demonstration demanding the resignation of the school's president-elect. They were charged with inciting a crowd to riot. Police and about 200 demonstrators skirmished twice outside the administration building before university officials read a statement asking the crowd to disperse.

University of Illinois students were involved in two minor incidents last month. At a meeting of the Board of Trustees about 16 students showed up to seek immediate board approval for the release of $6,000 in student funds which the Chicago campus Committee on Student Affairs had previously okayed to pay Dave Hilliard, Black Panther chief of staff, and Charles Garry, Panther attorney, for speaking on campus.

They persistently interrupted the board president, who refused their request as being out of order. As security guards moved to eject the visitors, they agreed to sit down and stay quiet.

In the other incident, a 20-year-old Illinois student and another youth were arrested after the firebombing of the Champaign, Ill. police department and charged with attempted murder, arson, aggravated assault, unlawful use of weapons and criminal damage to property. Two firebombs were hurled at the police station. One policeman was injured.

A grand jury in Buffalo, N.Y. has indicted 19 youths who participated in the ransacking of ROTC offices at the State University of New York at Buffalo (SUNY) last Oct. 15. The 19 were among some 400 who left a moratorium day demonstration and caused $10,000 in damages to the ROTC facilities. They are charged with burglary in the third degree, criminal mischief in the first degree, riot in the first degree, inciting to riot and two counts of conspiracy. The 19 will be tried together.

Fourteen of 20 Fordham University students who were arrested for trespassing during an anti-ROTC building occupation last November have accepted six months' supervision by New York City's Youth Counsel bureau in lieu of a trial. The other six will be tried in criminal court. The building occupation resulted in a pitched battle between students and police in which six security men were injured.

Harvard University issued warnings to 20 students who occupied the administration building twice last fall to protest against alleged discrimination in the university's hiring practices. Nine others were asked to withdraw for up to three terms, but had their punishment suspended.

Iowa City, Iowa has filed disorderly conduct charges against eight University of Iowa students who participated in a protest against the General Electric Company at the school's placement center last December. Six of the eight also face trial before the University Committee of Student Conduct. They can be suspended or dismissed.

If convicted in the city court, the eight face a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail and a $100 fine.

At the University of Akron in Ohio, the Black United Students (BUS) demanded a $500,000 Black studies department independent of university hierarchy, a $36,000 cultural center and library, $20,000 for BUS activities, and two Black floors in a dormitory. The administration turned down the Black studies department and the Black dormitory floors, but said it would look into the possibility of founding a cultural center and library.

Chicago Riot Trial Nears Conclusion

CHICAGO (AP) - Judge Julius J. Hoffman denied Monday a defense motion to direct the jury to acquit seven men charged with conspiracy to incite rioting at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The motion was made soon after the defense rested its case in the five month old trial.

The judge also ruled that prosecution and defense lawyers will be allowed seven hours each for their final arguments, which will begin Tuesday. The government indicated the opening segment of its closing argument would take up most of Tuesday's session.

It was expected that the U.S. District Court jury of 10 women and 2 men would get the case sometime Thursday. The jurors have been sequestered in a hotel since Sept. 30. The trial began Sept. 24.

Thomas A. Foran, the U.S. district attorney, suggested that each side be allowed 10 hours to summarize the testimony of 190 witnesses and 20,000 pages of trial transcript.

William M. Kunstler, a defense lawyer, said he agreed with Judge Hoffman who stated he believes in brief summations.

"It's been a long time, your honor," Kunstler said, "but we finally agree on something."

The two men have been at odds throughout the trial.

The defense rested without calling any witnesses to answer the government's rebuttal evidence. Kunstler said Saturday he possibly would call two witnesses, but the defense rested after the judge denied two motions to admit additional documents into evidence.

The defense team of Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass was brief in its argument for a directed judgement of acquittal.

Weinglass argued that two of the defendants who are charged with "teaching or demonstrating incendiaries," in addition to conspiracy, should be freed.

He said the government failed to prove that John R. Freines, 31, and Lee Weiner, 31, taught anyone the use of fire bombs. He argued that the government also failed to prove that any agreement took place between the seven men before their arrival in Chicago for the convention.

Richard G. Schultz, a government lawyer, said Freines and Weiner discussed the use of fire bombs which was sufficient to prove their guilt. He also argued that several defendants discussed in March 1968 their plans for coming to Chicago during the convention.

Besides Freines and Weiner, the defendants are David T. Dellinger, 55; Rennard C. "Ronnie" Davis, 29; Thomas E. Hayden, 30; Jerry C. Rubin, 31, and Abbott "Abbie" Hoffman, 31.

If convicted of conspiracy, each man could be fined $20,000 and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Bomb Threats Plague GE

(AP) - Several thousand workers were evacuated from the General Electric Co.'s 50 story Manhattan headquarters Monday after a telephoned bomb threat, the fourth bomb incident against the huge company in 12 hours.

A police search revealed no trace of explosives, and the workers were allowed to return to the building shortly before noon.

Earlier Monday, police defused a live bomb found wrapped in a brown paper bag outside the GE skyscraper, and two of the company's shop plants in Brooklyn and Queens were damaged by bomb blasts just before midnight Sunday.

There were no injuries in the explosions.

Moratorium Comes Home to Idaho

BOISE, Idaho - Recently, a college student rang the doorbell of a private home and soon found himself in an earnest discussion with its head of household about dissent, the war in Vietnam, and the possibilities for peace.
The student, one of dozens canvassing homes in Boise - a "first ever" in that state - explained that he was active in the Moratorium movement, and detailed the costs, both human and financial, of prolonging the war.

The man listened, but argued that disagreeing with official government policy is "unpatriotic". "Why, if every citizen spoke up, we'd have a resurrection."
Just so. That unwitting malapropism sums up the philosophy of Moratorium participants in Idaho - virtually all of whom, until last fall's national peace demonstrations, had never marched or publicly challenged their government at all.

Now, months later, they are still working for that "resurrection" abroad and at home. They look upon themselves as the no-longer silent majority, and their activities show that reports of the Moratorium's death are greatly exaggerated.
In Idaho, the reverse is true. Speaking out, canvassing, explaining to doubters the cost of prolonging the war and the failures of "Vietnamization" - the antiwar sentiment has become more vocal and visible.

On Saturday (Jan. 24), undaunted by a drenching rain, 350 marched in an antiwar parade through downtown Boise. They were joined by others as the parade moved through town. Mostly, the marchers were students from Idaho colleges, places which had seen little if any antiwar activity before - Boise State, Idaho State, Southern Idaho College, the College of Idaho, and the University of Idaho.

But there also were housewives, a few middle-aged merchants and a number of active-duty servicemen from Mountain Home Air Force Base near Boise. A Moratorium spokesman said the presence of the servicemen has "caused no trouble as yet."

During the day, about 80 persons canvassed residential neighborhoods in Boise - the first time that residents of that Western city (of some 75,000 population) had come face-to-face with the peace movement. In spite of the shock, there was only minimal jeering and no physical incidents.

The Sunday edition of the IDAHO STATESMAN gave major play to the previous day's activities under a headline reading: "March Against Death Comes Off Peacefully." The STATESMAN, which has not been a Moratorium supporter, gave "fair coverage", a Moratorium organizer thought.

After a shaky start, there were no problems with local authorities, either. Previously, the antiwar organizers had had trouble receiving parade permits, and had found police "checking up" on the canvassing plans beforehand. But when the day finally arrived, an organizer said, "the police were very helpful."

John Butler, a campus minister at Boise State, feels that the weekend was one of major significance for two reasons: there was an opening of dialogue concerning the war involving the long-silent of all persuasions, and, further, the weekend demonstrated that peace-oriented Moratorium activities are spreading wider and deeper throughout the land.

"For those of us who are natives here," said Butler, "last year was the first time."

He referred to the antiwar rallies held on Oct. 15 and Nov. 15, 1969 -- a "point of departure" for those in Idaho who previously had only silently longed for peace, Butler feels.

As an example, he noted that after the day's march and rally, there was planning to broaden the scope of the movement in Idaho. Among probable activities will be fund-raising benefits and political organizing, both on a congressional and state level.

The Idahoans also showed a keen awareness of the literal life-and-death issues involved in the war's continuation: practicing the latest "guerrilla theatre" techniques, they held a mock lottery in their best General Hershey manner.

They drew names of the state's congressional delegation, Chairman Mendel Rivers of the House Armed Services Committee, Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Robert Finch and others. These officials will receive letters explaining that, if they were 19 years old, the summons would be one to fight in - and, quite possibly to die in - the war in Vietnam.

A glance at the map would indicate that Idaho is a most unusual place for things like that to be happening. There it is, ranch and farming country, nestled above Nevada and Utah and extending to the Canadian border. Hawkish country if there ever was any.
But more than 100 young Idaho men have died in Vietnam. And so the Moratorium activists there plan to keep speaking out, courting that day of "resurrection."

Swimmers Get Dumped Lose to CCSC, 80-23

By EDWARD DOHERTY
Staff Reporter

In one of the most awesome displays of all-around ability and depth even seen in Boyden Pool, the Blue Devils from Central Connecticut State College dumped the Redmen 80-23.

For a while Saturday it looked as though the UMass fans, as well as a vocal contingent from C.C.S.C., would spend the afternoon staring at the water. The meet was delayed for an hour after the Blue Devils' bus broke down.

The fans who stayed around were rewarded with some fine swimming efforts, predominately by the blue trunks of Central Connecticut. The Blue Devils boasted five small college All-Americans in their ranks, including an All-American relay team of Norm Davidson, Bruce Sutton, Kevin Sheehan, and Rich Flores. In addition, both Davidson and John Marchacos received All-American honors in the butterfly event.

For the Redmen, Mark Miller and Captain Al Northrup were the lone bright spots. Miller, the school record holder in the 100 yard and 50 yard freestyle events, finished first in the 100 yd. and second in the 50. Northrup earned two second places in the Breaststroke and the Individual Medley, both events being 200 yds. long. Paul Joy and Herb Schuster garnered the only other seconds for UMass with Ed Jazab, Morris Lynch, and Joy netting third place finishes.

Otherwise it was all Central, as the visiting swimmers won every event but one; a total of eleven firsts, five seconds, and five thirds.

The breakdown of the meet was as follows:

Gypsies Win Title

In an exciting game at Boyden Gym last night, the A & P Gypsies won the campus intramural basketball championship with a 62-49 win over the Kennedy Panthers. The contest was close throughout but Panther fouls seemed to be the deciding factor.

Leading the way for the Gypsies was Gregg who scored 27 points and Pennington who hit for fourteen. The Panthers had three men in double figures led by Curtis with 18, Krohn with 17, and Sanders with 10. Curtis was also the leading rebounder in the game along with Healy. Both players pulled down six caroms.

The halftime score had the Gypsies in front by three, 30-27. But the Panthers were in foul trouble, especially Curtis who had four personals at the half.

Thursday night, Kappa Sigma meets the Kennedy Panthers at Boyden Gym in a game scheduled for 7:30.

Skiers Win

rienced veterans on the team, placed 4th for the team which clinched first place for the skiers winning the race by the untouchable margin of 25 seconds.

The B team was not to be denied its share of the glory. On Saturday Wayne Simpter and John Gennari took first and second place. Mark Fisher, racing as an outside B placed third overall in the league. On Sunday, the B team made a complete sweep of the first four places leaving everyone at the awards ceremony wishing UMass never showed up.

If the fired up Redmen can keep their record breaking pace up for the rest of the season, they will have built up such a lead that it would be possible for them to not even show up at the last race and still finish in first place in the A division of the New England Intercollegiate Ski Conference.

Frosh Downed by Rockwood, 79-64

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Although playing a strong overall game, the UMass freshman basketball team lost to an overpowering Rockwood Academy squad Saturday night, 79-64. It was the seventh loss of the season for the Little Redmen against four wins.

Rockwood won the game off the boards. The western Mass. school started a quintet which included three players 6'8 and over with two others of the same dimensions sitting on the bench. UMass countered with 6'8 Chuck Peters, who pulled down an unbelievable total of 22 rebounds, but Rockwood was simply too big.

The frosh were in the game all the way, however. Led by Peters Chuck Olsen, and the returning Mike Polakoff, who all scored eleven points, the Little Redmen shot a fine 40% from the floor. But Rockwood dominated the boards and allowed UMass only one shot at the hoop while getting multiple tries themselves.

But with 1:20 to go in the game, UMass trailed by only six. However, the Little Redmen were forced to foul and Rockwood converted all of its one and one free throws to put the game out of reach.

The Little Redmen tried to press their bigger opponents throughout the contest but to no avail. Once Rockwood got the ball on the boards UMass could do nothing but foul.

Coach Peter Broaca was pleased with his team's performance and thought that his squad "played well" despite the loss. He was especially happy with the play of Peters who had his biggest night of the season by far. If Peters can continue this type of play for the rest of the season it will mean a great deal to the UMass freshmen.

Broaca also thought that this year's squad from Rockwood was even stronger than the one which dropped an exciting 94-86 verdict to last year's freshman team. He based this view on the fact that last year's team had three "really good ball players" and two average ones while this year's squad has five excellent players.

The frosh can be expected to be tested again tonight as the Little Crusaders from Holy Cross travel to the Cage for a 6 p.m. encounter. However, if Peters can play as well as he has shown he can, UMass should be in the game all the way.

Top Ranked Holy Cross Invades Cage Tonight

Rebounding Strength of Crusaders May Prompt UMass Line-up Changes

By STEVE ROSS
Senior Reporter

Does the match-up of New England's best basketball player on New England's best basketball player sound appealing? That could be on tap tonight when UMass hosts the Crusaders of Holy Cross in an 8 o'clock game tonight at the Cage.

Bob Kissane, a 6'8 forward, has been called by his coach, Jack Donahue, the area's finest. He may be guarded tonight by Julius Erving, a few dozen coaches' choice as the best around and who was named E.C.A.C. sophomore of the week for the second straight time. It's a basketball fans' dream come true, if it materializes.

The rest of the affair could go a long way in deciding the number one team in New England. Currently the Crusaders hold the spot, but if UMass were to win, and win big, a few pollsters might give the Redmen another look in their rankings. Of course, for the Redmen to finish on top they would have to win the rest of their games, and hope for a Holy Cross slump.

Kissane is by no means the entire show from Worcester. He is complimented by 6'8 DonSasso, and 6'5 Stan Grayson up front, along with 6'3 Buddy Venne, and 6'1 Jack Adams in the backcourt. Venne threw in 30 the other night when H.C. downed Seton Hall, 107-102.

Holy Cross has a 14-5 record, and has lost only one game to a New England opponent. That loss was an 88-87 over-time travesty at URI. The other defeats have been administered by Columbia, Davidson, Georgetown, and Duquesne. The wins have not always been that impressive. Northeastern was beaten by just two, and Springfield by one.

Coach Jack Leaman is primarily concerned with the board strength of Holy Cross. Currently the Crusaders are fifth in the nation averaging over 57 caroms a game. "They are so big, and rebound so well," praises Leaman, "they win a lot of games in which they don't play that well."

Leaman is toying with the idea of starting both Ken Mathias and Dick Samuelson. The starting of Mathias would be necessitated by the decided height advantage enjoyed by the visitors. But Leaman probably won't make up his mind until 7:57., the time the starting line-up must be submitted to the scorer.

Leaman might also experiment with Jack Gallagher in the backcourt with Ray Ellerbrook. This would be done to counteract the five inch height advantage that Venne would have over John Betancourt. Mike Pagliara, off his finest performance of the season, at Burlington, could be in for a considerable amount of playing time.

Trackmen Lose to Dartmouth, 64-45
Redmen Break Five Records in Loss

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

Dartmouth's overall depth and the lack of competitive opportunities on the part of the UMass track team were the key factors in deciding the outcome of Saturday's track meet at Leverone Field House on the Dartmouth Campus in which the Indians defeated the Redmen 64-45.

The meet went pretty close to what was expected in the pre-meet analysis with UMass scoring well in the middle and long distances and Dartmouth coming up with the bulk of their points in the field events. The difference in the scoring in the final tabulation was the number of seconds and thirds that the Indians were able to get throughout the meet. This is further exemplified by the fact that Dartmouth took only one more first place than did the Redmen. Many of the seconds and thirds that eluded UMass were the result of this being their first competitive track meet of the season.

This track meet was highlighted with nine new records, five which were set by the Redmen. The first Redman record/set came in the 50 yard dash in which Walter Mayo led a UMass sweep in the time of 5.5 seconds.

Cal Carpenter set a school record in the high jump in his record effort with a jump of 6'6". Eddie Shaughnessey also performed well in this event, coming in second with a jump of 6'4".

Ron Wayne set two meet records, one coming in the mile and the other in the two mile. These records were set an hour and a half apart and in between he took a second in the 1000 yard run. His mile time was 4:15 and his two mile time was 9:31.6.

The final record that the Redmen set came in the two mile relay in which Al Mangan, Arnie Morse, Bill Donaldson, and Dave Evans turned in a time of 8:00.9 in the final event of the meet.

Coach O'Brien was very pleased with the performance of Eddie Acaro, Dave Evans, Larry Paulson and Emerson Hiller.

Acaro was coming off a shoulder injury and hadn't thrown in two weeks before this meet. However, he did come up with two third places in very stiff competition and this was good news to Coach O'Brien with the New England's and the Conference meet coming up at the end of the month.

Evans won the 1000 yard run, coming from behind after a slow start. He also ran an impressive 1:56 half mile anchor leg on the record setting two mile relay team.

In his first varsity mile competition, Paulson ran his best time ever in taking a third place with a time of 4:23. Coach O'Brien had been looking for another miler to compliment Ron Wayne and O'Brien feels that Paulson is the man he's been looking for.

Even though Hiller did not place in the meet in his specialty, the pole vault, O'Brien was still very pleased with his 12 foot vault and sighted the lack of competition for Hiller's inability to place.

The hurdles was the turning point in the meet. With Lefevre and Spellman the Redmen were hoping for eight points in this event. But once again the lack of competition foiled these two and they were not able to score in a blanket finish.

Their timing was off and Dartmouth picked up nine points in this event. The difference in what was expected and what actually took place was seventeen points which was just about the margin of victory for Dartmouth.

The freshmen were also defeated by the Dartmouth freshmen much in the same way that the varsity was defeated. Top performances were turned in by Tom Swain in the mile, Steve Levine in the 600 yard run, Bill Hackler in the high jump and Tom Jasmin in the two mile.

The track team now sets its sights on Northeastern University, which it opposes on this coming Saturday at 1:00 in Cabot Cage, the home track for the Huskies. Northeastern defeated Dartmouth two weeks ago by one point and the meet shapes up as another close encounter for the Redmen.

Northeastern has always been a greater Boston track power and has a well balanced attack. Like Dartmouth, the Huskies also have had a number of track meets so far this season and should be in peak condition for this meet.

Last year the meet was nip and tuck down to the next to last event. Coach O'Brien envisions a duplication of last year's meet and feels that with the taste of competition from the Dartmouth meet that his Redmen will be ready to face the challenge of the Huskies.

In UMass sports today, the varsity and freshmen wrestling teams travel to Storrs, to meet the University of Connecticut. The freshmen are scheduled for 6:30 with the varsity tabbed for 8:30.

Also, the freshmen gymnastics team will meet the Dartmouth frosh at 4:00 at Dartmouth.

Skiers Place First In Giant Slaloms

The incredible UMass ski team, racing as though they were after the world cup, captured first place in the Amherst Giant Slalom on Saturday and the first place in the UMass Giant Slalom on Sunday boosting their win-loss record to 31-1. The talent and depth displayed by the Redmen this weekend left even the coach of the United States Eastern Team, Colbey Bent, wondering how the Redmen could be so consistent.

On Saturday, Amherst College played host to a 26 gate, two run, giant slalom. At the end of the first run, dependable co-captain Jim Garstang was in third place with a time of 58.7. Garstang, who is a senior this year has been red hot finishing in the top five in all four races. Jim Latimer, one of the two outstanding rookies to join the team, slashed through the course with a time of 59.2 to put him in 2nd place for the team and 4th overall. Junior co-captain Ted Martin, who has been racing with amazing consistency and has finished in the top seven in every race this season had another fine run, a 60.1 putting him in 6th place after starting 46th in the race. Usually a racer that isn't seeded in the top 20 finds it nearly impossible to finish in the top 10 because the race course starts to get slower as the race goes on. Twice Martin has been seeded in the high forties and both times has finished in the top 7.

John Gray, who has proven to be a big asset to the team, had a slow first run with a 63.3 to put him in 26th place. Chuck Walker experienced some difficulty on the upper part of the course but managed to salvage a 66.7 to put him in fourth place for the team. Jerry Curran, who has been having trouble this season, fell and didn't finish the race.

The second run proved to be the clincher to bring the first place trophey to the Redmen. Jim Garstang had another fine run and finished 3rd overall. Lattimer was right behind Garstang only two-tenths of a second off the pace to give him 4th place. Martin, beating his first run by three-tenths of a second finished 6th overall and 3rd for the team. Gray socked home a fast second run to give him a 13th and finished 4th for the team. The factor that made everyone on the mountain realize just how good the Redmen really are was a ten second penalty imposed on the team. A gatekeeping error by one of the freshmen cost them ten seconds which was added on to the final time. Even with this penalty, the skiers still won by five seconds with another fine display of skiing that is making the Redmen one of the best ski teams in the east.

The UMass Downhill originally scheduled for Sunday had to be changed to a Giant Slalom because of icy conditions that prevailed all weekend. On Sunday the Redmen, skiing on the ice with amazing accuracy added another first place trophy to their now incomparable record of 31-1. It was the same story for the two co-captains, Martin and Garstang, as it has been all year. Garstang captured first place, beating everyone on the mountain including outside racers from Dartmouth and Williams. Martin, wearing a downhill suit similar to the one used by the U.S. team, had another great day finishing in third place beating all but one of the outside racers from Dartmouth and Williams. Jerry Curran also donned his downhill suit and had his finest performance of the year finishing in 6th place and 3rd for the team. Steady Chuck Walker, one of the expe-

Contract Awarded for Married Student Housing

Model of the type of prefabricated housing units that will be built for married students at the University of Massachusetts for occupancy next Sept. (This is not the exact design to be followed.) Units will be clustered to provide maximum privacy and ample parking. 240 units will be built on land between the Puffton and Presidential apartments north of the UMass campus. Units will be ready for occupancy Sept. 1.

UMass Building Authority has awarded the contract to provide 240 units of married student housing in Amherst to the firms of Fontaine Brothers of Springfield and Jackson and Harrington of Northampton, it was announced today by George L. Pumphret, Authority Chairman.

The low-cost, prefabricated housing units will be situated on a 31-acre tract of land north of the campus in Amherst. Units will contain one or two bedrooms, dining-living room area, kitchen, bathroom and storage area. The entire project is non-subsidized and will be self-liquidating through bond issues paid off through rental fees.

General contractors will be invited to submit bids next month for the site development, including foundations, roads and utilities. Per Nylen, landscape architect from Northampton, has been retained by the Building Authority to plan the site development. It is expected that site work will begin sometime in April. Nylen's preliminary sketches show an attractively landscaped site with the units in residential groupings that provide a maximum of privacy and ample off-street parking.

The firm of Fontain-Jackson-Harrington Industries, low-bidder on the project, has indicated that they can produce about five units a day in their plant. These will be assembled on the site at the rate of three apartments a day starting in May.

Planning for the married student housing began last spring when a study of housing needs for married students was conducted by a special committee appointed by President John W. Lederle. The present plans for the low-cost, prefabricated housing are the result of cooperation of the UMass administration and students with the UMass Building Authority.

In addition, the University's consultants on master planning, the firm of Sasaki, Dawson and DeMay of Watertown, are in the process of conducting a long-range study of housing needs of all students, married and unmarried, during the next few years.

The 240-unit complex will be completed and open for residents on Sept. 1, 1970. At the present time a housing officer for the complex has not been appointed, and no applications are being accepted at this time. As soon as this office has been opened an announcement will be made to the students about procedures for applying for an apartment.

Nixon Seeks Institute For National Education

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon will call for the establishment of a National Institute of Education to coordinate research to improve education from pre-school to graduate school levels, sources said Tuesday.

The Nixon proposal is expected to be delivered to congress following current negotiations to replace the $19.7 billion education and welfare measure vetoed by the President last month. It will outline expenditures of $300 million to $500 million a year over a five year period for the new institute.

Should Congress agree to set up the institute, it will mark the first time that efforts to develop new thrusts for education have been brought under one roof.

Presently, efforts have been scattered among universities and supported by funds from the U. S. Office of Education budget.

Sources familiar with the proposal say it will call for setting up the institute as a separate, physical entity along the lines of the National Institutes of Health.

The aim will be to bring in scholars for periods of directed and intense investigation to carefully analyse what succeeds inn the field of education and then apply these programs directly to schools.

Anti-U.S. Protest Mars Roger's Tunisian Visit

TUNIS (AP) - A student protest against U. S. aid to Israel marred the visit of Secretary of State William P. Rogers to Tunisia Tuesday.

The students, estimated by police at more than 1,000 besieged the American cultural center, battled briefly with police and firemen and forced Rogers to cancel a scheduled visit to Tunis University.

Rogers arrived from Morocco on Monday night on the second leg of his 10 nation fact finding and goodwill tour of Africa. Morocco and Tunisia, both pro-Western, are the only Arab countries on his itinerary. There were no demonstrations in Morocco, but Rogers heard warnings from both governments against any further American arms and other aid to Israel.

Both the Moroccan and the Tunisian leaders warned the secretary that any solution of the Middle East problem which fails to take account of the interests of the Palestine Arabs is inconceivable.

At a dinner party for Rogers, Tunisian Foreign Minister Habib Bourguiba Jr. denounced what he termed "the deplorable process which has robbed a people of its soil and its country and installed in Palestine a form of colonialism which consists of replacing one people by another in a spirit of religious and racial fanaticism."

Bourguiba avoided any criticism of the United States or reference to American aid to Israel. But his 2,000 word speech was addressed directly to Rogers and took the form of an impassioned plea for the Arab cause in Palestine.

As he spoke, the students were demonstrating in scattered groups in many parts of downtown Tunis. Hundreds of police, troops and firemen with steel helmets, riot sticks and fire hoses were deployed throughout the city.

UMass Tops Holy Cross, 83-66

By PETER PASCARELLI
Sports Editor

" A great, great team win. It was one of those wins that you never forget. It has to be our biggest. We did it against the best, before television and huge exposure and before a great crowd. What else can be said?"

UMass coach Jack Leaman said it, and the four or five thousand that were at the Cage last night that witnessed the spine-tingling 83-66 win over Holy Cross, would hardly be able to say anything else. The win, which makes the Redmen 11-6, and which drops the Crusaders to 14-6, jumbles further the already jumbled New England basketball picture.

It was a virtual wire-to-wire victory, but that doesn't indicate, nor does the final score indicate, what a tense, taut struggle this game really was.

To pick out a single star is impossible There were about eight of them. Julius Erving proved, undoubtedly, without question, that he is the best basketball player in New England. Twenty-four points, 25 rebounds, five assists, seven blocked shots, and four steals was the only talk for the super soph against the gibberish thrown out by Holy Cross Coach Jack Donahue. Donahue said his Bob Kissane was best.

Jack Gallgher, UMass senior, put to rest that claim, with a super defensive effort against the bigger Kissane. Gallgher held him to six points in the fight first half, and held Kissane to eight rebounds for the game.

Dick Samuelson gave away weight and height but played Don Sasso to a standstill. John Betancourt, who continues to show flashes of a budding star, popped in 19 points and helped shut off the hot shooting Holy Cross guards.

Ray Ellerbrook, a cold shooter for most of the game, hit for some quick points early in the game, hung tough and came back to score big hoops late in the second half, and play some good defense.

And three reserves, Mike Pagliara, who did yeoman defensive work, Ken Mathias, who scored three big, big buckets and did the job on the boards, and Dennis Chapman who got two baskets and also was a big rebound man.

The game went something like this.

In the first six minutes the game was tied six times. Adams was the entire show for Holy Cross while the UMass scoring was split among everyone

Then, in a two minute stretch, beginning around the 13:30 mark, UMass put together seven straight points , with Erving hitting two field goals, Betancourt one, and Samuelson a free throw.

The next couple of minutes were

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON (AP) - In his fifth major environmental action since the start of the year, President Nixon asked Congress Tuesday to give his administration new power, jurisdiction and money to improve the quality of life in the United States. He proposed in a special message a $4 billion program for municipal waste treatment to improve water quality, backed by stricter clean up standards and enforcement powers.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two Americans received maximum prison sentences Tuesday for masterminding a multimillion dollar fraud against the U.S. government - a fraud supported for four years by a steady flow of phony documents supplied by two Swiss bankers. Sentenced to 10 years in prison each were Francis N. Rosenbaum, 54, a prominent Washington attorney, and Andrew L. Stone, 54, a wealthy St. Louis businessman.

SAIGON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, arriving for a three day visit, said Tuesday night he had come to South Vietnam "looking for ways to improve the Vietnamization program to push it forward to completion." Only scattered fighting was reported on the war front.

Regardless of Nixon

Officer Recommends My Lai Trial

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) - A junior legal officer testified Tuesday that he was prepared to recommend that Lt. William L. Calley Jr. be tried for murder in the alleged My Lai massacre regardless of what action President Nixon might have taken.

Calley's defense attorneys are contending that command influence from President Nixon down through the military figured in the decision to try Calley for murder in the slaying of 102 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai, South Vietnam, in 1968.

Capt. William Hill, legal officer for the student brigade, to which Calley was assigned at the time he was charged, testified that he was present at a meeting with Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III, the prosecutor, and several other legal officers at which the signing of the charges was discussed.

"We had fear that he would not be charged because of political repercussions," Hill said.

Hill was returned from his present assignment in Vietnam to testify in the pretrial hearings at which Calley's attorneys are seeking to get the charges dropped.

Previous court martial convictions have been reversed by the U.S. Supreme Court when command influence has been proven.

Hill said he told Calley's former commanding officer, Col. Len D. Marlow, now retired, that the nature of the accusations was so serious that charges should be filed regardless of what the recommendation was from the White House.

"I told Col Marlow that regardless of any decision the President might make, a crime had been committed. I advised him that if the higher command advised not to prosecute, it should be done anyway."

The captain quoted Marlow as saying, "If I don't do what the President said, I would either be a fool or a jackass and I'm inclined to believe the latter."

In earlier testimony, Col. Robert M. Lathrop, staff judge advocate and top legal officer at Ft. Benning, said he had been told the case had gone to the President.

"I was told that the matter had gone to the West Coast and back," he said. "At this time, the President was in the White House at San Clemente.

Harvard Minority Employment Clause May Not Increase Non White Workers

BOSTON (AP) - Spokesmen for three contractors' associations said Tuesday that a new Harvard University program covering employment of non-whites in campus construction "will not bring any new minority workers into the industry."

Harvard awarded two construction contracts Monday and included in them a clause requiring the contractor to fill roughly 20 per cent of the job openings with non-whites.

Harvard's chief negotiator on the contracts, Clifford L. Alexander Jr., former chairman of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, said "the inclusion of these clauses in the contracts is monumental."

The contractors' statement said that Harvard "has announced a program which, when analyzed, does not involve training, has no provisions for continuity of employment, and will not bring any new minority workers into the industry."

The statement was issued jointly by Joel B. Leighton, managing director of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts, Inc.; Thomas S. Gunning, executive director, Building Trades Employers Association of Boston and Eastern Massachusetts; and Dana H. Malins, manager, Electrical Contractors Association of Greater Boston.

"Harvard's announcement," the three men said, "seems to be an almost indecent attempt to undercut the statement Monday of Secretary of Labor George P. Schultz in which he stressed the necessity for area wide plans developed by industry itself.

"Measurable success in Boston has been achieved under an active recruitment program supported by contractor associations and Boston building trades unions. This program has placed over 225 blacks and Spanish speaking workers on jobs in 17 skilled trades in its first year of operation. No other program run by any organization in this state has done anything comparable.

"Every skilled minority craftsman in Boston will have a job as soon as the weather breaks for the spring construction season. Significant numbers of new minority workers will then be added to the construction force only through a program of training. Since a given trade works on a single job only for a few weeks or a few months, an area wide plan is essential in order to provide continuity of employment during this training period."

"Ski Masters" Go North, But Perhaps Not to Ski

BOSTON (AP) - Hundreds of youths calling themselves "Ski Masters" gathered here Tuesday preparing for what they said was a ski holiday to St. John, N.B. - an area not noted for its ski facilities.

No skis were in evidence as the groups debarked from chartered buses arriving from across the nation.

All State Bus Corp., a Brooklyn, N.Y., transportation broker, said the Ski Masters paid "more than $20,000" to charter buses from San Francisco, Seattle, Chicago, Madison, Wisc., Cleveland, Detroit, Washington and New York.

A spokesman for the bus company said 11 buses are scheduled to leave Boston Wednesday night for a trip through Maine into Canada.

Earlier, The Detroit News quoted "reliable sources" as saying that a bus which passed through that city en route from Chicago to Boston would drop people off in New Brunswick to board a freighter to Cuba.

A Greyhound official in Boston said Tuesday that the youths, many of whom carried sleeping bags and knapsacks, were en route to Cuba to aid in the sugar harvest.

"I don't know any more about it than that," the official said, "but have talked with the FBI in the past."

The FBI declined comment about the youths.

About 50 youths climbed off the Chicago bus in downtown Boston early Tuesday, walked to a nearby subway stop and took a train to Cambridge.

The American Friends Service Organization in Cambridge was reported looking for housing for about 100 youths Tuesday night. None of those leaving the bus in Boston would identify themselves to news men, but a spokesman for the Friends Organization termed the group the "Venceremes Brigade," which translates roughly into English as "We will conquer."

One bus bound to Boston - containing 44 persons was denied permission to enter Canada at Windsor, Ont., Tuesday night.

Canadian immigration authorities refused to comment on turning the bus back at the border except to say the passengers failed to meet Canadian immigration requirements.

The youths arriving in Boston refused comment on reports that the trip is being financed by the Cuban government and that they would board a Cuban ship at New Brunswick.

"We are just going skiing in Canada," one youth said in Boston, "but other than that we don't have anything to say to you."

Laird Says Progress is Adequate In Vietnamization Since Last March

SAIGON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday night he had come to South Vietnam "looking for ways to improve the Vietnamization program and push it forward to completion."

Laird and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, Chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived for a three day visit. They are expected to return to Washington with recommendations for further U.S. troop withdrawals.

Laird, who first visited South Vietnam last March, told reporters at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport: "We feel that progress in Vietnamization since March has been adequate."

He and Wheeler will discuss with U.S. and South Vietnamese officials the progress in the program to transfer combat duty to South Vietnamese forces.

Laird reported that President Nixon had instructed him to make a "consolidated review" of this Vietnamization program since Nixon met at Midway Island last June 8 with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam. It was there that the two presidents first announced the gradual American withdrawal from the war.

Laird noted that at the time of the Midway Island conference authorized U.S. troop strength in Vietnam was 549,500. By April 15, when the third phase of Nixon's troop withdrawal program is completed, authorized strength will be cut to 434,000.

Laird said he views Vietnamization as "the alternative to success" at the Paris peace talks. He added that the United States still hopes for progress at Paris although "there has been no movement from the other side."

The Secretary declared Nixon's policy of turning over greater responsibility to the nations of Southeast Asia "could be called irreversible."

The President "firmly believes in and is committed to" the policy, Laird added, and it "Will be steadfastly adhered to."

Laird and Wheeler plan to travel outside of Saigon to inspect military installations and the pacification program, under which the South Vietnamese government is trying to extend its control over the countryside.

Associated Press correspondent David Rosenzweig reported from Cao Lanh that allied forces in the Plain of Reeds claimed they killed 43 North Vietnamese troops in sporadic fighting near Moc Hoa, 60 miles west of Saigon.

South Vietnamese officers say they have killed 171 enemy soldiers and captured seven in five days of fighting there. Government casualties were put at 17 killed and 24 wounded.

At least two enemy battalions were intercepted trying to cross the plain, and government forces were rushed in to reinforce territorial troops in the area.

Rosenzweig said the fighting appeared to have tapered off late Tuesday, and some allied troops had withdrawn.

Apollo 11 to Tour U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Apollo 11, the first vehicle to deliver men to the moon and bring lunar material back to earth, starts a year long tour of state capitals in mid-April.

The char-streaked gold plated spacecraft will be accompanied by one of the moon rocks - a dark piece of rubble weighing less than two pounds - picked up by Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. when they achieved mankind's first walk on the moon last July 20.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Tuesday the tour would begin at Sacramento, Calif., April 17.

The Apollo 11 command module currently is at the North American Rockwell Co, plant in Downey, Calif., where it was manufactured. A special van, 40 feet long and 14 feet wide, will carry the spacecraft, and is now being prepared at Glendale, Calif.

The spacecraft will be on display in each capital for three to five days.

Home Economics is Being Studied, Many VIP To Make Recommendations

A major study is now being conducted in the UMass School of Home Economics by a committee of faculty and students with the help of off campus and on campus consultants and an advisory panel. The main charge of the committee is to make recommendations about the general and specific objectives, goals, functions and approaches of college home economics, especially in Massachusetts, for the remainder of the century.

The Dean of the School of Home Economics, Helen G. Canoyer, who has recently come to UMass after being Dean of Home Economics at Cornell, will be Chairman of the committee. A similar study done at Cornell resulted in a change in the name of the department to Human Ecology, but Dean Canoyer does not foresee such a change here at UMass.

There will be a student-faculty meeting on Wednesday February 18, at 4:30 in Skinner Auditorium to discuss the problems in the school presently. The meeting, which is open to all students in the school, will be conducted in two stages. First the students will meet alone in small groups and later on they will be joined by the faculty. The meeting will be chaired by Sue Gerson, a senior in the school.

The information received at this meeting will be considered by the committee studying the school. The main committee will be made up of faculty from the school of Home Economics and from other divisions of UMass, including the departments of Economics, Chemistry, and Sociology. Four elected undergraduate students; Noberta Hart, Gwendolyn Jacobs, Edna Neuwirth and Carolyn Clement and a Graduate student Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, will also serve on the main committee.

Campus consultants will include Associate Provost Jeremiah Allen; Dean Dwight Allen of the School of Education; Dean Wendall Smith of the School of Business Administration; and a faculty member from each of the departments of Public Health, Landscape Architecture and Government. Dr. Barbara Burn of International Programs, and Extension Home Economists from several counties are also Campus consultants.

Off campus consultants are Dean Robert Birney, School of Social Sciences, Hampshire College; Dr. D. Mark Hegsted, Professor of Nutrition, School of Public Health, Harvard University; Mrs. Helen Lamale fromthe Bureau of Labor Statistics; and Dr. Dorothy Lyle Director of Consumer Relations, Institute of Dry Cleaning, Silver Springs, Md.

There will also be an off Campus Advisory Panel consisting of Mrs. Dorothy Lee, Ph. D, Sociological Anthropologist; Dr. Flossie Byrd, Dean of the School of Home Economics, Prairie View A & M College, Texas; and Dr. Minnie E. Lemaire, Professor of Geography, Mt. Holyoke College.

Kibbutz Life Attracts Many S tudents

(Ed. Note: The following is the third of a series of articles written by DAILY COLLEGIAN Editor-in-Chief Don Epstein, who has just returned from a study tour in the Middle East with twelve other American college newspaper editors.)

By DON EPSTEIN
Editor-in-Chief

EIN HASHOFET, ISRAEL - The most popular social phenomenon which attracts students to Israel is the kibbutz. The Israeli kibbutz, a continual experiment in collective living, is based on the organization of society into groups of people who through cooperation and equality are able to demonstrate that the saying 'from each according to his ability to each according to his need,' can be made a reality.

In a kibbutz the community owns all the property, including the means of production and the results of the production. It is a true communal society with its members working together for the common good.

Currently there are 230 kibbutzim with some 80,000 members. Many of the kibbutzim which are located close to one another run joint regional economic, cultural and educational projects. In the past year several new kibbutzim have been established near the cease-fire lines.

All adult members work on the kibbutz at an occupation which they feel they are best suited for, of course keeping in mind what is best for the kibbutz. A newcomer to the kibbutz is allowed for a time to work in various jobs until he finds work which interests him.

The variety of occupations and professions in the kibbutz is as varied as could be expected in any small town. Most of the kibbutzim raise their own food (both animal and agricultural). On more established kibbutzim there are various workshops and industrial plants. The kibbutz makes money by selling the goods it produces to Israeli and foreign distributors.

Each member of the kibbutz is expected to work eight hours a day. The number of working hours is gradually reduced as a member gets older.

An Israeli author, Shlomo Tamir of Kibbutz Tel Yosef, has written of the kibbutz:

"The main problem is how to reach a degree of public organization inducing the individual member to put the greatest possible effort into his work . . . We try to ensure that every adult, youth and child, should remain in one branch of activity, be it in the fields, the workshops, the factories, the kitchens, or the children's homes . . . Each person must specialize in a certain branch, perfect his knowledge of it and develop it . . . Every individual is responsible for his own activity within his branch of work. There is no need for overseers and supervisors."

Each kibbutz looks upon itself as one big family. Every kibbutz, through committee meetings and open "town meetings" draws up an economic plan for the upcoming year including all member families of the kibbutz. Thus no one family in a kibbutz prospers while another family suffers. Either the whole kibbutz enjoys prosperity or no one does. Also when bad times come the whole kibbutz suffers together.

Each kibbutz family has an apartment of two rooms. All meals are eaten in a common dining hall. In many kibbutzim the children live in special children's homes. As soon as the mother brings her baby home from the hospital she puts it in a baby home. Although the baby, child, and teenager live in a separate house away from his parents, he or she does spend a lot of time with them. Kibbutz officials claim that family identification in a kibbutz is just as strong, if not stronger, than in outside society.

As the children grow older they pass from one section to another. Thus a kibbutz child, until he is ready to enter the army, spends his entire live living, learning, eating, and playing with his peers.

Women in the kibbutz are considered to be free and equal partners in the economic and social activity of the kibbutz. Most of the women work in the kitchen, dining room, clothes store, laundry, or the children's home and school.

Every kibbutz attempts to maintain its own school. The curriculum of kibbutz schools follows the guide recommended by the Ministry of Education for all Israeli schools.

Upon completion of their military service, most young men from kibbutzim return to their parents' kibbutz or else move to a new kibbutz and help to develop it. Many further their education at universities.

The government of a kibbutz is very democratic. The government is composed of several committees, and a small executive committee. All committee members are elected annually. Each kibbutz also has its general assembly, composed of all members of the kibbutz. The general assembly meets weekly to discuss and vote upon proposals and problems which confront the kibbutz.

There are no police officers or courts of law in a kibbutz. Disagreements and problems are worked out by an independent committee.

Last year some 5000 foreign students (3000 from the United States) volunteered to work on kibbutzim. Anyone who volunteers must promise to remain on the kibbutz for at least thirty days. While working on a kibbutz a student does not receive a fixed salary. He is given free room and board and some spending money.

Kibbutz officials admit that in recent months there has been a growing problem of drugs brought in my Americans. One official told the American college newspaper editors, "On a kibbutz pot is unacceptable. You don't need it on a kibbutz. We don't have the boredom so we don't have to look for substitutes."

Abortion Firm Goes to Court

BOSTON (AP) - Orders restraining a Springfield firm from offering to arrange abortions in England were continued Tuesday in Suffolk Superior Court.

Representatives of the firm, known as London Agency, Inc., or their attorneys did not contest the move.

Robert Stotherd, a lawyer and a director of the firm, said earlier the agency planned to move operations to Connecticut.

State Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn questioned the legality of the agency, which promised to arrange an abortion, transportation and lodging in England for $1,250.

Rent Hike Reasons

The housing crisis has once again reared its ugly head, this time in the form of a rent hike. My spies in the Housing Committee tell me that these are some of the reasons for the rent increase. First of all, there has been a 10% pay increase for the University labor. This has to be equalled by the University for those laborers not covered by the State. Secondly, 10 million dollars in loans have to be paid by rent fees instead of the usual bonding method for these reasons: 1. the Legislature has placed a 6% ceiling on the bond interest rate which is highly unrealistic in view of the fact that the market rate is now 7 1/4%. 2. the University Bonding Committee has advised against selling bonds for the past two years because they feared a recession. Again, the University loses because the interest rates are predicted to go as high as 10% by next year and the 6% ceiling may not be changed until then. It would then be impossible for the University to sell bonds at the rate of 7 1/4%.

A result of this is that the University will be unable to pay off the loans due to lack of funds. If the problem were taken to the Legislature, any possibility for independent building would vanish. Furthermore, the housing facilities which have been built in the past ten years have been built through the bonding system, bypassing the often tightfisted Legislature.

The housing situation is bad, but it is going to get worse. For the coming year, the new Northeast dorms should alleviate most of the triples. In fact, optimists are predicting a low occupancy of these dorms. The enrollment, however, will still be increased by 1500 students per year - even though the University cannot afford to build more housing units. Within two years the housing situation will be even more critical than it is now. At the present, the University is trying to get the Legislature to rescind the 1500 student quota, but the Legislature threatens to cut the already ridiculously low budget. Obviously, the problem grows worse.

Still another reason for the proposed room rent increase is the badly deteriorated condition of the traditional dorms. If these dorms are to stay habitable, action must be taken within the next year. In order to renovate these dorms, they must be taken out of service for several months because a summer is just not enough time for the extensive changes to be made. If this were done, the University would have to lose that many more room rents. But we shouldn't worry about that - the University doesn't have enough money at present to pay for renovations. By the way, the Legislature refuses to provide funds for renovation costs. So rent hikes are the only way to raise money for these repairs.

Finally, another problem which affects rents is the fact that the University has never solved the rate of occupancy problem. Even with tripling, the rate of occupancy in the past few years has not been over 85%. The students who do occupy rooms have to cover the cost of vacant rooms!

It is true that the Housing Committee members are upset by this situation and are doing everything they can to help the situation, but even they see little hope in sight. At this point, the best thing to do is write, write, and write some more to your senators and representatives. If you can get mad enough, write to the President. Get your parents to write a letter before they watch that T.V. report that tells them about those hippie campus freaks who do nothing but make trouble. Get your grandmother to write a letter and maybe she could include some of those cute hand knitted handkerchiefs that she makes as a bribe. Do anything that will help. Just do it!

Maybe we could hold a bake sale for UMass?

We Are Curious (MLK)

To The Editor:

What is the MLK anyway? We've been wondering about this since the November Moratorium when we first became interested in the various committees of the organization. After several confusing months, we hoped to clear up this question at the open meeting Monday night aired over WMUA. However, we seemed to have come away from that meeting more confused than ever.

First, what's more important the long range aims of the Council or the individual ego trips and personality clashes of the various members? Ken Mosakowski stressed this very point in his opening comments complaining that one of the biggest problems of the MLK in the past has been the personality clashes of the various members of the steering committee which too often interfered with theoretical goals of the Council, i.e., alleviating poverty, ending the war, repealing the draft, etc. In fact, it seems that Ken himself, in the course of the meeting, actually demonstrated this phenomenon for us. The meeting was one long series of personality clashes that, as one member of the audience observed, rivaled the Student Senate meetings for wasting time.

For example, Ken wasted a lot of meeting time on the argument over who he wants on the Council. He emphasized dedicated members excluding those people who could only give limited service. Besides this, he emphasized those whose motives were unselfish, and humanitarian not those on "ego trips" and those who "wanted recognition in the year book." He insisted that part time or selfishly motivated help was not worthwhile. Carl Brown told the audience that one hour's help per week was of no value. Ken also insisted that anyone who was frightened away by his personality was not what the MLK needs, while Carl said that anyone who was frightened by his blackness didn't belong on the Council either. Is this to say that liking Ken and Carl is a prerequisite to productive work on this "social action council?" Do we need a clearer example of personality clash interfering with the long range goals of the Council?

Personality diversity could be seen again in the question of whether the MKL supports violence or not. Gil Salk proclaimed that the aim of any reorganization named after Martin Luther King should support the nonviolent principles of that man. Carl (or Mr. Brown) as he prefers to be called, a few minutes later said that nonviolence was not only permissible but a necessary means to the aims of the Council. And what about the several mentions of "revolution?"

Another time consuming issue was Carl Brown's preoccupation with white (black?) racism. He turned every issue into a question of black vs. white. For instance he spoke of the NES as an instrument of "white racist genocide" that attempts to make everyone "white just like me." Then when the question of student apathy came up, Carl immediately passed it off as a case of "white plastic shells" who do nothing of any importance. Tell us that every black student is working avidly for power to the people (whose people?)

We know Mr. Brown's immediate reaction to this will be to call us white racists (horrors). And Joe McCarthy would have called us Communists.

We are not going to be frightened by Mr. Brown's blackness or Mr. Mosakowski's personality. We think the goals of the Council are worth working for in spite of these ego-trippers and we hope they haven't frightened away too many potential Council members.

Open House Enjoyable

I wish to reply to Miss Corea's letter appearing in the Feb. 9 issue concerning her dissatisfaction with open house.

First of all, Miss Corea, I sympathize with the discomfort you are experiencing and I respect your right to privacy. Since you claim to be trapped with your problem, I think it might be helpful for you to see the situation from a different prospective.

You say guys are walking into your room without knocking? Either you secretly like this idea or you haven't discovered that your door has a lock. As for the drunk guy in the bathroom, why didn't you report him immediately to your counselor? You are correct in assuming that your corridor will get charged for damage unless you and the other girls manage to identify your drunk friends. Your comment about obscenities ought to be at the bottom of your list. Have you ever seen anyone harmed by an obscenity?

The complaint about the party in a nearby room at least indicates that open house is not fully to blame. Loud stereos were invented long before visitation privileges.

Your point about not being able to walk around "comfortably ugly" really puzzles me. Since you obviously don't like the guys who visit your dorm, why do you feel you have to be "presentable?" If the guys are as drunk as you indicate, I'm sure they won't even notice. If you want to take a shower, a bathrobe should be sufficient.

You shouldn't be surprised if you find some guy throwing up in your bathroom. This is the inevitable result of a six-pack. I have found, however that girls drink as much as guys. Would you feel less uncomfortable if you found a girl throwing up in your bathroom?

It would be a nice idea if the University would provide one dorm for studious persons like yourself but this would obviously not be economical since it would never be filled.

You close by suggesting that the University should be for learning. I agree - but learning doesn't come only from books. You might view open houses as a way to "learn" that we live in a bisexual world, that some people drink to excess and, most of all, that it is possible to enjoy open houses while still devoting the necessary time to your studies. Ask your neighbors with the loud stereos if they are flunking out of school? If you can't see my point, I certainly hope you find an apartment off campus. If you don't, you will continue to be upset over something that should be enjoyable.

Each of us must find a balance between the freedom of open house and the responsibilities of studying. Since you are both trapped and unhappy at the same time, you might want to think about this problem some more before you "raise as much hell as possible."

Greenough Defies RSO

To The Editor:

We are writing in answer to Mr. Gauthier's letter that appeared in Tuesday's Collegian. It was stated that he wished to "set the record straight"; Mr. Gauthier then proceeded to set forth a calm, rational, and convincing statement which, incidentally, had very little to do with the feelings expressed in Mr. Tierney's letter to begin with. This was at least bearable until the last paragraph, and it is to these closing lines we take particular offense.

John's letter expressed a feeling of paternalism because such paternalism on the part of RSO seems a strong reality. What is more, Mr. Gauthier, you accuse him of being paternalistic because our monies are housed, "stashed" as you say, in his apartment (he doesn't even HAVE an "office"), and that "it is not the residents of Greenough who have direct control of their funds."

For your information, the Greenough Community DOES have direct control of its funds; that is the very reason why the money is in John's hands. We put it there by popular vote, in open defiance of RSO, where we could have access for whatever purpose we deemed necessary or desirable.

Finally, your sly remark that compares Mr. Tierney to Silas Marner amounts to a personal affront. So let us indeed stop the name calling. And in the future, sir, stick to subjects that you have some knowledge of.

What's A College Education?

To The Editor:

What is a college education? Is it sitting in your room for four years trying to get a 4.0? or is it idle hours in the hatch passing time with meaningless conversation. We, the brothers of Alpha Phi Omega, feel a need for student involvement on Campus and in the Community as an integral part of a complete education.

Believing in the principles of Leadership, Friendship, and Service, the Brotherhood of Alpha Phi Omega tries to become a meaningful part of the community in which we live. By working to help freshmen move into their dorms, running the used Book Exchange in the Union, organizing the Las Vegas Nite program, assisting in the Campus Blood Drive, sponsoring the Swingshift Coffee Hour, and aiding the Amherst Community Fair, we gain an education that books, lectures, and mere conversation could never achieve.

Flying Club Defies Tradition

All flying isn't huge silver planes, overcrowded airports, and pretty stewardesses. To the members of the Collegiate Flying Club, it's two-seat, red-and-white Piper, the short runway at LaFleur Airport in Northampton, and a breath-taking view of the UMass campus.

And maybe a nervous passenger.

At least, that was the case last Sunday when the Club offered to take this Collegian photog into the wild blue. The original idea was to get air-to-air pictures of a target plane, and some publicity for the club's recruitment drive. To add a little spice, Miss Frances Salipante, the Top College Girl on the UMass campus, was invited. The results were two very enlightened people and the photos on this page.

Before take-off, a thorough preflight inspection of the planes was performed, and Lee Storesund Club president, gave a running commentary for the benefit of the new-comers.

The two planes took off, with Bob Wright, a senior member of the club, flying a Piper carrying the photographer, and Prof. H. Stedham piloting the "target" Cherokee with Fran, her fiance, and Larry LaFleur of City Aviation in the passenger seats.

The take-off was smooth, and the mission seemed to be going well, but then the climb made Bob Wright's plane vibrate a little. He showed the concern of club members for their passengers when he took one look at the photog and radio'd the tower that he was levelling off because his passenger was getting uneasy. With everything back under control, the two planes circled the campus, with the Cherokee dropping low so that pictures of the plane over the campus could be taken.

Finally, after what seemed (to the Collegian photographer, anyway) an eternity, the planes touched down. The club's guests were impressed. What a view! Seeing the campus from two thousand feet certainly gives one a new perspective on the place. Even this queasy photographer had to admit that flying is really amazing. . .and it's amazing that more people aren't involved in this club.

At present, the newly-re-organized Collegiate Flying Club has a membership of about 50, and is hoping to add both flying and non-flying members to its ranks at the membership drive meeting tonight in the Student Union. The club offers free private pilot ground and instrument ground school training, interesting films, and lots of good times to all members. The eventual goal of the group is to buy a plane for the club, which would considerably cut the cost of lessons. All five-college area students, staff, and faculty members are invited to stop by the Union tonight and see what flying is really about.

At left, Club President Lee Storesund explains the instrument panel to Fran Salipante, who was recently voted Top College Girl at UMass. This explanation followed a thorough pre-flight inspection which must be performed before every flight.

At last - the planes land. This photo of the "target" Cherokee was taken as the plane carrying the photographer circled the field prior to landing.

Harvard Professor Recommends Drug Education in Classrooms

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Harvard medical school professor recommended Monday that drug education be made a part of regular classroom instruction for young people.

Dr. David C. Lewis, who also is chairman of the Drug Treatment and Drug Education Committee of Boston, acknowledged a considerable amount of teacher training would be necessary for such a program.

Lewis made his suggestion in a speech to a convention of the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

"I am convinced that drug education should be part of the school's ongoing classroom program, taught by a teacher," Lewis said.

He acknowledged that experts have their place in the development of instructional materials on drugs and in working with teachers.

"But don't let experts overwhelm you into believing that your teachers will not, in time, have the primary role in teaching this subject," Lewis said.

"They needn't be experts in the field to be effective. The materials rather than the teacher, can be the source of factual information and the way in which the materials are presented and discussed can be the focus of teacher training."

Lewis said instruction on drugs should never be sensationalized and that tirades against drug use are ineffective.

Of more value, he said, are the comments of drug experienced young people.

"Students will listen and react to what other young people have to say," Lewis said. "Students also should be told that health problems related to alcohol use and excessive cigarette smoking comprise a major health problem in the drug field."

Lewis said students will not make sound decisions on information they cannot believe. For this reason, he urged teachers to concede that not all the answers are available on drug use and to recognize controversy where it exists.

"You won't help kids make a rational decision about using marijuana by telling them it will damage their bodies," Dr. Lewis said.

"In noco the credible statement is that physical damage secondary to marijuana use has not been demonstrated, nor have adequate studies been performed to rule out this possibility. . .

"Since the on-the-spot decision to take drugs is made by the student, education can be effective only if it is directed at the decision making process.

"It must provide information so that the student can view the social, medical and legal implications of drug taking in personal terms. The student must be able to ask himself: What can this do for me and what can this do to me?"

U.S. Senate Candidate To Speak at Smith Friday

Josiah A. Spaulding, Republican candidate for the United States Senate, will speak at Smith College this Friday at 7:30 pm. in Wright Hall Auditorium. His topic will be "Politics of the 70's". A reception will follow in Wright Hall Common Room. The public is invited to attend.

In announcing his candidacy, Spaulding said that he stood for revolutionary change in Congress, an all-volunteer army with an end to sending draftees to Vietnam, and for state and local initiatives to bring power close to the people. He is running against incumbent Senator Edward M. Kennedy.

French Avalanche Worst of Century

VAL D'ISERE, France (AP) - Tons of fresh snow broke like a white tial wave over a ski camp Tuesday, killing 2 persons and leaving 26 missing in Europe's worst single avalanche of the century. More than 60 persons were injured.

Loosened by up to 60 mile winds, of a wild French Alpine blizzard the mass of snow jumped a national highway, a river, crushed two garages and ripped the roof off a hotel before crashing through the doors and by windows of the camp's dining room at breakfast time.

Survivors told of the terrible roar of the avalanche, of its dizzy speed - experts said it may have hit at nearly 120 miles an hour - and of their luck in emerging alive from the white fury.

The dining room was buried, and few of the 30 or so eating there escaped alive. The walls were spattered with the blood from bodies crushed against a wall under the pressure of the slide.

Most of the dead and injured were young people enjoying a low cost ski vacation at the Union des Contres de Plein Air- Union of Fresh Air Centers. Of the 194 guests, many were French postal and railway workers. There were about 20 Belgians and six West Germans staying at the camp's hostel.

Some bodies, including those of ski trail workers going to their jobs, were hurled high in the air. The slides 100 yard front caught autos and carried them 100 yards away.

"There was a gay happy atmosphere at the dining tables," said Jean Charles Lees, 25, who suffered head and hip injuries. "We were talking about where we would go skiing.

"Suddenly, there was this rumbling sound. As the noise became deafening, I realized it was an avalanche. I just had time to dive against the wall for protection. Then a great wall of snow burst through the door and hit me. I was submerged and I remember no more until I woke up in a neighboring house."

The rescue work went on in blizzard conditions and near zero visibility, the effects of the storm that natives of Val d'Isere - home of French ski champions Jean Claude Killy and Marielle and Christine Geitschel - called the worst in memory.

Mysterious Oil Slick Kills Water Birds In Martha's Vineyard

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) - The Coast Guard gave up the search Tuesday for the source of oil that killed hundreds of water fowl near Martha's Vineyard over the weekend.

Patrol boats and helicopters covered 1,200 square miles with out finding a large slick in the area.

The Coast Guard has flown 64 birds, mostly ducks, to the Lawrence branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, where they will be nursed back to health.

The oil killed hundreds of the water birds, and volunteers cleaned the feathers of some that were found alive.

UMass Music Professor Named Visiting Composer at Hampshire

Robert Lewis Stern, a member of the music faculty at UMass was recently named Visiting Composer in electronic music at Hampshire College for 1970.

Professor Stern will remain in residence at the University while acting as Visiting Composer in the School of Humanities and Arts at Hampshire College. Stern was a member of the Five College committee that helped establish and develop the Electronic Music Studio at the new college.

That studio, containing one of the world's most complex electronic music synthesizers, will be used as a teaching and experimental facility when Hampshire College opens in September, 1970.

Professor Stern graduated from the University of Rochester in 1956 and received his advanced degrees from the Eastman School of Music. He has taught at the Hochstein Memorial School of Music, in Rochester, the Eastman School of Music and the Hartford Conservatory of Music.

Dean Francis Smith of the School of Humanities and Arts praised the selection as representing "an unimpeachable beginning in an area of the arts we hope will be identified intimately with the character and growth of the School."

He described Professor Stern as "the man who, perhaps more than any other contemporary composer, has seen the possible effective uses of electronic music in both education and creative performance. His own stature as an artist and his special gifts as a teacher of music will both, we hope, gain in expressive power as a result of this award."

BU Faculty Senate To Investigate Two Professors

BOSTON (AP) - The Faculty Senate Council at Boston University announced Tuesday appointment of a committee to investigate the presence of two B.U. professors in the Administration Building Dec. 8 and 9 during a student demonstration.

The Faculty Senate named Prof. Howard Zinn, of the school of government, and Prof. Owen Fleischman, a physicist, as the two professors who were in the building.

UMass 25th In Top 30

The annual survey has been conducted for the educational journal "School and Society" for the past 50 years by the University of Cincinnati. Dr. Garland G. Parker, vice-provost for admissions and records at U of C, and a nationally recognized authority on collegiate statistics, conducted the survey.

According to Dr. Garland, the 20,395 students at Amherst and Boston place UMass 25th in the so-called "Big 30" institutions ranked according to number of full-time students.

UMass is the only New England institution among the 30. The list is headed by such public higher education systems as the State University of New York with 179,107 students and the California State Colleges with 139,100.

UMass appeared on the Big 30 list for the first time last year, when it was ranked 29th with an enrollment in Boston and Amherst of 18,594.

Garland surveyed 1145 accredited colleges and universities - and the two-year schools under their administrations - and reported a nationwide total of 4,156,268 full-time students, up from 4,092,234 last year.

Frosh Icemen Edge New Prep, 5-4, in OT

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

The Little Redmen hockey team stole a page from the heart-stoping antics of the varsity Monday night at Orr Rink with a thrilling 5-4 overtime victory against highly-touted New Prep.

The freshmen started a little slowly, and it took some great saves from goalie John Kiah to keep them from falling behind. UMass then stepped up the pace and opened the scoring at 8:53 of the first period on a goal by high-scoring center Pat Keenan with assists going to Don Riley and Paul Whitney.

However, New Prep came back to tie the game less than two minutes later on a goal by Lawrence whose shot deflected off the pads of a sprawled Kiah and went in just under the crossbar. Richie Smith then made the score 2-1 for Prep when he went in all alone, deked Kiah, and finished off the play with a nice backhander.

Don Lowe tied the game with three minutes left in the period with a slap-shot from about ten feet inside the blue line on a good display of passing by the frosh in a play which included Bob Shea and Dave Branch.

New Prep put on a good display of passing of their own as they went ahead 3-2 on a goal by Dennis Hebner who was set up in front by Quinn. UMass dominated play for a good part of the second period but was unable to capitalize until Branch tied the game on a rebound of a shot by Joe Roache which had the New Prep goalie McBrane way out of position.

The third period had both teams playing excellent two-way hockey. Both goalies had a number of larcenous saves in the period and it was a shot by Hebner which deflected off a player's skate in the scramble in front of Kiah which put New Prep ahead 4-3. The score remained that way despite the Little Redmen's sometimes frantic efforts to tie it until Riley scored on passes from Bob Shilalie and Lonnie Avery after Coach Richards had pulled Kiah in favor of a sixth skater. The equalizer came with only 26 seconds left in the regulation time.

Avery ended the thriller in storybook fashion for UMass with 1:44 left in the first overtime period as he took a pass from Lowe and beat McBrane from in close.

BETWEEN THE BLUELINES.. Lowe sharp on defense...Keenan unable to score on a penalty shot in the second period which was called against New Prep for covering the puck in the crease...Shilalie, Shea, Avery, and Branch turning in solid games...Keenan and Quinn ousted in the second period for fighting...Kiah being injured on three separate occasions before being taken out...Kiley all over the ice to take up the slack left by Keenan's departure, and it payed off as he scored the tying goal seconds after being robbed by McBrane on a semi-breakaway...

Mermen Face WPI

By ED DOHERTY
Staff Reporter

Hoping to bounce back from last Saturday's disappointing loss to star studded Central Connecticut, the Redman swimmers host the Technicians from Worcester Polytechnic Institute tonight at 8 p.m. in the Boyden pool.

The mermen will attempt to regain the form that produced a pre-Christmas victory over Holy Cross. A good team effort will be needed, which means that in addition to the expected fine performances from captain Al Northrup and record-holder Mark Miller, other swimmers will have to earn a number of seconds and thirds.

Eddie Jazab, Paul Joy, Morris Lynch and Herb Schuster are swimmers who, although producing some individual performances, have yet to provide the consistency needed by a solid swim team.

With just three more dual meets remaining on the schedule, in addition to the conference meet at UNH in March, time is running out on the swimmers attempt to achieve a respectable New England swimming record.

Perhaps tonight will be a start, or at least a step towards the re-establishment of top notch swimming at UMass.

NBA-ABA Merger Talks Set to Move

NEW YORK (AP) - The commissioners of the two rival pro basketball leagues, in another step toward a merger, announced yesterday three man committee from each league will meet soon to "discuss possibilities of a merger."

Commissioner Walter Kennedy of the older National Basketball Association and Commissioner Jack Dolph of the newer American Basketball Association made the joint announcement after a two hour meeting.

"The three man committees representing both leagues will have a meeting as soon as possible when all six men are available to discuss possibilities of a merger", the statement said.

The NBA committee is composed of Sam Schulman of the Seattle SuperSonics, Ned Irish of the New York Knicks and Abe Pollin of the Baltimore Bullets.

The ABA committee is made up of Roy Bee of the New York Mets, Richard Tinkham of the Indiana Pacers and Joseph Heary of the Dallas Chaparrals.

No pre-conditions were set for the committee talks as they were by the NBA before Kennedy would talk to Dolph. The ABA apparently met those earlier conditions, believed to have involved the multimillion dollar anti-trust suit the ABA filed against the NBA, and the status of the ABA's Washington franchise.

The NBA had asked that the suit be suspended before talks take place. It also was felt that the Washington franchise infringed on the territorial rights of the NBA's Baltimore team.

Other problems certain to be discussed were the signing away by ABA teams such NBA stars as Rick Barry, Billy Cunningham, Dave Bing and Zelmo Beaty.

And perhaps most important will be the talks to decide how many ABA teams would be involved in the merger. The NBA has 14 teams, with four more to be added next season by expansion, and the ABA has 11 teams.

DevlinMovesUp

NEW YORK (AP) - Bruce Devlin, on the strength of his $25,000 victory in the Bob Hope Desert Classic Sunday, rocketed into second place behind Pete Brown on the Professional Golfers Association money winning list.

Devlin now has won $27,411 in those early tournaments of the pro tours behind Brown's $31,142.

Dave Hill maintained his lead in the new point rating system with 206.90 as the Hope tournament was not included because pros were paired with amateurs for four rounds. Bob Lunn is second with 201.4

even, but then Gallagher put in a beautiful under-the-basket left hand hook, Erving a layup off a Pagliara feed, and Gallagher a tip in, and the Redmen led by nine.

Stan Grayson and Adams, however, brought the ever-dangerous Crusaders back close. After leading 28-19, UMass was outscored 11-2 and tied 30-30 with 2:33 remaining in the first half. Betancourt got the lead back with a 20 footer, but Kissane hit a free throw and Buddy Venne hit one of his patented 30 footers and Holy Cross was up by one, 33-32, with 44 seconds to go.

Betancourt however, got one free throw to tie things, and with three seconds left, converted a leaping half court pass from Erving into a three point lead. The Redmen therefore led 36-33 at the half.

Erving had 12 rebounds at the half, while Betancourt had 12 points. Kissane, dogged constantly by Gallagher, had only six points and six rebounds.

The first five minutes of the second half were sloppy. Both teams missed close in shots and both committed numerous turnovers. Despite it all, UMass kept a five point lead due to baskets by Betancourt, Ellerbrook, and Mathias, in for foul-ridden Samuelson. Erving blocked two shots in the first three minutes of the half.

The lead varied between five and seven points for the next three minutes until Gallagher hit a pair of free throws and Erving canned a jumper, to up the lead to nine, 52-43, with 11:06 left.

Adams, Kissane, and Grayson, nowever, quickly brought the Crusaders back to within four, 55-51, and with 9:37 left it was still anyone's ballgame. Then came the first big explosion.

Ellerbrook hit a 15 footer. Betancourt 30 seconds later hit another. Then Erving blocked a Kissane shot, and set up a Mathias jumper. The Redmen were suddenly up by ten, 61-51 with 8:17 still remaining.

The teams traded baskets for the next couple of minutes, until Chapman hit on a nifty inside move around Kissane, Erving a free throw and Ellerbrook hit on the end of a Betancourt fast break pass. The lead was now 68-55, with five minutes left.

Still it wasn't all over. Grayson and Kissane hit a couple, and helped by three straight UMass turnovers chopped the lead to nine with 3:13 left.

Mathias off a beautiful Erving feed hit a big, big hoope, and then hit a foul shot to up the lead back to 12. The Crusaders answered briefly with one hoop but that was it. Erving hit a jumper, Samuelson a free shot, Erving a couple of foul shots, Ellerbrook two more and a great game was all over but the shouting.

Coach Leaman took out his starters one by one, and he had one of his greatest coaching victories, an 83-66 win.

Incidentally, Holy Cross was number one in New England prior to gametime. Very interesting.

It should be an entertaining week and a big one for a UMass team still in contention for a lot of hoop honors.

REDMAN RANTINGS - Erving had 24, Betancourt 19, Ellerbrook 12 and Gallagher 10 in the balanced UMass scoring . . . Kissane had 21, 15 in the second half, Adams 14, Venne 12 and Grayson 10 for the Crusaders . . . Erving broke the UMass season rebounding mark of 342 with his 25 caroms last night . . . The old record was set by Tim Edwards . . . Erving, who is second in the country in rebounds now has 352 on the season with seven games still left . . . The huge riotous crowd was ready with a whole lot of noise and some good chants like, "kissane's Number Two, Julie's Number One" . . . Of course the full complement of cheerleaders were there, it being a big game and television being there . . . It was the second time all year they were there, and probably the last time . . . With this year's crowds, who needs them . . . Erving showed a lot of class by shaking hands with Grayson and Kissane when he was taken out of the game . . . Channel 27 was of course covering the game and televising it back to Worcester and Boston . . . And as Leaman said, "The next two are the big ones", so see you in Kingston and Storrs.

But, Frosh Fall to Cross, 70-55

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Although the UMass freshman basketball team defeated the Holy Cross duo of Gene Doyle and Jim Schnurr, they lost to the entire Crusader freshman five last night at the Cage, 70-55. The loss dropped the Little Redmen record to 4-8.

If Doyle and Schnurr had played the entire contest and not been removed by a sympathetic Coach Frank McArdle with a little over two minutes remaining, the duo probably would have won that battle too. The twosome hit for 49 points between them, with Schnurr hitting for 26 and Doyle getting 23.

There were some bright spots, though, for UMass. Charlie Peters came through with his second straight strong rebounding game, this time pulling down an unofficial total of twelve caroms. He also chipped in with nine points which was second only to Mile Polakoff's 15 for scoring honors.

Now for the game itself. UMass jumped into a quick 7-2 lead with less than three minutes gone with Peters canning three points and Olsen and Polakoff each getting two. Peters at this time was especially strong off the offensive boards pulling down three in the first two minutes of play.

But then the Crusaders took over and never looked back. Schnurr got a hot hand and made three hoops and led his team through a skien of twelve straight points to put Holy Cross ahead, 14-7. The Little Redmen trailed the rest of the half as the Cross relied on the shooting of Doyle and Schnurr. The half ended with UMass down by twelve, 36-24.

The second half was all Doyle and Schnurr. Between the two of them they scored all but four of Holy Cross' 34 points in the second half. Doyle, although standing at 6'8, was hitting from far outside along with scoring on driving layups.

The Little Redmen did try to make a game of it at one point in the second half. They employed a press which caused Holy Cross to throw the ball away a couple of times and UMass closed the gap to 42-39 with 12:00 still remaining.

But the Crusaders went back to work and scored the next six points to open the lead to a safe nine points. From then on, it was no contest and the game ended with the Little Redmen on the short end of a 70-55 score.

Peters, playing his second straight good game, also lost one of his contact lenses in the second half a la Tom Sanders. This caused a brief delay in the game as Peters and a few of his teammates went down on all fours for the search. Luckily for Peters, it was found and the exciting contest was resumed.

The Little Redmen have a day off before they meet the Westfield State JV's in a six o'clock contest at Westfield. A win here would mean a lot to the frosh who face a very tough schedule for the rest of the season.

A Memorial Mass for the late assistant UMass football coach Jack Delaney will be celebrated at the Newman center, 7 p.m. Thursday. The mass, sponsored by the varsity football team, is open to the public.

Icemen Hit Road In Bid for Playoffs

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Sports Day Editor

The rampaging Redmen will be out to win their fourth hockey game in five matches tonight when they take on the Huskies of UConn at Storrs. For UMass, presently 6-4 in Division II and 6-5 overall, this marks the first of five straight games on the road.

If the Redmen can win their remaining four Division II games they'll have an excellent chance at gaining a berth in the playoffs. Should they get the nod, it would be the 'coup de maitre' for previously hockey-poor UMass.

Middlebury, previous victor over UMass in a game that coach Jack Canniff would like very much to have back, is presently ranked just ahead of the Redmen in the division standings. But the Panthers have three games with UVM, Colby and Bowdoin, all tough games, and as Canniff says, "anything can happen." Needless to say that 'anything' might just be to UMass' favor.

The Division II playoffs are a four team affair, generally the four best in the division. Right now, little Nichols College has the best record but the schedule they play is not what one might consider to be of top caliber.

So, if selections are made on the basis of teams that are in reality the 'best' teams, UMass at a possible 10-4, just might have a fighting chance to obtain a bid.

However, cautioned Canniff, "if we should lose one in the interim, it might not matter that much. We're just going to take them one at a time." It's not always the best policy to look too far ahead.

"I'm definitely happy about the way we've played in the last four games", said Canniff. The Redmen are coming off a streak in which they have defeated Hamilton, UVM and Merrimack. "The kids have been working hard and they deserve what they get."

As for UConn tonight, Canniff expects the Huskies to play his Redmen tight. UConn has a winning record but it has been compiled within a schedule which includes more of the so-called weaker teams than the strong ones.

Bill McMann, who scored the winner Saturday night against Merrimack is a doubtful starter due to a bad ankle. His loss over an extended period of time could be a blow to the squad. Hopefully the injury is not serious.

Since the game will be played at Storrs, the Huskies figure to have the usual 1-2 goal edge but as always the weather will be a factor.

The Huskies' home rink is an open air affair with only one side closed to the elements. Canniff hopes that "it won't be windy". That's right, the wind. If its too strong, it could affect the performance of the team which has to skate against it.

Concern with the wind aside, UMass beat the Huskies in their own lair, 7-1, last year. The result does not figure to be that much different this year.

Wrestlers at UConn

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

The UMass wrestling team will be putting its lofty New England ranking on the line this afternoon when the Redmen travel to Storrs to meet UConn. The Redmen are currently ranked second in New England, right behind Springfield, with a 7-4 record. The Huskies, however, have been coming on strong as of late and have climbed all the way up to third. They boast a 6-1 record, all against New England teams and their only setback has come at the hands of Springfield.

Coach Homer Barr is expecting a tough meet from the Huskies, whom the Redmen defeated 25-18 a year ago. "They have a rough team", Barr said, "and their strength lies in the ability of their middleweights." He noted that the main UConn weakness is the lightweights and hopes that the Redmen can build up some momentum by jumping into a quick lead.

Coach Barr had made a few lineup changes for UMass. Sheldon Goldberg has moved down to the 134 lb. class for the first time this season, and he should be even stronger at the new weight. Steve Jones has taken over the 142 lb. class and Clay Jester is back at 150 after missing the Williams match because of illness. Tom Young seems to be regaining his old form and will again be a starter at 167. Either Rick Tyma or Dave Reynolds will open for the Redmen at 126, and if Tyma has recovered from the flu, he will probably get the nod.

The remainder of the UMass lineup will be the same with Nick DiDomenico, Jim Godkin, Tom Andrewes, Bruce Buckbee and captain George Zguris.

Vocal Open Meeting Protests Room Rent Hike

Senate Acts to Check Figures, Search for Alternative Funding

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

With a hostile, standing room only crowd in the S.U. ballroom, Associate Treasurer Robert Brand last night presented the administration's proposed room rent increase to the Student Senate. The presentation, consisting of the schedules previously released, was followed by a question and answer session, which was periodically interrupted by applause for points and questions critical of the Treasurer's office and the state legislature.

The Senate responded during the presentation by unanimously approving bills providing funds for an independent check of the administraion's figures, and establishing a committee to investigate alternative methods of meeting the costs. The latter bill further stated the Senate's opposition to any action approving the rent increase until the special committee delivers its report.

The Senate tabled until next week a bill providing for a rent strike, upon hearing Public Relations Chairman Geoffrey Levine argue that such action at this time would be premature, and would upset plans now in the works. He announced later in the meeting that in addition to the open meeting to be held tomorrow from 1:30 to 5 in the Ballroom, there is planned a march on Whitmore for next Thursday; a march on the Board of Trustees in the near future; and a massive bussing of students to Boston to petition the legislature for subsidization.

The Senate's actions reflect an inability by the Senate and the observers to fully comprehend the meaning of Mr. Brand's presentation, reflected in the first bill; and a belief that mere opposition to the rent increase without constructive alternatives is useless.

Dean of Students William Field, in responding to a question about the funding of the campus center, went on to mote that "This crisis is the result of conditions in the economy beyond our influence." He further stated that "Alternatives are necessary. . .we've got to find ways to prevent students from being squeezed out by (these costs)." He recommended pressure upon the legislature to subsidize the skyrocketing costs.

Mr. Brand in his presentation pointed out that the increase in Building Authority rents (Southwest, Orchard Hill, the new dormitories, and Brett and Gorman) is due largely to short-term financing of the newer projects at 6.5% to 7.25%, an action made necessary by an inability to float bonds at the 5% limit imposed by state law. Short-term financing has caused an increase of $1,174.00 in debt service costs over 1968-69. Other factors include escalating labor, materials, and utilities costs.

The increase in rents for the Building Association dorms (Northeast and most of Central areas) is due largely to the pressing need to refurnish and refurbish those dorms, as well as escalating costs. Debt service is not a factor in rent increases for these dorms.

The criticisms levelled during the question and answer system ranged from the administration's failure to search out alternatives methods of funding; to approach the state to lift the 5% bonding limits; to seek state appropriations to subsidize dorms. Mr. Brand pointed out that it was the job of his office to draw up projected cost figures and compute the rates that the costs dictate; that the state has been recently approached by the Bonding Council of the Building Authority to life the 5% limit; that the University has sought appropriations for furnishings in the past from the legislature, and has been consistently turned down.

News Analysis

The Rent Payers React

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Staff Reporter

When Asst. Treasurer Brand finished his presentation of the facts and figures behind the rent increase, the students reacted 'some with facts and figures', some with emotional rhetoric and modest proposals.

Just a sampling of what was said . . .

"Any man who puts his trust in statistics, I don't trust." . . .
"It seems that the raising of UMass rents would be more of an incentive for the Amherst landlords to raise the rents."
"What the hell is going onhere?"
"Everything before 1967 was figured at 3.95% . . . the Campus Center was figured at 4% . . . it has increased from 4% to 7%."
"At the Aug. 31, 1967 meeting of the Trustees, the student fee increase was estimated at $5.00 . . . now its up $50 - $80."
"The traditional dorms have an occupancy rate of 87%. The Authority Projects occupancy rate is 93%."
"All I am doing tonight is presenting the proposed figures for the rent increase."
"Sell the university to private industry!"
"We ought to form a student-administrative committee to go before the legislature."
"We have to find the money so that students aren't squeezed out."
"There doesn't seem to be any effort to solve the problems."
"Have there been any alternative plans discussed by the administration."
"No."
"If phys ed 100 was dropped as a requirement, we could save $150, 000.00."
"I don't think that many people here are satisfied."

The following came in rapid sequence.

"Why doesn't Arnold House pay?"
"I'll have to bring that up before the administration," replied Mr. Brand.
"I brought that up to you two weeks ago," injected Area Coordinator Bill Idol. "Why hasn't it been brought up yet?"
"I brought that up to you six months ago, Mr. Brand," cried Glen Fulton, Head of the Committee that encountered the Treasurer's office over the conditions in the Northeast Area.

And on the voices went . . .

"In other words you can't tell the legislature what to do, but you can tell the students."
"I came here to present the facts . . ."
"How do you propose the students pay the increase?"
"Why is the increase in one lump sum rather than spread out over a number of years?"
"Don't you think it's a little unreasonable to pay $160.00 a month for half a 12' x 14' cubicle?"

There were numerous descriptions of bad room conditions . . . which everybody, at least the students, know about. There was at least one invitation for the Treasurer to move into a dorm room.

"We keep butter on top of the radiator . . . you talk of heating expenses."
"Repair service is invisible.'
"There are plans to mobilize to go to the Trustees . . . and then the Legislature."
"Why has the Physical Plant not been investigated?"
"What would the administration do in the event of a massive student rent strike?"

"Everybody is being screwed except those who make money . . . the only ones suffering are you students and your parents."
". . . those who are profiting from an inflationary war . . ."

The rhetoric continued. There was too much said to draw any conclusions or even sense any directions. The students are in a mood to act. There were marches fro m the Central Area and a candlelight procession from the Northeast Area.

One thing was made clear to everyone in attendance; either the rent increase will go through or the students are going to formulate an alternative. The alternatives are few.

The present analysis of events (and fact and figures) show that the rent increase issue is bigger and more complex than has been imagined.

Tomorrow's meeting in the Student Union ballroom at 1:30 p.m. will be the next step in providing the students with a direction and hopefully a workable alternative to the proposed 33% increase.

MDC Elects Editors

Sports Editor Peter Pascarelli was chosen the Daily Collegian's new Editor-in-Chief by the newspaper's staff, in the Collegian's annual election held yesterday in the Student Union.

Elected Managing Editor was the present Assistant Managing Editor Mark Silverman. Like Pascarelli Silverman was unopposed in his election. Also elected without opposition were John Sullivan as Sports Editor and Jan Palmbach as Business Manager.

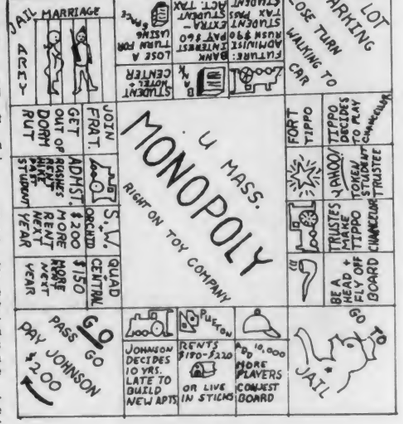
Don Epstein left the position of Editor-in-Chief with the honor of being named Editor Emeritus by the Staff. He is only the fourth Editor given this honor in the Collegian's history.

Before turning the editorship over to Pascarelli, Epstein thanked the staff and singled out Collegian advisors Al Oickle and Dr. Dario Politella for their help over the past year; and he also exp essed his thanks to Dean ofStudents, William Field for all the assistance he has given the Collegian over the year.

The new Editors took office immediately after the Collegian Publishing Board ratified the election results following the meeting.

Administration Game



Rules

1. First you need a Banker-Administrator who is out to control the whole board; he makes the rules as he goes along.
2. Players are chosen by how much the administrators think the Players know.
3. Next, you need $8,000 for every player. However this money should not be divided equally among players. Many players should receive far less.
4. Advances on the board are made by chance - throw the dice.
5. If you land on the pig, go to jail. Males enter the "army" for two years; they roll the dice - if they get under a 3 they "die" and leave the game. Females get married and roll the dice - if they get under a 6, they get pregnant and leave the game.
6. The object of the game is for the players to lose. (NOTE: The distributors of this game suggest, however, that players take control of the board by any means necessary.)

Noted Ecologist to Speak On Nuclear Power Hazards

On Thursday February 12th, at 8 p.m. in Room 104 Thompson Hall, the Government Department and the Coalition For Environmental Quality will co-sponsor noted ecologist Larry Bogart; He will speak on "Environment Hazards of Nuclear Power."

Dr. David Inglis of the University's Physics Department, who helped develop the atomic bomb during World War II, will act as moderator for Mr. Bogart's talk, which will cover in great detail the effects of the Nuclear Power Plant at Vernon, Vermont, upon the Connecticut River Valley.

Mr. Bogart has a long and distinguished career in Conservation circles. Educated at Harvard, he then went on to serve as Chairman of the Friends of the Hudson, a group active in citizen action to safeguard the river and promote clean air and water programs in New York State. He participated in the White House Conference on Natural Beauty and chaired the Air Pollution Control panel at the Youth for Natural Beauty Conference in Washington in 1966.

Through the International Cooperation Institute, he has followed world wide pollution problems and has lectured on constructive solutions to the growing menace of deterioration of our environment. Recently, Mr. Bogart has helped to organize regional Anti-Pollution Leagues in the Northeast. He is also currently working on a book concerned with the hazards of Radiation.

It is imperative that the five-college community understand the uses and mis-uses of the Vernon Nuclear Project. The fact that it is seventy or eighty miles away makes it no less deleterious to our future existence in the Connecticut Valley. Hopefully many citizens will come away from the lecture concerned enough to prevent the eventual plans for this Vernon project. For as Mr. Bogart himself states, "that unless radio activity is brought under strict international controls, it could well become the ultimate pollutant!"

Dr. Kenmore To Speak On MeherBaba

Dr. Harry L. Kenmore, an Apostle of Avatar Meher Baba, who has just recently returned from India, will lecture at Thompson Hall this Thursday. Dr. Kenmore is one of the few people who has authority to answer questions concerning Baba.

Dr. Kenmore lived with Meher Baba in India on several occasions along with other of Baba's close disciples. Dr. Kenmore is known as a Mandali of Meher Baba, which is the Indian equivalent of Apostle or intimate disciple.

Dr. Kenmore is also the only Apostle of Baba who is from the U. S. He is in charge of the Society for Avatar Meher Baba in New York City.

Prof. Silver Discusses New Role of Ombudsman

The new position of Ombudsman, proposed by Pros. Isidore Silver, will be filled in March. This post provides a place where students and faculty can go with their problems. Prof. Silver discussed and defined the role of Ombudsman in an interview with the DAILY COLLEGIAN earlier this week.

Professor Silverdrafted the original proposal for the Ombudsman job and helped to get it through the student and faculty senates as well as approved by the Trustees. He is presently serving on the selection committee (which consists of three faculty members, two undergraduate students, one graduate student and Dean Field).

Professor Silver stated that basically the role of the Ombudsman will be to provide a place to go and an individual to see so that faculty and students can get some kind of action on their particular problems. Presently, the Ombudsman is planned to include a faculty member and student co-member.

While Silver defined the Ombudsman as more or less a "free floating conscience" with "boundless jurisdiction," he also emphasized that "The Ombudsman will work for minor problems and specific grievances. He will not settle campus wars and probably won't make any fundamental decisions."

The Ombudsman's greatest value, according to Silver, lies in the fact that he will be "visible" with an easily accessible office (Whitmore of the new Student Union) and office hours. "The individual will get responses, (verbal and written at least,) to his problems because the Ombudsman will act quickly," Silver said.

Silver said that the idea for an Ombudsman has been alive since Sept. of 1968 and has grown out of a "frustration" by many students in not having anyone to go to with their problems.

The essential attributes of the Ombudsman, according to Prof. Silver, must be that he is, "fairly familiar with University problems; forceful enough to force issues (i.e. not a yes man); fairly tough-minded; and can work with faculty and administration (be a diplomat). Most importantly, however, he must be able to "communicate" with the students and be a "thinker."

Silver pointed out that the Ombudsman will make no binding decisions and will not "rationalize bad decisions" but rather try to "get changes made." "He is not an advocate of the students, necessarily, but rather looks at the problem first," he added.

The position of faculty Ombudsman is one of a two year term and its only technical qualification is that the individual must be a full time faculty member at the University. The student position is indefinite as of yet. Whoever fills the positions must not be popular with the students, but more important, must be respected because he is trying to help them.

As to the future success of the Ombudsman at UMass, Professor Silver stated, that "if it is not used it will be useless." He concluded that it has worked at other insitutions, but added that when a University machine is working badly, then "it can't do much, if it is working well then it can help it."

Judge Sets Trial Date In MIT Sit-In

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Judge Haven Parke in District Court Wednesday set March 10 for the trial of 29 persons charged in the two day occupation of an office at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Eleven persons pleaded innocent to a variety of charges, while attorneys for 16 others also were present but did not enter pleas for their clients. The 11 included eight MIT students, two staff members and Lilian S. Robinson, 27, of Boston, an instructor in the literature department.

MLK Seeks More Space In New Campus Center

A request for more space in the new Campus Center was formally presented by Martin Luther King Council members to SUG board member John Hutchinson. This request was backed up by 1740 signatures in a petition of support. This lack of space is because presents plans for the Campus Center were originally drawn up in 1960, not allowing for the growth of the University since then.

The King Council is seeking three rooms in addition to their presently allocated one. As an alternative they would like to obtain 4,000 square feet in the bookstore of the old Union, if WMUA does not have the necessary funds to make the move. If this plan fails, the King Council will seek the Senate's help in forcing the SUG Board to grant them more space.

Costs Up, Space Down

Are Students Getting Their Money's Worth?

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

According to U.S. News and World Report, the average cost of attending a public college has risen from $820 in 1960 to $1248 in 1970. Administrators have blamed higher faculty salaries, inflation, construction costs, more expensive equipment, and the underwriting of needy students for the rising costs of getting a college education.

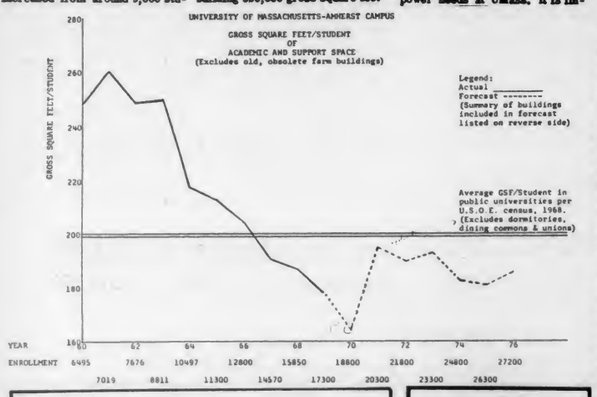
In 1960 the University of Massachusetts received a total capital appropriation for education of $9.7 million, and in 1969, not including the medical school or the new Boston campus, it received an appropriation of $20.2 million. During this time the UMass population increased from around 9,000 students to 18,500 students.

How did this help the student? According to the graph depicting academic gross square feet per student, it is easily seen that the 1960 figure was near 250 sq. ft. while the 1970 figure dips to a low of 165 sq. feet. This figure is 35 sq. ft. below the average for public universities.

What does the University have to say about this figure? The alumni magazine explains the problem fairly well when it says, "The growth of the campus has had to be extraordinary in order to meet the needs of this rapidly expanding population." Planning officials admit that the University should be building 300,000 gross square feet each year to keep pace with the increasing population. As of now this has not been done.

The only way that students can be given more classroom space immediately is to construct 100,000 sq. ft. of modular classrooms and faculty offices. These can be either temporary or permanent, and according to the planning office will not detract from the overall beauty of the campus.

This, however, is not the first construction priority. Recently, a power shortage developed on campus. The reason for such a state of affairs is simple. The physical plant building as it is now cannot fill the increasing heat and power needs at UMass. It is imperative that construction begin enlarging the physical plant building so that new buildings can be operated especially during the winter months.



The UMass tennis courts are being demolished to make room for Tobin Hall, a psychology building to be constructed in the near future. (MDC photos by Gib Fullerton)

Officials have assured that the pond will remain in its present state except that the Fine Arts building will be place d between the pond and the School of Business Administration; meanwhile tennis courts have been torn apart to make way for Tobin Hall which will serve the psychology department. It is expected to be finished within 24 months.

Also planned is the elimination of motor vehicle traffic from N. Pleasant St., beginning near the Newman Center and ending near the education building. Right now, the road is closed for all practical purposes since there are 15 major pedestrian crossings within a mile stretch of the street, and any student crossing is taking his life in his own hands.

When is this street supposed to be closed formally? This question can only be answered by saying as soon as the state builds a connecting road north of the campus from E. Pleasant St. to N. Pleasant St.

Figures now estimate that the maximum population of UMass should be 30,000 students. This figure and the fact that it takes approximately 6 years from the planning phase to the construction phase to occupy a building suggests that things are not expected to get much better. Certainly, students occupying places like French Hall know what adverse conditions are like.

How does all this affect the student? Comparing today's student with one of 1960, one can see that the student of 1970 is paying more and more for more crowded conditions.

Last year the average increase in tuition and required fees among the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges was 16.5%. In short, students of UMass had better use their 165 sq. ft. well in order to get their money's worth.

North Pleasant Street, a hazard to pedestrians and a headache to motorists, will be closed off as soon as an alternate route is prepared.

District Court Judge Upholds Free Rein for Student Editors

U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. ruled here yesterday that a state college president can't dictate to editors of a student newspaper what shall be printed in it.

The case stemmed from efforts of Dr. James J. Hammond, president of Fitchburg State College, to censor with a faculty advisory board, the college newspaper The Cycle after it had printed four-letter words in an article by Eldredge Cleaver.

The decision is expected to apply to the conduct of all state college newspapers.

No matter how narrow the function of the advisory board was, Judge Garrity held, it constituted a direct previous restraint of expression and as such there was a heavy presumption against its constitutional validity.

Newspaper censorship in any form seems essentially incompatible with freedom of the press, the court set forth.

"The system devised by the defendant (Dr. Hammond) for passing upon the contents of The Cycle lacks even the semblance of any of the safeguards the Supreme Court has demanded," the opinion set forth.

He said the powers conferred upon the advisory board presumably could be used to achieve complete control of the contents of the newspaper. He called the establishment of the advisory board "prima facl unconstitutional exercises of state power."

In order for a college to be able to restrict speech it must show that the publication is incompatible to the school's obligation to maintain order and discipline necessary for the success of the educational process.

The court said obscenity in a campus newspaper was not the type of occurrence apt to be significantly disruptive of an orderly and disciplined educational progress.

Dr. Hammond declined to meet the costs of publication of the controversial article last September. This led editorial boards of newspapers at other state colleges to raise funds for publication.

On Dr. Hammond's refusal to pay for future editions of The Cycle unless its contents were cleared by the faculty advisory board, Judge Garrity held that the president had no duty to pass judgment on a particular activity within the newspaper just because it was supported by student fees.

Once it had been determined that a newspaper was desirable, the court ruled, such expenditure was mandatory. He added the state is not "necessarily the unrestrained master of what it creates and fosters."

The editor-in-chief of the newspaper, John Antonelli, and the editorial boards, brought suit in federal court against Dr. Hammond, maintaining the constitutional rights of a free press were abridged by Hammond's action in setting up a faculty advisory group to censor The Cycle, and that the first amendment was violated.

The case was argued before Judge Garrity by Atty. Harold C. DuLong of Cambridge, who was known to the Fitchburg students as a result of his former association with Legal Services in that city. The state was represented by Asst. Atty. Gen. Mark Coen.

Last November, there was a three-day sit-in at Salem State College on the same issue. It ended when the president, Dr. Frederick A. Meier, met student demands demanding funds be restored for the continuation of the college newspaper. An article by Cleaver was involved at Salem also.

Charlie Brown— Glue Sniffer?

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)-Good Grief! Good old Charlie Brown a glue sniffer?

It looks that way. After all, Charlie's got the bottle in his hand when the "Peanuts" gang confronts him. But then he holds up the model plane he's working on. "What a blob, getting us all excited," says Lucy in disgust. And Snoopy wonders: "Why do they call it dope?"

That scene, or others like it, will begin appearing on television screens this year as the Advertising Council - with the blessing of the White House - begins an "unsell campaign" on drugs aimed at children 7 to 12 years.

The campaign, in preliminary sketches, was unveiled Wednesday to a meeting of the National Council on Drug Abuse Education. It is the first segment of an attack on drug abuse that will be aimed also at teens through college, parents, inner city residents and the military.

The aim of the campaign is prevention and that's why it will begin with the grade schoolers. It will give them a line to use to put down those who are trying to get them on drugs. At the same time it's designed to give a pat on the back to those who resist.

The Advertising Council hopes to get $53 million in free air time and print space within a year's time, which is conside ably more a spokesman points out - than is spent to advertise the most popular soft drink and the largest selling detergent.

One scene shows a child being offered a marijuana cigarette. "I'm small," he says, "but I'm not stupid."

There is a babble of voices and then comes the announcer: "When they ask you why you don't try it, ask them "why do you think they call it dope?"" That, says Willinger, probably will be the battle cry.

The campaign will begin with transit posters - 96,000 of them - around the country on April 1. The phase aimed at the preteens - once it gets White House approval - may begin the same month.

Attention Psychology Majors

There will be a meeting for all Psychology majors Thursday, February 12 -- 8:00 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The Psychology Department presently has over 850 majors, an increase of over 40% in two years. With so large a department, student organization and student participation in the department is necessary in order that each student has a voice and feels a part of their educational experience.

An undergraduate affairs committee is already established (Sept. 1969) and consists of 5 faculty and 5 students. The function of the committee is to make recommendations to the department in all areas involving undergraduate education.

Thus far it has been instrumental in gaining student votes on the Executive Committee (1 undergraduate and 1 graduate) and in Faculty meetings (5 undergraduate and 5 graduate). The Committee has also set up six sub-committees to look into different aspects of the department in order to initiate reform. The areas are:

SUMMER INTERNSHIP: To continue a program started last summer in trying to place qualified students in summer jobs related to Psychology.

COURSE AND CURRICULUM CHANGE: To make proposals concerning new courses and curriculum changes, such as interdisciplinary courses and inter-departmental majors, plus more and different Psych courses.

STUDENT QUESTIONNAIRE: To develop a profile of the student population of the department in order to more directly find out their needs.

STUDENT ADVISING: To set up a more efficient and meaningful advising program for majors.

HONORS PROGRAM: To review the existing honors program and make suggestions as to how it could be improved.

EVALUATION: To find effective and valid means of evaluating courses and instructors for the purpose of improving the quality of the courses offered.

The main purpose of the Thursday meeting is to get student viewpoints and ideas on how to set up a student organization or channels (perhaps a psychology student Council) which would enable the psychology majors to have meaningful representation on the undergraduate affairs committee, the executive committee and at department faculty meetings.

We need the help of all psychology majors.

Please come. Make your voice heard.

Financial Woes at U. Mass

Looking at the financial mess of the University, the only thing that one can blame Dr. Lederle and Mr. Johnson for is having too little vision, and that is human, and we have all been guilty of that. The University has been so busy just surviving from year to year, that it has utterly neglected the things that matter.

The University has no goals. It has not decided whether it wants academic quality that a small institution can afford, or democratic quantity, with an enrollment open to all of the 350,000 college-age youth in Massachusetts today. Both quality and quantity are not possible, and the result has been a chaotic mixture of both.

There has been no planning other than that of a purely architectural nature. The financial implications of 1500 extra students a year has never been researched The optimum number of students for the University has not been studied, with the result of an unchecked, perhaps malignant growth. As Sasaki, Walker, and Associates, the University's architects for THE MASTER PLAN said in 1962:

"A program requirement for 10,000 students was established for the present Master Plan. President Lederle has indicated that the University will not stop at 10,000 students. Where will the University stop?"

There has been no rationale for the now projected 30,000 students at UMass by the mid-1970s, and everyone is learning that building blueprints aren't enough. Eighteen thousand students, let alone 30,000 or 350,000 students, cannot be expected to adapt to a traditional education with requirements and studying, nor can they be expected to live civilly in 22-story towers.

What has been created during the last fifteen years? Above all, there is a bureaucracy - a very human one, filled with competent people and incompetents, sensitive people and unresponsive ones, defensive people and frank people, people willing to dare so that 18,000 students might benefit, and people terrified at the prospects of looking for a new job at the age of 56 or 58.

It is possible for the University to save money - a lot of money. But it requires using emotional techniques upon a very human and fallible bureaucracy. I'm not sure that I would like to be the person responsible.

$103,000 was collected last year from the dorm vending machines. Of this amount, $50,000 went to an Athletic Scholarship Fund. The rest has been given to the dorms in $200 grants from the Cultural Enrichment Fund. I was not able to find out where the remaining $8,000 goes to. All of the money, including the $50,000 that goes to the Scholarship Fund, should be used for dorm maintenance.

If the Physical Education Requirement, PE 100, was abolished, the University would save a minimum of $150,000. This includes 34 graduate assistants receiving a standard award of $3,000 and 7 1/2 instructors receiving base pay of $6,400. Two instructors, not included in the figuring and presently teaching PE 100 would be retained for an elective PE 100. Also NOT included in the figuring is: 1. Computer time. 2. Recruiting and selection of personnel. 3. The $10 Physical Education Equipment Fee. My personal guess as to the actual figure that would be saved if the requirement was abolished is between $300,000 - $500,000.

What is the teaching load of the 19 coaches during the off-season?

The President's House can be used as a dormitory or office building. The best time to make the conversion is NOW, as Provost Tippo probably owns a house. Theoretical "rent" of the house is presently $1,200 a year.

Who are the "special guests" that deserve entertainment of $1,000, as asked for in the budget this year?

Why does the University bill itself for utilities when it owns its power plant? This is a waste of money.

How much money and time has RSO wasted in its attempts to preserve its power and limit dormitory freedom?

How much money would be saved in operating expenses if the Faculty-Senate and Student-Senate combined their operations? How much time and duplication would be saved?

There were only 4 departments in the entire University of Massachusetts that spent more money in fiscal year 1968 than the Athletic and Intramural Department. During that year, intramurals cost but $58,000 dollars, while intercollegiate sports cost $687,000. More than $1,000 went to the cheerleaders, $4,450 was spent for publicity, and $127,000 was allocated for athletic scholarships. Surely the values of this University are misplaced.

In fiscal year 1968, the excess of income over expenses for the year at the University Store was $207,908. The net profit for the Food Services Fund at the Student Union was $57,000. This money should be taken out of all these Student Union Funds and used to pay for the new Campus Center.

Due to false guesses and probably, poor advising, the bond issue for the new Campus Center will have to be floated at around 7%, with the students paying for this high interest rate with a sixty dollar increase in the Student Union Fee.

Whether or not the Student Union Governing Board ever approved either the idea of a new student union, or the architectural plans for the building, no one seems to know, but it is currently being researched.

The Conference Center at the new Campus Center is not going to be the big money-maker that the "planners" thought it would be. It will have to compete with cheaper and more established conference sites, such as the Kellogg Center at the University of New Hampshire.

Goodell Library was expanded in 1960. Because of too little long-range planning, ground was broken for the new library nine years later. This was a waste of thousands of dollars. As of now, there are no concrete plans for the future of Goodell.

The University of Massachusetts is like a little boy who has just been covered for the first time by a heavy surf. He will either cry, and never go near water again, or he will cry, but learn how to swim.

The Administration has created its private dream of increased enrollment without the approval of the citizenry of Massachusetts. It has done this by by-passing and mollifying the Legislature with Building Authorities and self-liquidating projects that bleed the student and his parents.

If the Administration wants athletic fame, let it lease Alumni Stadium to the Patriots.

If the Administration wants open enrollment for 350,000 youths, let it say so to the Legislature and ask that it be made an accomplishment of all Massachusetts citizens - not just the students.

If the Administration wants academic quality, let it restrict enrollment to those students who themselves want quality.

During a week of extensive interviewing around Whitmore, I saw a few men who cared about higher education and the student. It is my wish that these men never have their energy and visions blinded by the tide of events. It is my belief that these men will survive and that they will help us.

Think Again

An important issue is developing in the world and on campus regarding our environment. Our water is becoming dirty, our air is polluted, and our food is impure. Our planet may be uninhabitable in ten or twenty or fifty years from today. We're trying to find answers now!

But what about the pollution of the mind --- the eroding of man's humanity --- his debasement of self? He no longer loves his fellow man; he kills him. He spends billions of dollars discovering new ways of butchering, maiming, crippling, slaughtering and murdering.

He regards other members of the human race as animals --- dinks, slops, chinks, gooks --- they're easier to kill that way. They are not men with families, who are only fighting for a right to live; they are queer-faced bastards who deserve bullets in their guts.

Man does this to other men. His conception of life makes no room for "love one another, brother" His hate --- and fear --- extend beyond his reason. His brain will not accept the different or the unknown or the not understood. He is polluting himself

While man attempts to cure environmental problems or change ecological cycles to make the world safe and beautiful, he should remember that the bodies of thirty PEOPLE lying in the road at My Lai is not very pretty. A torn leg separated from a bloody body cannot be made beautiful. Man may yet make the planet inhabitable, but how can he live with himself?

The Failure

City College of New York recently adopted a program whereby students, at the conclusion of a course, would grade their professors. This radical program, if instituted at the University of Massachusetts, would undoubtedly cause considerable consternation to a number of teachers.

We now take you five years from now to interview a teacher who has just flunked his course, Government 369, Professor Inane.

Question - Professor Inane, now that you have flunked your course what are your opinions as to the new system, where students grade their teachers?

Prof. Inane - The system is preposterous and unfair, it is inconceivable to me that you could give a letter grade to a teacher who has prepared for the course and done his best.

Question - Could you tell me why you feel this way?

Prof. Inane - Certainly. In any liberal arts course it is up to the discretion of the students as to the value of the teacher. Some students like being lectured to, others don't. Some students like take-home exams, others don't. What all this will come to is that teachers will look for students who are easy graders, for fear of a failing grade from tougher students.

Question - Then you feel that teachers will begin to look for students who are easy graders over students who are interested and involved in the course material.

Prof. Inane - Precisely.

Question - You stated before that giving a letter grade to a teacher is preposterious, could you elaborate?

Prof. Inane - Gladly. A professor has so many obligations out of the classroom that it is very difficult to involve youself completely in your classes. Publishing obligations, meetings, lectures and so on, virtually preclude the total involvement toward teaching students. The uselessness of a letter grade is compounded, in that when a teacher does his best, despite their obligations, to teach the students, added pressure is put on him, in the letter grade.

Question - But Professor, if there was no letter grade, what criteria would administrators and students have as to the worth of a professor as a teacher?

Prof. Inane - I think a return to the old method of evaluating a teacher's worth, that is volume of published material and tenure, is called for.

Question - To sum up what you have said then, you feel that letter grades for professors are absurd because a letter grade does injustice and precludes a consideration of the work and involvement of a teacher to his course.

Prof. Inane - Exactly.

Question - But Professor Inane, isn't your argument the same students claim about the letter grades they got from professors?

Prof. Inane - Gee, I've never thought of it that way. I suppose you're right.

Question - One more question, please. What reasons did the students give for failing you?

Prof. Inane - They claimed that I was a boring lecturer and that I put too much emphasis on the giving out of letter grades to students.

Social Agency For Change

Admittedly, many of us have ignored the UMass Women's Liberation League. It is time, however, that we realize its value as a relevant social agency for change. There is a definite need both on and off campus for the distribution of birth control information. Sadly, enough there is a large part of the female population who are ignorant not only of the methods of birth control but who are also ignorant of some of the basic elements found in sex education programs. Since the Women's Liberation League has been founded by the Student Senate to enable them to distribute educational pamphlets on sex education, we can no longer ignore this organization. We must be cognizant of its purpose and do all that we can to help.

One step further would be to question why many of our students have had to go to Mount Holyoke and Amherst College in order to take a course in human sexuality. Perhaps it is because UMass still snickers behind the back of its hand when such matters are discussed. But there is a definite need for more of these courses and qualified teachers to direct them.

Recruiting Meets Opposition

To The Editor:

This week, as in every other week of the school year, major U.S. companies are on campus to recruit. Several companies which have recruited on campus are some of the biggest contributors to the U.S. war effort in Vietnam. G.E., which has come to recruit on campus twice already this year, not only has the second largest amount of defense contracts with the government, but came to recruit on campus while their own workers were on strike for decent wages, and then only gave them a half decent offer. General Dynamics, which will be recruiting this Friday, has the third largest amount of defense contracts with the government. This summer, when 8000 men walked out at the General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy, the management was only concerned that it might hurt their defense contracts. These are two companies of many others this year which not only have hurt their own workers, but have helped in a war hurting thousands of workers and peasants in Vietnam.

Because we are opposed to these oppressive companies, we hope to be able to effectively hurt the efforts of these companies by nationwide campus opposition to recruiting.

Therefore SDS supports the meeting sponsored by the MLK committee on militarism which will be held Thursday night to decide what action will be appropriate to take against the General Dynamics recruiters on Friday.

There Are Still Faults

To The Editor:

When we wrote our letter criticizing certain aspects of the recent MLK meeting ("We are Curious MLK") we did not think it necessary to say that we realize that both Ken Mosakowski and Carl Brown are outstanding people without whom the Council could not function even as effectively as it does. Apparently there are some who misunderstood and for whom this postscript is necessary.

The MLK is a great organization made up of some great people. Granted. But our point is that even the best organizations have faults. (The U.S. for example) We are not about to sit back and follow blindly everything the council proposes, any more than we would follow national leadership with which we seriously disagree.

We aren't going to leave the U.S. just because we don't like some of the things about it. Nor are we about to quit the King Council. The long-range goals of the council are too important to forget about that easily.

We assume that we have the same freedom to speak in criticism of the MLK as we have to speak out against our country. Those people who marched on Washington last November are still Americans. We hope that we are still members of the MLK. If for any reason our comments cause us to be dropped from the council, the point we made about personality conflicts will be again illustrated and the King Council will have lost two potential workers.

Mislead Students

To the editor:

Here's to avid Collegian readers - I hope you devote equal time to editorials as well as looking at pictures and advertisements. My gripe is with the travel ads. Their pictures are appealing and the prices low - but very misleading.

Bermuda, especially, is not all that the agents have cracked it up to be. The local government and merchants don't appreciate college students' vitality and independence and would rather cater to patronized high school tourists. I know for a fact that a cruise ship of college students was denied entrance into Bermuda - just because they were college students. Many hotels don't allow ANY guys to stay in them.

This lack of hospitable warmness may explain the relatively lower rates of Bermuda vacations. The accommodations are also usually housekeeping cottages and not hotels. The "free beer" plug is also indicative of the quality of the trip - and an agency hard-pressed for business.

So if you're looking for less-than-dormitory facilities with a condescending, watchfully mother-like eye on your vacation - by all means go to Bermuda.

Machine Age

To The Editor:

The Machine grinds on! Pour in a few million people, add some billions of dollars, and toss in some hundreds of millions of tons of material. Product: Look at Song My, read an account of what defoliation is doing, see how many millions die of malnutrition in all parts of the world. Yeah! In the good ole U.S.A. too! "Oh hell, I've heard it all before." - And the Machine grinds on.

The War Machine is a reality people! It kills, it maims, it oppresses and it is merciless in its functioning. How do you stop the Beast? You act, people! You choke it by cutting off its supply of food. It is feeding off of this campus right now. One of the War Machine's many appendages, the one named General Dynamics, is going to be gorging itself from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, February 13. We must stop the War Profiteers NOW! Stop the killing NOW! Stop the oppression NOW!

ACT. Act people! The power is yours if you take it. Power to the people NOW!

Come to an action meeting, help plan a means to disturb the Monster's meal on Thursday, February 12, at 7 p.m. in the New Hatch.

An Open Letter

Dear Fellow Justices,

This is to inform you that I am hereby resigning as Chief Justice and as a member of the General Court, effective immediately. I have given this matter a great deal of thought and I have concluded that resigning is my only course of action given the circumstances. Although there are many reasons for my taking this action - not the least of which are personal - the two main reasons are as follows: (1) the philosophy underlying the political and judicial structures of the University of Mass. seems inadequate to deal with the realities of today's campus. (2) I find it personally repugnant to be in a position of passing judgement on fellow students who have allegedly violated a University rule or regulation, especially if I feel that rule or regulation to be unrepresentative of the desires of a great many fellow students.

Let me try to elucidate. First, there may have been a time when structures such as the General Court, the Student Senate, and R.S.O. were appropriate in dealing with matters of student behavior, or lack thereof. But it seems to me that today (given obvious failures of the American political and judicial institutions we have copied) we as students at a "modern university" should not simply inimic our elders. We should not be like little children playing house: dressing-up like Mommy and Daddy, talking like Mommy and Daddy, thinking like Mommy and Daddy. Instead, we should be attempting to find more effective, more realistic, and more educative ways of dealing with the problems of our society.

It would seem that we are all agreed upon the ideal toward which we should be working - a society in which man can live and grow in whichever way he chooses, always mindful of his responsibilities to other men. We must differ in our means.

But if our goal in the larger society is a "global Village" than it seems that the goal of this micrcosm should be a Community. And we should be channelling our energies in that direction. We must use our time wisely and devote our talents to developing alternatives to what now exists; we must explore and experiment. Rather, than attempting to improve on structures and institutions that may well be totally alien to our own and future generations, we must have the courage to throw off those mechanisms and find new ones - where such may be appropriate.

We are far from the point of even working on community - building on this campus. The Administration has its "blockhouse", the Faculty Graduate and Undergraduate Senates each has its own narrowly defined sphere of influence, and the entire Judicial System is totally ineffective as either an educative structure, or as a deterrent. None of these seem condusive to the development of a sense of community here at UMass. As a matter of fact, their effect seems to be just the opposite.

The General Court this year has seen many examples of this self-destructive aspect of our present structures. And the present semester promises more of the same. We have seen conflicts between Students and Administrators, between Undergrads and Grad students, between the Student Senate and Class Officers, between the Student Senate and R.S.O., and even within the Student Senate - and many other combinations of the above.

I for one, simply refuse to remain a part of this childishness. And while the shortcomings I have mentioned may not necessitate abandoning the General Court and the Student Senate (putting nothing in their places), they do demand my discontinuing my involvement with them.

There is just one other issue I would like to deal with, that being the issue of my own conscience. As the General Court, our task has been to pass judgement on fellow students for their alleged violations of University "rules and regulations". Many times I have found these same "rules and regulations" to be inflexible and even unreasonable. Many times we have dealt with student s charged with theft from the Bookstore, the same Bookstore which daily exploits these same students. We have dealt with students charged with possession of drugs or with students who have gone off on drunken rampages. But I too have experienced the same feelings of frustration and alienation which have lead to this "aberrant" behavior. I have decided I would prefer to spend my time alleviating the causes of these feelings, rather than dealing with their consequences.

Sincerely,
EDWARD C. TIRRELL

History Comes Alive in Holy Land

(ED. NOTE: The following is the last of a series of articles written by DAILY COLLEGIAN Editor-in-Chief Don Epstein, who has just returned from a study tour in the Middle East with twelve other American college newspaper editors.)

By DON EPSTEIN
Editor-in-Chief

It was hard leaving a people and a land that you have fallen in love with. We only spent a week in Israel; it should have been at least a year.

It was inspiring to visit a nation whose people have a purpose. The spirit of the Israelis should be an inspiration to the rest of the world, and especially to America.

America today is a country which lacks a spirit, a hope. There is very little, if any, brotherhood left in these United States, be it among the older generation or the younger generation. In my four years at the university the number of students that I have met that relate to current American society is minimal. The majority are dissatisfied with our society, and in recent months many, if not most, have become frustrated with efforts to change it. It's a stagnant, frustrating feeling which has settled over many American campuses, including UMass.

In Israel, a nation fighting for its existence, a feeling of unity, of brotherhood, of purpose, exists. No matter which political party someone belongs to (and there are dozens), or whether he is from the north or the south, or from a small kibbutz or a large city, the feeling of togetherness fills the air.

I am not a religious person and thus I was not turned on by the religious significance of many of the buildings or monuments which we saw. However, the traditional, the historical value of the country is tremendous. Archeologists have turned the land into an historical gold mine.

For me, the most inspirational part of the entire journey was climbing Masada. On top of this mountain in the Judean desert the fortress built by King Herod to defend the area from the conquering Romans (70 B.C.) has been excavated and reconstructed. Today "Masada signifies the stand of the few against the many, of the weak against the strong, the last fight of those who gave their life for political, religious and spiritual freedom and chose death rather than slavery and submission. That is the universal meaning of Masada."

Masada should represent the hope of the future for all men of this world.

Jerusalem, the center of the three great religious, has a character unlike any other city which I have ever visited. Today Jerusalem is a united city. Where just three years ago barriers divided this great city in two, with a desolate no-man's-land in between, today an open free city exists with travel restricted to no one.

Whether it be at the Western Wall, the el-Aksa Mosque, or in nearby Bethlehem at the birthplace of Jesus, the region has retained its uniqueness despite the influence of Americans and Europeans.

Tel Aviv, the largest city in Israel, lacks the character of Jerusalem. It is a fast growing city beset by problems of traffic, housing, and even pollution. Tel Aviv I found too European in character. It lacks the sense of history which is so prevalent throughout the country. However, it is considered to be the social and cultural center of the nation.

Life on the kibbutz I found intriguing. Being a psychology major, I was especially interested in the practice of removing the children from their parent's home and placing them in larger houses with other children of similar age. The communal way of life practiced in the kibbutz, which has been copied by several new hippie communal settlements in the United States, lacks much of the tension, anxiety, and frustration of our twentieth century industrial society. It was a valuable experience to observe this different method of living.

Israel's climate is often compared to that of Florida. In the summer temperatures range from the 70's-80's in the north to frequently over 100 degrees in the south. In the winter temperatures average in the 60's.

Traveling to Israel is expensive; however, at special times during the year discount rates for students are available through the Travel Department of the National Union of Israeli students.

Throughout Israel there are 21 Youth Hostels where students can stay for as little as fifty cents a night. The food is relatively inexpensive but good. One hint, the hostels provide just the bare minimum essentials. They are not heated in the winter nor air-conditioned in the summer. For the outdoorsmen there are camping sites dispersed throughout the country. Finally many of the kibbutzim run relatively inexpensive guesthouses.

Any student cannot be liberally educated by remaining in the same environment, or culture, forever. It's important to see first-hand and experience the manner in which other people live. All the textbooks and lectures in the world couldn't transmit the knowledge or the emotions which I gained during my trip to Israel. It was truly the experience of a lifetime.

You only go around once in life.
So grab for all the gusto you can.
Even in the beer you drink.
Why settle for less?
When you're out of Schlitz,
you're out of beer.

Get Out Your Rubbers UMass Becomes UMudd

The Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts has now changed its name to the University of Muddachusetts. Torrential rains over the last week have turned the picturesque campus nestled in the foothills of the Berkshires to a quagmire.

For the average student, so much mud presents a problem. Just walking to classes has become a feat that would defeat a seasoned veteran of mud. As a matter of fact, anyone with the rank of sophomore and over on this campus considered himself a veteran of the mud. Every year during the spring thaw Mother Nature loosens her icy grip on the ground and the entire campus starts sliding towards the intramural fields on Rt. 116.

Studies done by an independent research firm show that the dorms on Orchard Hill, the highest point on campus, are slipping towards the edge of the hill at the rate of 19 feet a year. If the present rate of slippage continues, the dorms will become the main attraction on the center of campus within four years. Students are urged not to worry. Everything is in good hands.

Students Warned of Summer Jobs Abroad

Bulletin boards all over campus are displaying notices about opportunities for getting summer jobs abroad that would enable a student to make money, improve his language proficiency, immerse him (or her) in an exotic foreign culture, and -- the notices often hint -- offer opportunities to meet glamorous members of the opposite sex on gorgeous beaches or in ruined castles. Other notices, sometimes appearing in the Daily Collegian, describe low cost travel opportunities for going to Europe in the summer.

The literature designed to encourage students to sign up for jobs overseas should be read with great care. Some of these programs charge excessive amounts for finding jobs for students. Some make no provision for health insurance and often the student only learns this after he finds he needs it. Most summer jobs abroad offer substantially lower pay and require much longer hours than comparable jobs in the United States.

Students interested in summer jobs abroad may obtain information on a variety of opportunities (and their weaknesses) at the Office of International Programs. Information on low-cost international travel is also available at that office at 229F Whitmore.

Student I.D.Cards Bring Discounts Abroad

Any student planning to go abroad for the summer or longer should obtain an International Student Identity Card. This card enables the student to have discounts in theatre prices, museum admissions, concert halls, and some shops. Holders of the ID card are also eligible for the services offered by the national student travel bureaus, such as the intra-European student charter flights, student train and bus transportation, accommodations in student hostels, and meals in student restaurants. Any full-time student is eligible to apply for the International Student Identity Card if he is currently attending a recognized institution of higher education or applies within the calendar year of graduation.

The Office of International Programs has agreed to supply International Student Identity Cards to UMass students. They cost $1.00 each, and may be purchased at this Office, 229F Whitmore, after February 28. Students wanting to obtain an ID card must have one automat-size photograph and proof of their full-time student status.

Lewis House Discusses Coed Dorm, Mike West Addresses Residents

The question of coed dorm living was brought up in a panel discussion held in Lewis House last night. The meeting was attended by about eighty residents of the house.

The main speaker was Mike West, area co-ordinator for the Northeast area. He said that, from an administrative standpoint, he would like to see Lewis and possibly two other dorms in the Quad become coed. It is too difficult to function with 1000 women and just 400 men, according to West. More men in the area would reduce the amount of vandalism and theft and would provide a more meaningful living experience for those in the dorm, says West.

West maintains that he wants to create different life styles in his area. He would like to see three or four hundred more men come into the area.

Arguments were presented for and against coed dorms. The opportunity to integrate a living and learning environment was rated a big plus while the uncertainty of what such a change in the dorm would bring got a big minus.

Also speaking was Father Joseph Quigley of the Newman Center. He maintains that, "A coed dorm in Lewis will be a terrific boon to the entire academic community." The less restrictive atmosphere of a coed dorm would foster the growth of responsibility in each student, claims Quigley.

MLK Plans Recruitment Protests, Organizational Meeting Thursday

The MLK Committee on Militarism has been in the process of protesting the presence of War Recruiters on campus. This issue of course ties in with the Council's continuing effort to illustrate to the campus the nature of the much publicized Military - Industrial Complex.

According to MLK, the MIC is a beauracracy which has arisen because of the need for the big business and the Military to perpetuate a war economy and the U.S. government's need to protect foreign investments; Capitalism and imperialism, respectively. As any beauracracy, the MIC is responsive to only those issues that support and maintain itself, says MLK. These are usually in conflict with the issues of Self-Determination and Freedom throughout the "Free" World according to MLK. This situation necessarily forces the MIC to be oppressive by nature and repressive in dealing with those outside its domain, according to MLK.

MLK claims: the University helps perpetuate the MIC by providing the necessary manpower. General Dynamics is the 3rd largest defense contractor in the U.S., in the fiscal year 1968-1969, General Dynamics compiled a total of #229,900,000 "defense" contracts. In servicing General Dynamics, the University not only aids the MIC, but also perpetrates the oppression inherent in that system. The University allows itself to become a necessary cog in the War Machine that perpetrates such atrocities as Vietnam and such fiascos and potential atrocities as the Dominican Republic intervention. This must stop.

The MLK Committee on Militarism, along with the students for a Democratic Society, will hold a meeting to discuss what actions should be taken against General Dynamics in particular and War Recruiting in general. All interested students are invited to attend on Thursday, February 12 at 7 p.m. in the New Hatch.

Students Fake Ski Trip To Harvest Cuban Sugar

BANGOR, Maine (AP) - The vanguard of several hundred youths headed for Cuba to harvest the sugar crop for Fidel Castro passed through Bangor Wednesday night en route to a Cuban freighter at St. John, N.B.

Five busloads arrived in Bangor by 9:30 p.m. After a brief operational stop, they headed north again along U.S. 1 toward the border crossing at Calais.

The travelers, from cities across the United States, began their journey at Boston Wednesday afternoon after assembling there over the past two days.

As in Boston; they refused politely to be interviewed by newsmen and turned aside all questions about their trip. Nor would they identify themselves.

One young girl who boarded a bus outside the student union at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass. was an exception to this rule.

Without identifying herself, she told a newsman: "I'm going to join the Cuban revolution and help the farmers cut sugar cane."

The group, estimated at about 600, came to Boston on chartered buses from cities as far away as San Francisco and Seattle Tuesday, calling themselves "Ski Masters."

They said they were heading for a ski holiday in Saint John, N.B., but refused comment on their lack of ski equipment. The St. John area of New Brunswick is not noted for its winter sports facilities.

The buses were scheduled to cross the border into Canada at St. Stephen, N.B., and continue to Saint John, reportedly to meet a Cuban freighter, Louis Arcos Bergnes, for the trip to Cuba.

Fidel Castro has pledged the honor of his Cuban Communist regime on harvesting a record 10 million tons of sugar this year, and numerous American youths have gone there to help. Castro admitted in a radio and television speech Monday night that the harvest had run into trouble due to delays in installation of equipment and unfavorable weather.

A State Department spokesman in Washington said there is nothing the United States can do about Americans traveling to Cuba because the Supreme Court has ruled Americans' right to travel cannot be restricted.

Canadian immigration officials said they anticipated no difficulty in admitting the youths to Canada as long as they were truthful about the purpose of the visit.

The Rev. Dr. William E. Alberts and the Rev. William D. Hudson, co-ministers of the Old West Church where about 150 youths spent the night Tuesday, said the youths see the trip to Cuba as an effort to gain a better understanding of the world.

Alberts said some of the youths who called themselves the "Venceromos Brigade" - which translates roughly to "We Shall Overcome" - will return to the United States "within a few days and would make a statement at that time."

Both ministers said their church was not part of any organized plan to stage the trip to Cuba.

None of the youths would answer questions about the source of their funds. A report published in Detroit said Cuba was financing the trip.

The freighter was due at Saint John at Wednesday afternoon, but stormy North Atlantic seas were expected to delay its arrival and possibly cause postponement of the trip by the youths until Monday.

IRS Warns Of Errors In Tax Form

Two typographical errors appear in the income tax withholding tables contained in the recently released Supplement to Circular E,Employer's Tax Guide, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

The Supplement was issued by the IRS to reflect changes in withholding rates resulting from the Tax Reform Act of 1969.

The first misprint appears on page 10 of the Supplement in the wage bracket table for single persons paid biweekly. For the wage bracket $400 - $420 with two exemptions, the amount shown is $78.10. This figure should be $68.10.

The other misprint appears on page 20 in the wage bracket table for married persons paid monthly. For the wage bracket $2,320-$2,360 with nine exemptions, the amount shown is $369.70. This figure should be $379.70.

CORRECTION:

A story in Tuesday's MDC indicating picketing of recruitment meetings at Whitmore was incorrect. The Demonstrations were planned by the Committee on Militarism of the Martin Luther King, Jr. Social Action Council, and not by SDS as stated.

SDS had not planned to join the demonstrations until Mark Hinkle and Tony Teso of MLK approached SDS at their Tuesday night meeting.

Redmen Relish Superb Team Victory

Chase No. 1 NE Rating

By STEVE ROSS
Senior Reporter

With UConn and URI coming up the Redmen don't have a lot of time to celebrate, but Tuesday's 83-66 drubbing of Holy Cross is still an achievement worth shouting to the world. In a game which saw the Redmen excelling in all phases of the game, Jack Leaman saw the fruition of many hours of preparation.

There were as many heroes as there were U-Mass participants.

Jack Gallagher was the first man singled out by Leaman. "The job he did on Kissane was phenomenal," enthused the coach. He also called Gallagher, "a vastly underrated player." Quite possibly Gallagher will not be so underrated, and those who booed him early in the season realize the error of their ways.

Julius was Julius, and then some. Most basketball experts agree that scoring statistics are irrelevant, just ask Wilt Chamberlain's pre-1966 coaches. To be sure it wasn't his finest shooting night, but the soph phenom had his finest defensive evening with 25 rebounds and seven blocks. Five assists didn't exactly hurt.

John Bettancourt excelled on offense. After his performances against B.C. and H.C., the 5'10 rook might be tabbed as a Jesuit Killer. The UMass Iowa State series had both Buddy Venne and Jack Adams banging into picks all evening. The H.C. backcourt tandem must have felt like a pin ball by the end of the game.

Both Kenny Mathias and Dick Samuelson played fine games in the pivot for the hosts. The pair had everything that they could handle in massive Don Sasso, and they did a fine job in limiting him to six points and six caroms.

Ray Ellerbrook, after a frightful first half that brought back vivid memories of the B.C. nightmare, came up with a fine stint of ball down the stretch. All but two of his 12 points came after the half, and quieted the boo birds in the stands.

Leaman compared the Crusaders favorably with UPenn, the ninth ranked team in the country, and a 75-65 winner over UMass last month. "Talentwise they match up quite favorably," he said. Leaman also felt that if Venne and Adams were both hot the Crusaders could give anybody more than they could handle.

Last night's Boston Globe had an interesting note. It now seems quite possible that there will be no New England representative in a national tournament because of the H.C. fall. The Hub journal felt that tourney committee's would pass over N.E. teams because of the lack of a clear cut superior team.

Icemen Freeze Huskies, 3-0

STORRS, Ct - The Redmen ran into a determined UConn hockey squad last night but had enough over-all class, combined with the sparkling goal tending of Bruce Crawford to emerge 3-0 victors. The win was the team's fourth in five games and lifts UMass' Division II record to 7-4, 7-5 over-all.

UMass scored twice in the first period on goals by Dennis Grabowski and Charlie Donovan and once in the third by John Hartnett.

In fact, this was indeed a close game until late in the third period as the Huskies did their share of hitting and moved the puck around well. UConn sensing an upset came out flying at the start of the third period but UMass was gradually able to regain the momentum.

Grabowski opened the scoring at 11:23 of the first. Assist went to Mike Waldron and Al Nickerson on the play in which Grabowski managed to sweep the puck past Husky goalie John Santucci.

Donovan came back at 13:26 to make it 2-0. The play started with Brian Sullivan at the right point who passed the puck up to John Hartnett in the right corner near the face off circle. Hartnett moved over towards the slot and fed Donovan on the left who hit the target from about seven feet out.

Santucci played well in the period, coming up with 14 saves. Crawford had ten.

Hartnett iced the game at 18:56 of the third, assisted by Donovan. John's goal came on a nice le footer which found its way into the high corner of the net.

Crawford, in his first action since January 25 at Penn made several fine saves including a beautiful pad stop of a low screamer which was labled goal all the way. P.J. Flaherty, recently named ECAC Division II goalie of the week, received a well deserved rest.

Bill McMann who was a doubtful starter due to a sore ankle, played well showing no apparent side effects from the injury..

In addition to the usual three lines, coach Jack Canniff employed a fourth composed of center Bob Madore and wings Paul Riley and Fran Mulcahy. The line took a regular shift through out the contest.

BLUELINE BANTER - Santucci ended with 42 saves and obviously was the factor in keeping the game so close...Crawford had 24...Saturday, the Redmen will be entertained by AIC, fresh off its first win in five weeks over Lowell Tech...Then in succession they'll visit Amherst, Brown and Holy Cross before returning home February 27 for a 'biggie' with UNH... a tip of the fedora goes to Terrible Tom and the Red Baron...

Redmen Wrestlers Romp UConn Pinned, 27-11

UMass handily defeated the UConn huskies in wrestling yesterday 27-11 to settle the issue for second place in the New England ratings. Going into the meet UMass was ranked second, and UConn third. The huskies never had a chance to upset the visiting Redmen as they trailed 14-0 going into the 150 pound class, and 27-8 going into the heavyweight. The UMass New England record now stands 8-1, and UConn dropped to 6-3. UMass dropped their lone decision to Springfield.

Several bouts were well contested with UMass taking all the close decisions except one. Two forfeits by UConn practically guaranteed the UMass win as Nick DiDomenico at 118 pounds, and Tom Young at 167 pounds had their hands raised without breaking a sweat.

Bruce Buckbee had the only win of the afternoon in the 190 pound class, and he raised his personal record to 4-1. Buckbee decked P. Champagne in 4:42 with a chickenwing and half nelson.

After DiDomenico's forfeit Dave Reynolds got UMass rolling with a fine 9-2 decision over Steve Garber in the 126 pound class. Dave broke the bout open in the third period when the score read 2-2 with an escape, takedown, and a predicament.

In the 134 pound division Shelly Goldberg ran into J. Saia who placed third in the NEIWA tournament last year. Shelly showed the fans why he has to be given full consideration this year by handing Saia an 8-5 loss. Shelly scored two takedowns, two escapes, and two minutes riding time to dominate the UConn strongman. Shelly led by just one point midway through the third period and had to ride the entire period for the victory. This was the first bout for Goldberg down in the 134 pound class.

Steve Jones again filled in for sick Phil Davis in the 142 pound class, and for the second time came up with a fine victory. Steve trailed 1-0 into the third period, and then came alive with an escape and takedown late in the bout for a fine 3-2 decision over H. O'Neil. A 2-0 record for a substitute isn't bad at all.

Another regular on the sick list is Clay Jester who has been filling the 150 pound division. Clay was substituted for at a last minute call by Mark Thone, however, his fate was not as fortunate as Steve Jones as Thone was the victim of a pin in 4:12, by B. Muti.

Jim Godkin wrestling in the 158 pound class ran into trouble from V. Sciola and lost his third close-decision in a row. Godkin never led in the bout although it looked like he might salvage a draw late in the third period if he could have ridden Sciola to the final buzzer, however Sciola escaped to stop Godkin riding time and the final score was Sciola 5-3.

After Young had his hand raised for a forfeit, Tom Andrewes stepped on the mat to completely dominate footballer J. Passarini 7-0 in the 177 pound class. Tom never looked stronger, and scored two takedowns, an escape, and plenty of riding time. Tom threatened to pin the Huskie muscleman continuously. Andrewes is the only undefeated Redman, although he has not wrestled all of the meets.

At 190 pounds Bruce Buckbee continues to surprise all opposition with his tough style. Bruce wasted little time to get the opening takedown and then pushed P. Campagne all over the mat with a double chicken wing (snowplow) until he rolled over in the second period.

In the unlimited class George Zguris suffered one of his worse defeats to Randy Hooks a much larger opponent. Hooks scored two takedowns, an escape, a predicament, and two minutes riding time for the 9-0 win. Hooks will be a strong contender for the NEIWA title this March.

'Student Rights' Demanded

Rent Hike, Black Studies Highlight Union Meeting

By TONY SIMOLLARDES
Staff Reporter

The proposed $150 room-rent hike dispute appears to be expanding to include all phases of student power.

Geoffrey Levine, chairman of the Student Senate public relations Committee began yesterday's open meeting between three Administrators, student representatives and the student body in the Student Union Ballroom with a reading of an open letter which accused the administration of "continuously ignoring our (the students') basic right to determine our own lives."

It enumerated five points which included what it termed the "Treasurer's office arbitrarily raised on-campus room rent (done) without warning or consultation," neglecting to allow students a decisive voice in selecting the new University President and University Chancellor, an "irresponsible expansion program," and called for "far reaching" academic and administrative reform.

During the meeting, Gil Salk, of the MLK Social Action Council, read four demands which seek the organization of a University community of students, faculty, administrators, and trustees and an open administration for the school.

A black student rose in the open question period to present the administration a series of demands on the immediate preparation for and subsequent formation of a full Black Studies Department "relevant to black needs" in a white "racist" society.

Yesterday's open meeting was organized by the Student Senate public relations committee in conjunction with the MLK Social Action Council. Dean of Students William F. Field, Professor Seymour Shapiro, the Acting Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, and Associate Provost Jeremiah M. Allen, in place of the ill Provost Oswald Tippo, represented the administration.

Associate Provost Allen announced that the Provost would give $1,000 to match the $500 Student Senate appropriation for the purpose of hiring a private auditing firm to investigate administrations figures on the rent increase. He said that this was indicative of the Provost's desire to find a solution to the rent problem.

Opening remarks by administration officials centered on some of the mistakes that had been made in planning, the difficulty of administering a large university and some of the progress that has been made in the field of student rights and self-determination.

Dean Field cited the necessity of approaching the state legislature to "tell them of the squeeze" being put on students as a result of the rent increase. He said the administration would welcome student support in approaching the legislature.

In his opening remarks, Professor Shapiro pledged the administration's support for any reasonable solution that the Student Senate's private auditing firm could come up with.

"If there is any way that a reallocation of funds or new ideas which other people might generate to avoid the rent increase, then we will implement them," he said.

He also pointed out, as did Dean Field, the 50% increase in the Financial Aid to Students appropriation the University was asking from the Legislature this year.

Shapiro also mentioned the voice given students in the selection of the new President and new Chancellor.

Speaking for the students, Cynthia Olken, President of the Student Senate and a Student Trustee said, "I worked on the Board of Trustees and if any one tells you that students have a large part in the selection of a President they are feeding you a lot of bull."

She emphasized that decisions made by Trustees on the selection of a new President and a Chancellor were made on the candidates' appeal to the Trustees and not to the students.

She finished with, "Provost Tippo will be appointed (Chancellor) anyhow, regardless of what students say."

Glen Elters, in speaking on the rent increase, the presidency and the chancellorship said, "All we have to do is say we won't accept it and get together and they can't push it down our throats."

He also protested the mishandling in the Treasurer's office and asked that students demand the resignation of University Treasurer Kenneth Johnson and Secretary Robert McCartney.

Carl Brown, an editor of the Drum, a voice of the black community on campus accused the audience of being the same as the "people you're trying to change."

He said the administration "hit your pocketbook - that's all you care about" and that same machinery that's been stepping over blacks and Indians is "stepping over you whites."

He said that the administration would consult with the students and then make their own decisions. "All you've heard is appeasements and diversions."

After Gil Salk presented his demands for improving the university which he called a "declaration of community, love and respect and not a declaration of war", the meeting was thrown open for questions from the audience.

The first student presented the administration a list of black demands which called for an immediate meeting of the appropriate University committees to formulate a separate and full Black Studies Department which he said, would prepare the black student to live in "the white racist society."

Shapiro replied that a committee had spent a year formulating plans for a full Black Studies program that would be relevant to the black student and that it would be reviewed and processed through the proper channels as soon as possible.

The black student contended however, that the action was merely a bureaucratic delaying tactic and that the black students would continue to adhere to their demands.

He was followed by a number of students who aired a variety of grievances and many of whom received, in their opinion, inadequate answers from the administrators.

Geoffrey Levine announced a Student Senate sponsored ralley to be followed by a march on Whitmore and a teach-in at Mahar Auditorium next Thursday, February 19, in in protest of the rent hike and student power.

The open letter he read to the meeting will be presented officially to Dean Field at that time.

Levine's statement before he opened the meeting to questions summed up the feeling of many of the students who attended and spoke, "If the student body believes it has the right (to self-determination) then they can take the right."

Dorm Policies, Fees Revamped by Senate

By JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

In action late Wednesday night, the Student Senate established a radically new system for residence hall constituting and financial management. The act, according to its author Senator Michael Mac Millan, is based upon the philosophy that a community operates most effectively under rules that it legislates itself, and therefore believes in.

The most radical departure from the previous arrangement allows residence halls to choose whether residence hall funds will be deposited in R.S.O. An alternate manner may be elected by a majority vote of the residents. If a residence hall exercises this option, however, it cannot enforce the collection of house "donations" upon residents through the student judicial system. State law provides that all fees collected by the University (or by extension a fee enforced by the disciplinary power of the University) must be deposited in a trust fund (R.S.O.).

The other significant departure from previous legislation provides for constituting of residence halls by the area governments rather than the Senate, as is now the case. Senator MacMillan contended that residence halls can more effectively represent their views to an area government, which is both smaller and closer to them, than to the Senate.

The act maintains certain basic requirements for house constitutions, similar to those found in the previous act: officers and governing bodies shall be elected, either directly or indirectly, by the residents; provision shall be made for popular nomination of officers, initiative and referendum, and recall of officers; and the house judiciary shall be bound by the provisions of the judiciary act.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (AP) - More than 200 American youths disembarked Thursday after a stormy ocean voyage back from several months of cutting sugar cane in Cuba. Some 600 other young Americans prepared to sail to take their place. TUNIS (AP) - A student protest against U.S. aid to Israel marred the visit of Secretary of State William P. Rogers to Tunis Tuesday. More than 1000 students besieged the American cultural center, battled briefly with police and firemen and forced Rogers to cancel a scheduled visit to Tunis University.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Tuesday put off until next week showdown votes on school desegregation riders sponsored by Southern senators to a $35 billion federal aid to education bill. The pending amendment would permit retention of a freedom of choice policy for school attendance.

MLK and SDS Plan Protest

Members of the MLK COMMITTEE ON Militarism and the SDS met last night in the New Hatch to discuss tactics for today's demonstration at Whitmore. The groups are protesting the presence of General Dynamics recruiters on campus. General Dynamics ranks number three in the country in defense contracts.

Different forms of protest were proposed. Sit-ins, lie-ins, and most forms of obstruction were judged to be inadvisable from a tactical point of view. It was felt that the basic issue of the recruiters' presence would be obscured if the police were called. MLK sees the protest as a means of awakening the campus to the problem of the military-industrial complex and its role in oppression throughout the world.

What seemed to be the general consensus of the group was that non-obstructive picketing should be carried on near the placement office. Accompanying the picketers would be people blowing on party horns, banging on metal ashtrays and just creating enough noise to disrupt the interviews. It is hoped that the demonstration will be able to "disrupt business as usual." The interviews are scheduled from nine to four today in Whitmore.

Student Life Cen.- Treasurer's Office

MOTION:

Move that the Student Life Committee recognize the financial circumstances surrounding the proposed Room Rent increase for 1970-71; however, the committee also realizes that most students will not be able to afford such a large increase. Further, the Committee condemns the Treasurer's Office for its lack of initiative in searching for viable alternatives to the rent increase, and requests that the Treasurer's Office make available to the Committee all support figures for the January 26, 1970 Proposal.

600 Americans Sail to Cuba To Aid in Nation's Harvest

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (AP) - More than 200 American youths disembarked Thursday after a stormy ocean voyage back from several months of cutting sugar cane in Cuba. Some 600 other young Americans prepared to sail to take their place.

The Cuban freighter Luis Arces Bergnes arrived at the New Brunswick port after riding out a heavy sleet and snowstorm. The bitter weather left the youths, lightly clad for work in the tropical fields, shivering.

The larger group which arrived by bus to go to Cuba wore heavy winter clothing, but they had to take shelter in a potato shed for several hours until it was time to embark on the small vessel. All were aboard by dusk.

Fidel Castro, Cuban prime minister, has pledged the honor of his country to harvest a record 10 million tons of sugar this year. But in a television speech last Monday, he admitted the harvest had run into trouble because of equipment delays and unfavorable weather.

Castro worked in the fields with the American group one day, said Gerry Simon, 20, of New Orleans.

Returning youths told those waiting to leave that they worked seven hours a day and spent most of their free time reading or talking.

Some of the youths who returned from Cuba boarded chartered buses, including some of those which had brought their replacements to Canada, for the United States Thursday.

The exact route of the buses was not known, except that they planned to enter the United States at the St. Stephen-Calais Maine, port of entry.

Other returnees told newsmen they planned to fly from Saint John to the United States.

"We came back understanding better than ever the necessity for total destruction of United States imperialism," said Patricia Bouchard, 28, of Chicago, a spokesman for the returning group.

The U.S. press "has told vicious lies that we have received military training in Cuba," she said. "This is not the first time a group of Americans have gone to work to show . . . solidarity with the Cubans," she added.

Miss Bouchard also said groups from several other countries were in Cuba to help with the sugar harvest and "we had a very friendly meeting with the people of the North Vietnamese delegation."

The departing youths started to board the freighter Thursday. It was scheduled to sail Friday morning.

Bruce Jacobs of New York, a spokesman for the embarking group, said they were showing "an act of solidarity with the Cuban revolution."

He also said cooperation from local police and customs and immigration officials had been "absolutely tremendous." The youths had told newsmen in Boston, where they gathered from all parts of the country for a chartered bus trip to Saint John, that they were going on a ski holiday.

But once in Canada, they told immigration officials they were going to Cuba to help with the sugar harvest. They said they expected to be gone two months.

USSR Hikes Aide to Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union has sharply increased its military aid to Cuba but U.S. officials say the nature of the assistance does not pose a threat to American security.

The aid has ranged from modernized versions of surface to air missiles down to routine army gear, U.S. officials say, but they see no evidence of a reappearance of offensive missiles on the Communist island.

Sources who follow Soviet activities say Moscow also has refrained from sending combat troops to Cuba, limiting its manpower to 2,000 to 3,000 technicians and advisors.

Nonetheless, the evidence is that the Russians have taken considerable interest in assuring that their lone Western Hemisphere ally remains militarily strong.

U.S. officials trace increased Soviet attention to Cuba's military wants to Fidel Castro's support for the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia in August 1968. For an extended period preceding the invasion, Soviet Cuban relations had been marked by a period of decided coolness.

By September 1969, Cuba, with Soviet help, had firepower "equal to that of the Soviet Union," according to a Castro official who was quoted in Granma, Cuba's official Communist Party organ.

In early December, the Soviet armed forces newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said Moscow was helping Cuba equip itself with "the newest weapons and military equipment."

Salk Suggests Four Points To Make UM a 'Community'

The four declarations presented at Thursday's open meeting by Gil Salk will be presented in the near future to the entire university community. They are included here for consideration by all of the members of the community.

1. We declare that all members of the university community be recognized as fully participating members of this community.
2. We declare that the administration, representing the needs of the community, shall draft and publish a complete and binding policy statement, subject to the approval and annual review of the entire community by majority vote, which shall be a determining factor in all administrative decisions.
3. We declare that all administrative decisions be made and announced open meetings with published minutes made available to the entire community.
4. We declare that all administrative decisions be made subject to binding review by any affected segment of the university community, and that a binding referendum on any issue may be called by petition of 10% of the members of the community.

The university community, students say, is made up of all participants in the life of the university: students, staff, faculty, and administrators. Included in the category of administrators are department heads, deans, persons of decision-making rank in Whitmore, and Trustees.

The four declarations will be presented to all segments of the university community as soon as possible. All members of the community wishing to work for the advancement of these declarations have been urged to attend a working meeting in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union today at 3:15 p.m.

Also planned for the meeting are discussions of ways to ensure that room rent and Student Union fee increases, and recruiting and selection procedures for the positions of President and Chancellor will not be implemented without full and meaningful participation of the entire university community.

Hampshire College Grows From ....

For the past few years the phrase Five College Cooperation has confused quite a few people, since UMass, Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke add up to only four colleges.

The fifth institution, Hampshire College, will finally make its official face known next year when it admits its first class of 250 students.

A private liberal arts school, Hampshire college is located in South Amherst, "just down the road from Amherst College."

President Franklin Patterson has acknowledged that the school would probably not have developed as quickly as it has if it were not for the help lent by the other four colleges.

Hampshire will participate in several Five College academic departments, similar to the already existing Five College Astronomy Program. Also, the school will be an active participant in various Five College institutions, such as WFCR and the Five College run Hampshire Inter-Library Coordination, College Administrators work around the clock in the two existing Hampshire College Buildings, as construction goes on. Buildings scheduled to open with the College next fall include a library, a dormatory two academic structures and an administration center.

Smith to Present Evening Of Dance Saturday Night

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. - "An Evening of Dance," including a piece on environmental destruction will be offered at Smith College Saturday evening Feb. 14.

To be held at 8 p.m. in Smith's Theatre 14 of the Center for the Performing Arts, the program includes student choreographed pieces performed to the accompaniment of electronic music and by works of Johann Sebastian Bach. The event is free and open to the public.

Included on the program is "Suite for Ten", choreographed by Miss Gretchen de Schot, a Smith graduate student. "Suite for Ten" is seen by its creator as "an experiment in the use of multiple rythms and multiple meters occurring simultaneously - some to be heard and some to be seen."

A piece choreographed by Smith junior Martha Murphy will serve as an expression of the current student and national interest in environmental protection. Titled "Rebirth," it develops Dostoevski's words: "My brother asked the birds to forgive him, that sounds senseless, but it was right for all is like an ocean, all is flowing and blending; a touch in one place sets up movement at the other end of the earth."

Tickets for the event are still available at the Center box office, open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., telephone extension 840. The tickets should be picked up at the box office at least 45 minutes before the performance.

'EVENING OF DANCE' - A student of dance at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., readies for an "Evening of Dance" performance to be offered at 8 p.m. Saturday (Feb. 14) in the college's new Theatre 14. Among the student-choreographed works is a commentary piece destruction of the environment. The event is free and open to the public.

Larry Bogart's Speech

Nuclear Power Leads To Nuclear Pollution

Larry Bogart, noted ecologist spoke last night on "Environment Hazards of Nuclear Pollution", emphasizing the dangers of boiler type reactors such as the one being built at Vernon, Vermont. Dr. David Inglis of the UMass physics department served as moderator.

In introducing Mr. Bogart, Dr. Inglis compared him to one of the great crusaders of environment, Rachel Carson.

Mr. Bogart said that one purpose of his speaking here was to help "transfer student interest to the community." He said that some scientists feel that it is already too late to save ourselves.

According to his speech, the broad context of radio-activity can be understood as the destruction of the earth by peaceful means, as nuclear war in the immediate future does not seem likely.

Mr. Bogart noted that figures from the Atomic Energy Commission can often be misleading and that some are presently being proved wrong. Mainly, the amount of radiation escaping into the air that is safe. As an example, he showed the case of the nuclear reactor that was built at Columbia University. This reactor after being in operation for a few years, would cause the following: 14 new cancer cases, 10 cell mutation cases, and four miscarriages. This would take place within a few blocks of the area which has a population of over 100,000.

In case of an accident, ever though the possibility is remote, the plant would release the radio-activity equivalent of 160 Hiroshima Bombs, after the plant was in operation for a year at Vernon.

There are four basic defects of the type of plant being built at Vernon. 1. There is no actual way to safely contain the radio-active material built up. 2 The plant would discharge "allowable" amounts of radio active material. 3. The plant utilizes only 31% of the heat it produces. 4. It would be wasting the extremely scarce natural resource - Uranium 235.

If the power plant is operated and it is already a third of the way done, it would raise the temperature of the Connecticut River This would lead to the eventual ruination of all marine life. That would also ruin the Watershed's plan for creating public recreation facilities along the river.

The costs of nuclear power plants is in the area of $24 billion. This would obviously lead to drastic increases in the prices of electric power, according to Mr. Bogart. This would defeat

The costs of nuclear power plants is in the area of $24 billion. This would obviously lead to drastic increases in the prices of electric power, according to Mr. Bogart. This would defeat the purpose of trying to supply electricity cheaply.

Mr. Bogart went on to talk about alternate methods of really cleaning up electrical power. This would involve adding anti-pollution devices to already existing plants. Even if this cost the same as Nuclear plants, Mr. Bogart pointed out that he would rather pay increased rates knowing that the environment was not being ruined.

Mass Insurance Companies Ask End of Rate Freeze

BOSTON (AP) - The major writers of auto insurance in Massachusetts asked the state Supreme Court Thursday to out law the current legislative rate freeze on compulsory coverage.

The companies contend the 1970 rates are confiscatory and violate the federal and state constitutions.

They claimed the rates will be $17.9 million short of meeting the costs of this year's accident claims.

The insurers asserted that unless the compulsory rates for private passenger cars are increased by more than 20 per cent, losses will average more than $9.50 for each car insured.

The legislature in 1968 ordered state Insurance Commissioner C. Eugene Farnam not to exceed 1967 levels in setting compulsory rates for 1969 and 1970.

Rates for all forms of auto liability insurance in Massachusetts have not risen since 1967, the industry asserted.

The industry earlier appealed to the high court from Farnam's action in continuing to 1970 the 1969 rates for property damage liability and medical payments coverage.

The companies had requested increases of 26.5 per cent.

The insurers also have challenged the commissioner's rejection of an overall increase of 26.9 per cent in comprehensive fire, theft and collision rates, contending he had no authority to disapprove the rates without a hearing.

The companies asked the high court to give the commissioner "advice as to what level of rates" he must fix "in order that the classifications of risks and premium charges be non - confiscatory and otherwise in accordance with law."

Capacity Crowd Hears Kole Explore the Supernatural

An overflow crowd filled Bowker Auditorium Wednesday night to hear illusionist Andre Kole speak on "Unmasking the Unknown." Sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ, he presented a startling display of extra-sensory perception, communication with the dead, and prediction of the future.

Claiming ESP, Kole convinced a believing audience that he could indeed see colors and read with his fingertips while blinfolded. He later admitted to the audience that with the proper atmosphere of expectation, any audience could be deceived as his was.

Kole demonstrated communication with the dead through seances, but stated that he did not believe it possible, though the scene appeared convincing.

In discussing prediction of the future, Kole pointed to the predictions of Christ and fulfillment of his predictions. An unexpected disturbance was created when an Arab sympathizer in the audience became enraged over Kole's discussion of the nation of Israel. After several interruptions of the program, he left angrily.

Course on Sexuality Offered at Smith

A course on "Topics in Human Sexuality" will be offered at Smith College again this semester, beginning Thursday, February 26 at 8 p.m.

The course is non-credit, and is open to any interested students and non-students in the area who are committed to increasing their knowledge about human sexuality. A lecture-seminar format has been devised which incorporates the informational aspects of a lecture with the interpersonal aspects of a small group.

A $2.00 fee is charged for the course, to pay for the lecturers. The course is student-funded and student-run. Drayton Grant is the chairman this year.

Danny Cash, in 614 Webster (546-7190), is the University liason, and is in charge of registration here. A table will be set up Friday, February 13 in the Student Union lobby from 9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. to handle registration. Students should also pay their fee at this time.

The first lecture, "Anatomy and Physiology", will be Thursday, February 26 at 8:00 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall. The lectures are scheduled as follows: "Contraception", March 4; "Abortion" March 10; "Pregnancy and Birth" April 2; "Human Sexuality and Psycho - sexual Development", April 9; "Female-Male Relationships", April 16; "Love and Loving", April 23, and an open lecture on some sociological aspects of human sexuality which will terminate the course on May 7.

Lecturers include Ronald Mazur, an ex-clergyman presently involved with sex education; Dr. Jean Anderson, obstetrician and gynecologist in Amherst; and Prof. Leonard Bickman of the Smith psychology department.

Most lectures will be held on Thursday nights at 8:00 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall, where the five college bus stops. No transportation is specifically provided, but the five-college bus leaves the Waiting Station at 7:25 p.m., and arrives at JM Greene at 7:55.

The seminars meet in house living rooms or students' rooms right after the lectures, and may run on indefinitely. Participants are assigned to seminars according to the type of leadership (or non-leadership) requested, and the type of approach (personal or informational) requested. Some seminars are formed to discuss a specific topic, such as "Sex and the Media". Any student willing to lead a special seminar in an area in which he or she is reasonably well-informed should contact Kate Elliot, 584-9031. Seminar leaders with some background in group dynamics are still needed for the 'undirected' seminars.

In general, students are requested not to sign up for the course unless they are prepared to attend the whole series, which has been planned as a cohesive entity. This commitment applies especially to the seminars, particularly vulnerable to fickle participants, and proportionately responsive to individual efforts to achieve a meaningful experience.

It is possible to attend the lectures individually, at a cost of $.50 each, once those who are registered are admitted.

Because of the Smith student's preference for a co-educational course, men students from the University are especially solicited. However, no one will be turned away on grounds of sex.

Me. Asks Nixon For Flood Aid

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis said Thursday he is asking President Nixon to declare Maine a "major disaster area" because of increased damage from midwinter floods.

The chief executive's announcement came as the state Civil Defense director voiced hope that the worst was over.

"This cooling weather is encouraging," Leslie H. Stanley said. He said the Kennebec River, where an ice jam had caused flooding of basements in Gardiner, had dropped from 19 to 18 feet at Augusta.

The governor said his request to the President was under a federal law permitting designation as a major disaster area when ever flood damage goes over $750,000 for any 12 month period.

Curtis said the loss in previous winter flooding was $726,000 and there's "no doubt" the total would go over $750,000. He said he'd know definitely Friday when Stanley completes a preliminary survey.

The governor said that if President Nixon accedes to the request, Maine could be reimbursed for up to half of the cost of repairing damage to public facilities. This could mean $500,000 to Maine, Curtis said.

Delta Chi Adds Auxiliary

Dog Breath and the Silver Surfers will be appearing with Hampton Wick in a Meredith Hunter Memorial Concert to be held Saturday night, Feb. 14, in the Student Union Ballroom starting at 8:00 p.m. Meredith Hunter was stabbed and killed by Hell's Angels at the Altamont Festival in California in December. The MLK Council is sponsoring the benefit and all proceeds will go to Hunter's family. Tickets are $.75 each and will be available at the door.

The newest addition to the Greek System at UMass occurred this month when Delta Chi pledged sixteen women into their female auxiliary. The name of the organization is Chi Delphia Sisters of the White Carnation.

The purpose of Chi Delphia is to assist in all the undertakings of Delta Chi, and to represent the fraternity on the campus. The Sisters also add a feeling of a true family - men and women. Brothers and Sisters, working together to accomplish the combined goals of Delta Chi and Chi Delphia.

By resolution at the 1966 Delta Chi National Convention, Chi Delphia Sisters of the White Carnation was authorized to operate as an auxiliary of individual chapters and colonies. It is established by local option; but however, it may be considered truly a national auxiliary ofDelta Chi.

The Sisters of the White Carnation assist i n the many projects of Delta Chi. Along with the service and social aspects, Chi Delphias add a feminine touch to all rush functions by serving refreshments and talking to rushees, explaining the chapter, its goals, and its relationship to the University and community. A pretty smile is sometimes more effective than a friendly handshake. The Sisters will also serve as "Big Sisters" to the pledges along with the "Big Brothers", and can help a shy or withdrawn pledge with his orientation to fraternity life, dating, Formals, etiquette and girls in general. In addition, the women will also participate in cultural exchanges and Co-ed athletics. Chi Delphias can partake in all the functions of the fraternity except house-meetings, initiations and rituals.

The only qualification for membership in Chi Delphia is for a woman to express an interest and desire in working with a fraternal organization. Membership is limited in that it cannot exceed the number of actives in Delta Chi. This organization is totally voluntary and therefore has no secrets. Membership is not limited to non-sorority women.

There is a 3 to 6 week pledge period so that the women have the opportunity to get to know the other girls and the brothers. In addition, they learn about Delta Chi national and local history. They also have to plan and execute a social, service, or cultural event for the Brothers and Sisters.

Chi Delphia Sisters of the White Carnation is not meant to be a full-fledged sorority. Chi Delphia meetings are formal but the informal activities of the organization are very conducive to true family living. The Brothers of Delta Chi have opened their house to the Sisters and has made them feel free to partake all the activities of the house.

A steering committee, composed of representative Heads of Residence from each of the six living areas o n campus, has proposed an open meeting to be held in the Blue Room of the Worcester Dining Commons on Monday, February 16, at 8:00 p.m.

Among the specific topics to be discussed are the tentative increases in student room rents, the role of the Heads of Residence and Residence Directors with regard to this issue and the proposal to delete the Head of Residence position which was mentioned at the Student Senate meeting on Wednesday.

In the committee meeting Thursday at Mills House, questions were raised as to whether the Head of Residence should take an active or informatory and motivating stance in the debate over rent increases

Room Rents A Plot?

You know, actually it must be a plot. Yeah, that must be it...there are already too many students at the University, so why not get rid of some this way? But then, why are they building new dorms? I can't seem to straighten it out.

I guess it started when Governor Sargent cut the budget. They had to cut somewhere! So, when it comes time to pay the bill this semester, there's no money coming from the state. Heilllipp!

Then President "Nichts" wanted loans to be readily available for students. So he accomplished this be allowing atrocious rates of interest. Well. . .I guess I'd better forget the loan this year.

At least I know when I go back, I'll still have my good ol' dining commons job -- that $1.50 an hour will really have to go far this semester. Marvelous system, work and study! "Oh, great, I'm part of an economy drive." Who wants to work for a dollar-fifty anyhow!

Guess I'll have to get three jobs this summer instead of two- and I wanted to go to summer school. "By the way, there's going to be a big hike in room rent!" That about does it--there's no way I'm coming back. And who are they building those dorms for?

ART BUCHWALD

And The Party Lost It's Head

WASHINGTON - A lady from Grosse Pointe, Mich., wants to know why I always make fun of the Republicans, but never the Democrats. The answer is so obvious that I'm surprised anyone would raise the question.

The reason I don't make fun of the Democrats is that, for all practical purposes, they don't exist.

I discovered this sometime back when I ran into a Democratic congressman sleeping on a park bench.

"Take me to your leader," I said.

"You have to be kidding," he replied.

"But surely someone is in charge of your party," I protested.

He shook his head sadly. "We haven't had a leader in a year. Ever since Chicago, it's every man for himself. Say, mister, could you let me have a quarter to cover my campaign expenses?"

"Don't tell me there is no money in the Democratic Party treasury?"

"The last time I went down to Democratic National Headquarters I was rolled twice."

"How do you explain it?"

"I don't know," he said, wiping his grizzled chin with an old Humphrey poster. "Would you believe that at one time you could look out from this bench and see nothing but Democrats? We were the toast of Washington. Lobbyists vied for our favors; special-interest groups flew us anywhere we wanted to go; some of us ate at the White House three times a week. It was a golden age for the party. Look, I still have a ballpoint pen President Johnson gave me. You wouldn't like to buy it, would you?"

I shook my head. "I already bought two from some Democratic congressmen who were selling them on the Capitol steps."

"I was afraid of that," he said. "How about an almost brand-new pair of leather boots made in Texas?"

"No, thank you. Now, about a leader for the party. Certainly you've discussed this among yourselves."

"Oh, we have," he said. "We agreed that what the party needs in Congress for leadership is youth, imagination and new ideas."

"Wonderful."

"That's why we decided to stick with House Speaker McCormack."

"What about the Democratic National Committee?"

"As far as the chairman of the party is concerned, we want someone who can speak for the Democrats, raise money for them and get the various factions of the party to agree on the great issues of the day."

"You can't quarrel with that."

"No, and we can't get anybody to take the job either."

"What about the man to oppose President Nixon in 1972?"

"The party is overflowing with candidates. There's Hubert Humphrey, and uh, uh, uh...How about buying a coonskin cap?"

"Sir, what will be the major issues of the 1970 congressional campaign?"

"Inflation, crime in the streets and our defense posture around the world."

"But those are the issues the Republicans used to defeat the Democrats."

"Why have a two-party system if you can't use the same issues to defeat each other? Hey, how about an autographed photo of Mayor Daley, the man who sent us down the road to oblivion?"

"I'm sorry. I'd like to help, but I never contribute to a political party."

"Here," he said, going over to a knapsack and taking out a sheaf of papers. "It's President Johnson's version of how he decided to stop the bombing in Vietnam. Surely, one day, this will become a collector's item."

Room Problems Real, Protests Should Be Peacefull

To the Editor:

Fact: Proposed room rent is much too high for the living conditions in the rooms.

Fact: Something must be done about it.

But what? The idea of a study committee, proposed by Senator Sharon Auger is something that is needed--this committee should however, be a group composed not only of students, but also of faculty and administrators The resources of the University, as John Tierney stated at the Open Senate Meeting on Wednesday night should be utilized.

The students must get together and meet with officials of the administration (including Peerless leader Johnson) and propose alternatives to the rent hike.

The question of efficiency in the Treasurer's office will be answered as a result of Sharon O'Briens proposal.

Thus, two problems can be resolved -- Are the Treasurer's figures correct?..If they are, the study group can figure out where else the money can possibly come from.

If we march--let's march peacefully--

Before the campus erupts, let's attempt to find answers through these proposals.

Students Can Run for Town Housing Authority

To the Editor:

Members of the University community who are eligible to vote will have an opportunity on February 17 to influence considerably the future of housing in Amherst, since two of the five seats on the Amherst Housing Authority are open.

Raymond A. Werbe brings outstanding qualifications for commission membership. He was active in forming and became the first Chairman of the Hampshire County Citizens' Committee for Housing and Community Development. This committee has initiated important studies, held a Housing Institute (attended by many students), and initiated action to improve many aspects of housing in the County. He is a consultant to the University for interior treatment of the new Library and is active in the Southwest Area in attempts to introduce more humane and satisfying living conditions.

Mrs. Emily Simpson has been very active in following the activities of the Amherst Housing Authority during the past two years. Active in the League of Women Voters, she has been a vigorous supporter of low-rent housing and has spoken out for the need of special housing accommodations for various limited income groups in our community.

Both of these candidates are committed to total environmental planning and are action-oriented. Both feel that the time is already late for making a thorough study of the future housing needs in Amherst and vicinity and for taking advantage of every resource private, municipal, state, and federal, to plan and act for improved housing for residents of this area.

I urge all those who are eligible to vote to make their feelings known on this vital issue next Tuesday at the polls.

Capital Punisment for Thumbing?

Dear Editors:

In recent issues of THE BOSTON GLOBE, there have been several articles about the highway patrol arresting dozens of people, students for the most part, for no greater crime than hitchhiking on inter-state highways and turnpikes. As a male student, I would like to say that I feel this law is extremely unfair for the following reasons:

1. The law strikes only one particular segment of society, the student, and the middle-class to poor students at that. I, for one, cannot afford a 10 dollar bus fare home and back very often. So until now I have hitch-hiked on I-91 (I live in Vermont). But now I don't dare for fear of a $50 fine and a record. I can't afford either. Nor can most students.

2. It appears to me that with all the real crimes (such as rape, murder, theft, etc.) taking place in the state and nation, the state troopers would have better things to do than arrest peaceful college students who are thumbing home.

3. I've been told that hitchhikers and cars stopped to give them rides have caused accidents. There is no need for this to happen. In fact, I find it hard to believe. All the interstates that I've been on have practically another lane on the right, plenty of room to stop and pick up a hitchhiker. The only doors that need to be opened are on the passenger side, anyway, again away from traffic. Finally, all cars should be ready for anything at any time. At least that was the way I was taught to drive! So actually it is safer to hitch-hike on a superhighway than on a regular thoroughfare. Therefore this argument against hitch-hikers on interstates is futile since any accidents would be the fault of careless drivers, not the hikers!

4. There is the argument that the law only protects hitchhikers from being robbed or molested. Why doesn't the legislature let us fend for ourselves? There is risk involved in everything we do. There have been no laws passed prohibiting walking in the back streets of Boston after dark, although it is risky. Any hitchhiker is aware of the risks of thumbing. Why aren't we allowed to walk where we please? The last I heard this country still belonged to its citizens!

5. The state gives money in the form of loans and scholarships to students. Now it passes, or enforces a law which will cost students a lot of money. What self-contradiction!

From my point of view, it is high time for these arrests to be stopped and for this unnecessary and unjust law to be repealed. It would be a shame if students who can't afford it had to pay anywhere from $5 to 20 to spend Thanksgiving and Christmas at home with their families, wouldn't it? I hope this letter will be seen by someone who can do something about this rotten set-up. And then let something be done . . . FAST.

The University Needs Help

"He Has Just The Stature We Need For The Kind Of Bench We Want"

The university, like any institution, has no intrinsic value of its own. Institutions are created to ease certain processes, to perform specific functions, or to generalize (regulate and/or catagorize) actions. If the process becomes unclear, or if the function is unnecessary, or if actions change, the institution dies naturally enough. If, however, the creation of a particular institution was questionable from the outset due to fallacious premises, then it dies a violent death: because such creations are founded on self-righteousness alone, then the self-righteous flock to it, maintain it, and strengthen it. The university is such an institution, with the additional problem of senility. The university was an ancient mistake in our conception, it is now obsolete, and now we need be done with it.

Looking back at that unfortunate accident we hailed as the universe-city, we find that indeed education was a worthy concept. However, what education meant then and what it needs to mean now suggests that we are talking about two completely different concepts. You cannot teach, you can only learn (experience). If you are an educator, then you are one who assists others to learn WITH you by sharing experiences with others while they share their experiences with you. That is education: the shared experience. This is true enough for any discipline: the universe does not departmentalize itself, it is a vast interchange, a flow: the universe is "inter-disciplinary." Disciplines and departments minimize the shared experience, indeed such a structure does not allow for the shared experience. That structure exists only for the uneducated (those without experiences and/or those who have never shared their associative experience of living), the insensitive, the unaware, and the lazy.

The old creature took itself too seriously. It never amounted to more than a dragon with decayed scales, a conglomerate of ancient warts: it was pathetic, but never tragic.

FROM: CREATIVITY AND CONFORMITY, by Dr. Clark Moustakes, Merrill-Palmer Institute of Human Relations

"An individual learns significantly only those things which are involved in the maintenance or enhancement of self. No one can force the individual to learn. He will learn only if he wills to. Any other type of learning is temporary and inconsistent with the self and will disappear as soon as threat is removed."

"Under threat, the self is less open to spontaneous expression . . . it is more passive and controlled."

The old university was a threat.

We tend to be plagued with fadish questions, which mock the real intent of discovery. The questions: "Who and I," and "What is this around me!" These are frivilous questions, as they lead nowhere or everywhere. The more important question is: "What is being done, what needs to be done?" Ask of the old university what it was. The answers were: a community of scholars, a place of learning, a storehouse of information, the seat of wisdom. Those manswers may or may not be true, it is irrelevent. Now ask the university about what it did: it sanctified a bankrupt morality, it glorified trivia, to prolonged juvenile dependencies, it fostered racism, war, poverty, and pollution, it dehumanized and mesmerized, and it failed to keep pace with the twentieth century and our human needs. Ask the searching question of doing and becoming; existence is found in becoming and action, not in idle isolation. With this criteria, the university was only a nightmare.

Amherst Seventy Players To Present Trio of Plays

A unique evening of theater is in store for residents of the Amherst area. For six nights in February, the Amherst College Department of Dramatic Arts will present the Amherst Seventy Players production of "Morning, Noon, and Night", a trio of one-act plays.

Three exuberant, imaginative, and irreverent award-winning young playwrights created a furor in New York last year when they first unveiled these deliberate shockers on Broadway. Israel Horovitz (author of "The Indian Wants the Bronx") leads things off with a wild MORNING in Harlem, in which a black family gets an unusual and frightening taste of white punctuated by the pulsations of rock music. Terrence McNally next invites the audience to a bizarre rendezvous at NOON in a Greenwich Village loft, with a coast of diverse sexual preferences stripping for the occasion. Finally, Leonard Melfi leads every one into the NIGHT as mourners at an unworldly funeral.

The entire production is produced and directed by Drew Kalter and performed by a versatile student cast. Performances will be given from Monday, February 9th, through Saturday, February 14th, in Stone Theater (the basement of Stone Dormitory) at Amherst College. There is no admission charge, and tickets may be secured by sending a stamped self-addressed envelop e to the following address: The Amherst Seventy Players, Box 1047, Amherst College Station; Amherst, Massachusetts 01002. No phone reservations will be accepted. Also, it is recommended that tickets be ordered well in advance of the production dates. All performances will begin at 8:30 p.m., and tickets will be honored only until 8:15. After that time, the remaining seats will be available on a first-come, first-serve basis. "Morning, Noon, and Night" is not suggested to anyone under sixteen years of age.

March Ceiling for The Militarv Draft Not Like to Go Higher Than Ninety

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The military draft will probably call lottery numbers no higher than 90 in March, an informed source said Thursday.

The March ceiling, however, is not official and no orders have gone out yet, he added.

In January, draft boards were instructed to summon for military service only men with lottery numbers up to 30; in February the ceiling number was 60.

A Pentagon manpower expert said Selective Service was able to deliver the January call of 12,500 men "plus or minus a few hundred" within the No. 30 limit.

It is not yet known whether the February call of 19,000 could be met within the No. 60 limit. Another call for 19,000 has been issued for March.

In switching over from the "oldest first" to the new lottery method of selecting men to serve, draft boards reportedly have been running into a bottle neck in physical examinations. Examining centers, which had already examined a back log of oldest draft registrants, now must start practically from scratch to examine lowest number registrants instead. Some monthly calls may not be completely filled before this problem is overcome.

In the lottery drawing last Dec. 1, each man aged 19 to 26 was assigned a number from one to 366, and local boards were directed to draft eligible men starting with the lowest available number.

But many men-especially students due to graduate in June - will not enter the draft pool until later in the year; their temporary absence from the draft pool could cause boards to call unnecessarily high numbers, if the boards are forced to meet strict quotas. To avoid that, officials at the White House, Selective Service and the Pentagon agreed in January to set number ceilings that would guide draft boards up the lottery list at a more uniform pace.

U.S. Wastes Billions In Federal Programs

WASHINGTON (AP) - A congressional subcommittee charged Thursday that government failure to analyze the cost and value of federal programs is resulting in billions of dollars of waste each year.

The report by the economy in government subcommittee was especially critical of the Bureau of the Budget for not providing Congress with background on bureau decisions.

But it also said Congress has neither the ability to interpret and evaluate executive branch studies nor the tools to under take its own policy analyses.

Sen. William Proxmire, D.-Wis., the subcommittee chairman, said in a statement that billions of dollars could be saved on non-defense programs by insisting that they produce economic or human results. He cited an intensive study of vocational education programs which he said showed a $6 return to the economy for each $1 spent.

"An archaic federal budgetary process characterized by executive secrecy and congressional logrolling, and buttressed by organized and subsidized interest groups, is bilking the tax payer of billions of hard earned dollars," Proxmire said.

Subcommittee recommendations included:

–Congress should establish an Office of Economic Evaluation and Analysis to assist members of Congress in ferreting out wasteful and inefficient programs.

–The Budget Bureau should revise the federal budget to show the economic impact of all federal programs, including five year cost projections.

–Congress should be supplied with executive branch studies, analyses and evaluations of programs that relate to appropriations decisions, rather than just the decisions.

Election Year Pressures to Prompt Postal Reforms, According to Blunt

WASHINGTON (AP) - Postmaster General Winton M. Blount says election year political pressures will spur Congress to pass a meaningful postal reform bill in 1970, but concedes there's little chance of winning approval for a proposed rate increase.

"I think the members of Congress still feel postal reform is a popular issue," Blount said in an interview. "They don't want to go into November with this still being an issue."

Blount said the election year could have the opposite effect on the administration's proposal to boost postal rates because of traditional public reluctance to pay more for stamps.

Both bills are major administration measurers. The reform proposal, which would convert the postal system into a government owned corporation, was one of the first submitted by President Nixon last year. And the rate increase is an important part of his effort to achieve a budget surplus in fiscal 1971.

Blount said the department has "eased up a bit after pushing pretty hard all last year" to get approval of the postal overhaul. "But we're not letting up in our determination," he added.

Contending the administration is flexible on how the reform bill should be written, Blount said he would favor any measure that allows the Post Office to control its own investment policy, costs and prices and provides for continuity of the system's management.

Blount claimed postal reform has attracted support from 80 per cent of the congressional Republicans and backing from only 30 per cent of the Democrats. A major obstacle has been opposition from the big postal workers' union.

While proclaiming the need for the rate increase, Blount left no doubt that he would prefer passage of the reforms this year to winning approval of the boost.

"I would be happy if they'd move on reform, because that deals with the long term problem of the Post Office," he said. "If the rate increases fail, it will just increase our deficit."

In a spectacular overtime period against Deerfield Academy Wednesday, the Stockbridge basketball team won by 2 points, 60-58. The first quarter score was 14-9 in favor of Stockbridge, with Andersen scoring 10 of the 14 points. By the end of the first half, Deerfield had brought the game within 3 points at 26-23.

During the third and fourth quarters, baskets were divided evenly between the teams. Deerfield tied the game in the third quarter at 30 points and for the remainder of the game, the teams kept within 2 points of each other.

With 15 seconds remaining in the game, the score was tied, 50-50, and Deerfield called time out to set up the play. When the game resumed, the ball was thrown to Raucher at the head of the key who made the shot, putting Deerfield ahead. Stockbridge quickly took the ball down to their basket and Harmon made a lay-up for the tying two points. Deerfield attempted a final basket before the buzzer, but the ball fell short, leaving the score 52-52.

The game went into three minutes of overtime and Stockbridge took a two-point lead. With the game 56-54, Cleary for Deerfield was fouled. Shooting in a 1 and 1 situation, he made both baskets, tying the score.

Frosh Mermen Tip Dean With Clutch Effort

By JIM BROWN
Staff Reporter

Leading at "home" court by only one point just before the last event, the UMass freshman swim team clinched a victory by scoring seven points when Dean Junior College didn't have an entry for the 400-yard freestyle relay in action this past week.

For the Little Redmen Bob Okolita totaled 13 points, Paul Reynolds had eight, Ron Cleaves and Bill Davidson had six and Terry Carney made four. For those who find it hard to understand swim scoring, a first place in an event earns the team five points, a second is worth three and a third yields one; just the opposite of cross-country.

Okolita took two firsts, one in the 200 - yard individual and one in the 200-yard back stroke. He also came up with a second in diving. Paul Reynolds pulled off a much-needed first place in the 200-yard breast stroke in the next to last event.

Davidson made it six points total in the breast stroke by taking a third which also broke a tie. Davidson got his other five points when he was unopposed in the 200-yard butterfly. This helped to turn the scoring away from Dean Jr. Two "no entries" hurt the visitors and added 12 points for the frosh mermen.

Placing of the frosh aquamen: 200-yard free style - Cleaves, second place; 50-yd. freestyle-Carney, second; 200-yd. individual Okolita, first; diving-Okolita, second; 200-yd. butterfly-Davidson, unopposed; 100-yd. freestyle-Reynolds, second and Carney, third; 200-yd. backstroke-Okolita, first; 500 - yd. freestyle - Cleaves, second; 200-yd. breast stroke-Reynolds, first and Davidson, third; 400-yd. freestyle relay - Davidson, Cleaves, Carney, Reynolds-unopposed.

Dean Jr. frosh had five first. Wells had two, Getz had two and Rosas had one. Coulter and Erbe added more points for the opposition. Wells broke his school's frosh record for the 100-yard free style at 53.8 seconds.

At the beginning of the meet it looked a little hazy for the Redmen. After four events Dean Jr. had three firsts, UMass had one. UMass got three firsts the rest of the way, Dean got two.

Jo Jo Headed for Stardom

NEW YORK (AP) - The Boston Celtics are still looking for someone to replace Bill Russell, but they seem to have found a replacement for Bob Cousy. Keep an eye on Jo Jo White.

"He's off and running," Coach Tom Heinsohn said of his new floor leader, ball handler and scorer. "And the best part of his game is his passing. He's the best passer we've had since Cousy.

"He's been starting the last 2-1/2 weeks. It might be 10 years before they get him out of the starting lineup now."

That's the way White looked Wednesday night as he scored 26 points against the New York Knicks in a 125-118 over time victory. His average has climbed to 10 points per game after a slow start because of six months active Army duty.

"I've felt good for the last week and a half," said the former University of Kansas standout. "I've learned what I'm supposed to know what the other guys can do, where they like to shoot. And they've come to trust me a little more.

"I think I would have been starting earlier if it hadn't been for the late start," he said. "I'd have been further along."

But the Celtics aren't complaining. The Army had a great deal to do with him being with Boston. After Milwaukee took Lew Alcindor in the draft last spring, seven other teams passed up the 6 foot 3, 190 pound guard before the Celtics picked him No. 9.

UMass Gymnasts Get Back in Action, Face Pitt on Saturday

By JOE PARNER
Staff Reporter

Attempting to get back on the winning road after their loss to Penn State, the UMass varsity gymnasts entertain the University of Pittsburg Saturday at 2, at Boyden Auxiliary Gym.

Pittsburgh has had its share of problems the past few years, finishing seventh in the Eastern League last season. Pitt has yet to win a meet against League competition this season.

Pittsburgh does have some individual performers, however, who have distinguished themselves in the past. Lowell Meek placed fifth in the floor exercise event at the Eastern Championships last year with a score of 8.85.

Other performers who have scored high for Pitt this past season are Joe Gracik, who has scored in the 9's on side horse and the long horse vault, and Dave Andrews, who received an 8.9 in the long horse vault in a recent meet.

The Redmen will be operating without the services of Dave Genest who recently underwent surgery for torn knee cartilages sustained in the Penn State meet. Dave, who works floor exercise, parallel bars and the long horse vault, will be out for the remainder of the season.

Coach Eric Kjeldsen plans to use the meet as a means of gaining experience for many gymnasts who have seen only limited action so far.

Joe Reed will get a well-earned rest in the all-around event after his outstanding performance against Penn State. Tony Vacca will replace Reed and join Norm Vexler to fill the requirements in this event. Reed, who had scores of 9.0 or better gainst the Nittany Lions, will compete in the long horse vault and high bar events as a specialist.

Other adjustments in the Redman lineup will be John Calabria and Bob Nelligan in floor exercise, Dana Hastings on side horse, Ed Jones on still rings, Scott Stover in the long horse vault, Doug Salisbury on high bar and Bob Henry on parallel bars and long horse vault.

UMass will be a strong favorite in the meet as Pittsburgh's highest meet score has been around 135 points. The Redmen have scored in the 155-160 range in their last three meets.

Earlier in the week the freshman gymnasts upped their season's record to 4-0 as they downed the Dartmouth varsity, 135.75-126.40, on Tuesday.

Outstanding performances were turned in by Mark Cummings and Jay Aronstein, along with the consistent scoring of Dan Spier and Steve Scuderi.

Cummings scored a 7.5 on side horse to win the event. It represents the highest side horse score for the UMass frosh this season.

Aronstein came through with a fine still rings routine and first place. His efforts netted him an 8.45 in the event.

The Little Redmen are enjoying an excellent season. It is interesting to note that both the Boston State and Dartmouth wins were over the varsity teams from these schools.

Girls Gymnaststics Team Hosts So. Conn. and Montreal

Fresh from an overwhelming 80-42 victory against Brockport University last weekend, the girls' gymnastic team will face the toughest home meet of the season Saturday night at 6:30 against Southern Connecticut and Montreal.

Southern Connecticut State College placed third in the East and fifth in the nation last year, right behind the UMass girls in both competitions. The Vandreuil Silhouettes from Montreal, Canada, are Canadian East Coast champions and gave the UMass girls a good battle last year. They are especially noted for their original and interesting floor exercise routines.

The meet this weekend will be run with two events going on at one time. Starting time again is 6:30 p.m. and the place, Boyden Auxiliary Gymnasium.

Redmen Seek to Erase Bad UConn Memories

Tap-off. Sat. at 8

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

"Redmen Meet UConn in 'Must' Game" . . .Collegian sports page, Tuesday, Dec. 16. Remember? "UMass Bows to UConn, 88-71, in Weird Basketball Contest" . . .Collegian sports page, Wednesday, Dec. 17. Remember? At eight o'clock Saturday night in Storrs, Ct. the UMass basketball team will attempt to erase the memories that these headlines recall when it taps off against the UConn Huskies in a key Yankee Conference game. A UMass-UConn frosh tilt will precede this affair at 6.

Back on Dec. 16 the Redmen squad, a young and inconsistent unit that was 2-1, faced a frisky UConn team that was 4-0, and ended up as the eventual losers, 88-71. The bitter taste of that event still lingers today, two months later.

Various developments have taken place since that date. UMass has jelled into a strong, solid basketball team that recently sacked New England's finest squad, Holy Cross, by 17 points. UConn, too, has gotten stronger but not to the same extent as have the Redmen.

Since their last meeting, the Huskies have recorded a 7-7 mark; the Redmen have been 9-5 over the same period, including six wins in their last seven outings.

"I think we're a much improved team since then," commented UMass coach Jack Leaman yesterday and clarified, "but so are they."

Leaman has been pleased with the eye-opening play of sophomore John Betancourt and the super performances of Julius Erving, but points to the contribution of senior forward Jack Gallagher as the most vital aspect of the recent resurgence of the Redmen.

"Our biggest improvement has been the play of Jack Gallagher," Leaman affirmed. Since the presence of Gallagher, a great defensive player, in the lineup, the Redmen have been able to sustain early leads and stretch them into victories.

For UMass to win in the mad Field House at Storrs, the same type of team effort that spelled the difference against Holy Cross will again be needed. That means more of the same clutch shooting from captain Ray Ellerbrook plus solid pivot play by the centers, Dick Samuelson and Ken Mathias. It also means the same type of reserve play showed by veterans Dennis Chapman and sophomore Mike Pagliara, who add considerably to the Redman depth.

As for the team UMass will face, it will be basically the same unit that shot 50% from the floor against the Redmen in December. In the backcourt the Huskies will start 5'11 junior Bob Boyd and 6'4 junior Bob Staak. The latter led all scorers with 22 points in the last affair between the two teams.

UConn's big men up front will include 6'5 soph Bob Taylor and 6'6 junior Ron Hrubala. Both of these men can score, which means that both will have to contend, at one time or another, with that defensive pest Gallagher.

At the center will be Tony Budzinsky, a 6'8 senior. His backup is another 6'8er, senior Steve Koski who scored 13 points in relief against the Redmen. Other Huskies of note include 6'4 junior John Crisp, 6'3 junior Tom Mc Crocklin and soph Roy Brooks, 5'9.

UConn is stronger in the backcourt than it is in the forecourt; witness the fact that the Redmen out-bounced the Huskies, 63-41. UMass is coming off a game in which it played excellently under the boards, UConn, on the other hand, lost to Syracuse, 101-80, Wednesday night.

In reference to the Conference race, the Redmen cannot afford to lose. UConn is 6-1 in league play and Rhode Island, likewise, has only one Conference loss. Thus a Huskie win would just about eliminate UMass, 3-2 in the YanCon, from crown contention. But the Redmen are playing their best basketball of the season. The outcome should answer a lot of questions and hopefully wipe out the lousy memories of Dec. 16 and 17.

This week on Sports Talk, UMass varsity hockey goalie P.J. Flaherty will be Hal Dash and Ken Horseman's guest.

In other Redman sports activity this weekend, the varsity and frosh track teams oppose Northeastern away on Saturday. Both meets get under way at one o'clock. The ski meet scheduled for Saturday has been postponed one week because of adverse weather.

Pucksters Go After 2nd Leg vs. AIC

UMass on the Road For Key 'Jacket' Tilt

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Embarking on the second leg of their current five-game road trip, the Redman hockey team travels to Springfield Saturday afternoon to face American International College at Blunt Park Arena; face-off is four o'clock.

AIC, last year's E.C.A.C. Division II champions, have had defensive problems this year, resulting in rather inconsistent play at times. Wednesday night it dropped a 9-4 decision to Colby to bring its season's record to 4-7 against Division II foes.

AIC Coach Bill Turner has been forced to use three sophomores Wally Stpak, Kevin Collins and

BOB BARTHOLOMEW

Paul Cyr to fill three of the five defensive slots. The other two defensive positions are manned by juniors Rusty Nelson and Pete Lovier.

The Yellow Jackets are not to be taken lightly though. Last year they beat UMass, 6-1, at Orr Rink and have their three leading scorers back this year. David Forbes from Quebec centers the second and is the Yellow Jackets' most dangerous offensive player.

Last year he scored 32 goals and added 25 assists for 58 points. This year Forbes has been just as dangerous. Wednesday night against Colby he notched his first hat trick of the year.

Captain Yves DeRome was the second leading scorer last year with 53 points, including 15 goals. DeRome is the best two-way player on the Yellow Jacket squad and, according to Turner, "their finest skater."

Mike "Igor" Egoroff is the third member of this dangerous trio. Last year Egoroff had 17 goals and 18 assists, good for 35 points. Also helping out this year has been the fine offensive play of sophomore wings Scott Baird and Cris Serino.

The key to a UMass victory will be effective forechecking, nullifying the AIC attack. The Yellow Jackets like to hit and it should be a rough game.

UMass must win their remaining four Division II games if it hopes to gain a Division II playoff berth. Right now Bowdoin and Merrimack seem to have two of the four positions locked up, but the other two are wide open. The Redman record against Division two foes is currently 7-4.

One of the biggest reasons for the sudden UMass rise since the Pennsylvania game has been the work of its four defensivemen, senior Dough Powling and sophomores Bob Bartholomew, Al Nickerson and Brian Sullivan. The defense has given goalies P.J. Flaherty and Bruce Crawford good protection and has prevented the opposition from getting second and third shots on goal by clearing the rebounds quickly.

ICE CHIPS - Flaherty will be back in goal against the Yellow Jackets....P.J. has been very effective since the Vermont game, making many spectacular saves.. Charlie Donovan is currently riding a two-game goal streak, with single goals in the Merrimack and UConn games....Crawford registered the first shutout for the Redmen this year when he stopped 24 shots against UConn.... Monday night the frosh will battle the Harvard freshmen at Orr Rink....Frosh sensation Pat Keenan will be shooting for his 20th goal of the season.

Grapplers In N.J. Quad Meet

By BOB GANLEY Staff Reporter

Leaving the friendly confines of New England this weekend, the UMass wrestlers travel to Monmouth, N.J. to tangle with Monmouth College, Adelphi College and the Merchant Marine Academy in a quadrangular meet.

The Redmen are 8-4 on the season, but three of these losses occurred the last time they journeyed out of the six state region, in a trip to Bloomsburg, Pa. Coach Homer Barr feels that the competition shouldn't be as stiff this time and hopes to come away with three victories.

He categorized all three teams on the level of the Coast Guard Academy, which the Redmen defeated in a close meet last month. Barr cautioned that, if the Redmen were not in top condition, there might be cause for concern. The flu has hit almost every member of the squad during the past month, causing the use of the makeshift lineup in the last three meets.

Clay Jester is still feeling the effects of his illness, but he will start for UMass in the 142-lb. slot. Mike Brauner has also returned to the lineup at the 158-lb spot, moving Jim Godkin down to 150. Tom Andrewes, the most consistent wrestler to date, is sick, and Bruce Buckbee will move down a class and replace him at 177. George Zguris will be at 190 and Chris Hodson will be wrestling for the first time this year at heavyweight.

Other Redman starters will be Nick DiDomenico, Dave Reynolds, Sheldon Goldberg and Tom Young. As the lineup is now, Barr feels he has most of the wrestlers at their strongest weights and he hopes this combination will be successful enough to sweep the weekend tourney.

Brown Speaks on Need for Black Studies

DVP lecturer Claude Brown who spoke last night before a receptive audience in the S.U. Ballroom on American politics and Black Studies Programs at American universities.

By RICHARD LANE Senior Reporter

DVP (Distinguished Visitors Program) speaker Claude Brown told a capacity audience in the Student Union Ballroom last night that "it is absolutely necessary to have Black studies and Black instructors teaching them." Brown also declared that there is a new "racing fascism" in American today but that "nobody takes it seriously enough."

The noted black author who is currently on a year's leave of absence from Rutgers Law School and is teaching at the University of California at Santa Barbara, spoke first on his best seller MANCHILD OF THE PROMISED LAND (which Black Studies leader Michael Thelwell called an "important American and Black document"). Brown went into some detail as to how he came to write the book and get it published and what has happened to some of the book's characters since then. He concluded his remarks on the book by saying that he is "still trying to recuperate from the after effects of Manchild."

Mr. Brown then told his audience that "We are living in times that are frightening, really horrifying." Brown stated that an analogy could be drawn between the Nixon Administration and the Third Reich. "Agnew is Nixon's Goebbels, his Propaganda Minister," Brown continued. He drew some applause from the audience when he stated that he believed President Nixon to be "a psycopath, devoid of any conscience."

The DVP Speaker termed Nixon's election not only "a sad time for Black America," but for everyone else as well because "Nixon has declared war on everybody who is different" and that when he finishes with Negroes he will then go after 'long hairs, beards, Jews, Catholics," etc.

He concluded these remarks by saying that America has a "very serious problem" today and "spectre of pollution hanging over it," meaning Nixon and facism.

Mr. Brown then proceeded to get into the main part of his speech about Black studies and Black education. He first pointed to his own individual background at Howard University. He declared that there is a certain "reverse racism there" and "real truth" at Howard. By this he meant that Blacks felt no need for Whites at Howard and a certain satisfaction with their separatism. He said that only by going to Howard or a black school could Blacks or Whites understand this.

The primary value of the Black studies programs and Black education according to Brown is that "it takes Black people with Black background to understand and interpret Black culture, history and poetry, etc." He continued that Blacks must have people who can relate to them because "Black people must be prepared to live in Black America."

Brown said that there is a certain justification of Blacks asking for separation in education because "Whites aren't ready for real Blacks yet."

He concluded his evening's remarks by saying that there is reluctance to give them (Blacks) what they need (Black studies programs with Black teachers) but that America should "go all the way and solve the problem."

A brief question and answer period then followed at which time Brown said that his purpose in coming was to "make people aware of fascism in America and the problems in Black education."

Workshop on Pollution to Be Held

Amherst, Mass. - A special workshop on the health hazards of cross-connections between drinking water lines and polluted water will be given by the University of Massachusetts Technical Guidance Center February 26 at Framingham State College.

The workshop is for town managers, industrial personnel, sanitarians and other interested persons. Co-sponsors are the Massachusetts Department of Health and the U. S. Public Health Service. There is no registration charge.

The workship, at Dwight Auditorium, will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. U. S. Public Health Service regional water supply consultant Harry Smith will speak on "Facts and Significance of Cross-Connections" at 9; director George Coogan of the Bureau of Water Supply and Quality Evaluation of the state Department of Health will speak on "Legal Responsibilities in Cross - Connection Control" at 10; and Gus Angele, plant sanitary engineer of the Union Carbide Nuclear Division will speak on "How to Implement an Effective Cross - Connection Control Program" at 11.

Work group sessions led by the three speakers will be held in the after noon. The sessions will adjourn at 4 p.m.

Advance registration may be made through the Technical Guidance Center, Marshall Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. 01002.

Lederle Takes Steps To Ease Rent Squeeze

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

President John W. Lederle disclosed yesterday that the University is taking four steps to soften the financial blow which protestors say the proposed room rent increases will cause students next year.

Included in this list is the formation of a Coordinating Committee, controlled by students, which will act as a resource center for the various student, faculty and administration groups now studying the proposed increases.

The other steps include asking the State government to grant the University's Building Authority more buying power, working to beef up the school's financial aide and scholarship funds, and giving financial aid priority to students who are already on campus.

The coordinating committee, which will be named later this week, will include five undergraduates, one graduate student, two faculty members and two administrators, according to Lederle.

The President, in a prepared statement, also disclosed that the student committee members as well as the Chairman of the committee will be chosen by Student Senate President Cynthia Olken.

The Committee, according to Lederle, "Will ask for recommendations from all other groups studying the rent problem before March 10th and will present them to the President and the Trustees before Spring vacation."

The committee will also engage in some lobbying with the legislature for additional scholarship aid, and will work to convince the legislature, in the President's words, "to assume financial responsibility for the maintenance costs of residence halls."

Proposing a structure for a "permanent student services board that would provide continuing advice on the management of residence halls and dining commons "will provide the committee with a long-range function, according to Lederle.

Lederle also announced that the Building Authority is filing legislation which would raise the interest rate ceiling on long term bonds, and thus eliminate the necessity of short-term financing to pay for dorm construction.

It is this ceiling which the Treasurer's office blames for "beginning the snowball of cost factors which have caused the rent crisis."

The President disclosed that the majority of financial aid funds will be given to continuing University students next year, rather than freshmen, in order to help "those who will be hurt most by the proposed rent increase."

In his statement he also praised the Student Senate's proposed audit of the Treasurer's office rent budget, calling it, "a fresh viewpoint which may result in some reasonable alternatives. . .to the sharp rent hikes."

Guerilla theater by the SDS was part of the demonstration Friday aimed at driving the General Dynamics Company recruiters off campus. The strategy worked and the interviews were moved.

A protest of General Dynamics recruiters at Whitmore Friday resulted in an early departure of the recruiters. Protesters, varying in number from 10 to 50 throughout the day, opposed the presence of the defense contractor on campus.

Organized by the MLK Committee on Militarism and the Students for a Democratic Society, the protest included guerilla theater in the Whitmore lobby, and an around campus parade through the building, and culminated with a sit-in in the Placement Office.

The recruiters stopped interviewing at noon and retired to the Placement Office. Under orders from General Dynamics management to avoid confrontation, the recruiters left when protesters demanded to speak to them.

The recruiters completed their scheduled interviews at Howard Johnson's Hadley Motor Inn.

Residence Heads Meet, Issue Statement Supporting Students

By RICHARD C. HANSON Staff Reporter

A group of Heads of Residence met last night and expressed their "complete support to the students against the proposed room rent increase" and offered their "support and services" to their individual dorms concerning these and other issues.

In a statement issued by those Heads of Residence present it was further "urged" that students continue their letter writing campaigns and that the Heads of Residence "believe (that) the different forces (Student Senate, Provost's money, and Faculty Senate) should unify their resources, both in finances and professional services to explore all feasible alternatives."

The statement, it was emphasized, is not speaking for "all" Heads of Residence. One Head of Residence commented that the statement will go before area meetings for approval and "whether the assembled group represents all 52 Heads of Residence "will be found out.

The statement is as follows: "We, the Heads of Residence of the University of Massachusetts do hereby express our complete support to the students against the proposed room rent increase. It is also urged that in the future all concerned parties of the University community be consulted before decisions are made. The Heads of Residence believe the different forces (Student Senate, Provost's Funds, and Faculty Senate) should unify their resources, both in finances and professional services to explore all feasible alternatives. The students are urged to continue their letter writing campaign and extend this effort to all dorms. Those letters should be sent to Mr. Joseph P. Healy, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Arlington, Mass.,; their legislature and the education editor of the Boston Globe.

Finally, the Heads of Residence offer their support and services to their individual dorms."

The Heads of Residence discussed a proposed bill in the student senate to get rid of the Heads of Residence. One person expressed the opinion that he would be "glad" to see the bill brought to the senate floor. He felt confident that the Heads of Residence at least in his case would be defended and retained.

Debate turned to how the Heads of Residence could improve their "public image". It was felt that the Heads of Residence should have a "sense of consistency." Several people expressed concern for the ways in which the Heads of Residence can "support" the students in their fights. There seemed to be strong acceptance of the idea that as one Head of Residence stated, "our strength is through the students."

Relating to the proposal to eliminate Heads of Residence to help cut the present budget, they emphasized that Heads of Residence's salaries were paid by the state, not the student rents.

Beginning February 15th and continuing through most of Lent, Grace Church is sponsoring a series of Sunday supper meetings on Amherst as a place to live, to turn on (or off), to go to school, and to work. Anyone is welcome who is interested in hearing from local people of special training and experience what might be done to improve Amherst in these respects; the introductory presentations are to be brief enough to allow ample time for questions and discussion.

All the meetings will be held from 5 to 7:15 p.m. in the Parish House across Spring Street from the Lord Jeffery Inn. Parish families are to supply covered dishes for themselves and enough additional to feed guest speakers, single persons and students. Entertainment will be provided in a neighboring room for children too young to profit by the adult program.

The meeting of February 15th was aimed at an over-view of the town: "What I most want to see happen in Amherst." The discussion leader was Professor Bruce Morgan of the Department of Religion at Amherst College.

The concerns of the subsequent meetings will be the physical and social environment of Amherst (February 22nd), the drug problem (March 1st), the schools (March 8th), and opportunities of employment (March 15th). The resource people for these meetings will be announced as the meetings come up.

Jury Still Out In Chicago 7 Case

CHICAGO (AP) - Seven men remained jailed on contempt charges Monday while a U. S. District Court jury deliberated for the third day on whether they conspired to incite riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The jury retired from its deliberations Monday at 5:30 p.m. Federal marshals gave no reason for the early end to the day's deliberations.

The jury decides its own hours. Although the judge said last week he hoped the jurors would deliberate until 10 p.m. each night, they are under no obligation to do so.

Thomas P. Sullivan, a Chicago lawyer, filed with the U. S. 7th Circuit Court of Appeals Monday a notice of appeal on the contempt judgments levied Saturday and Sunday by Judge Julius J. Hoffman, against the defendants and their legal counsel.

Sullivan said the action is aimed at getting the defendants free on bond pending the appeals proceedings which wer e expected to be lengthy.

He said an extensive brief will be filed with the appeals court Thursday.

Sentences for the defendants ranged from 2-1/2 months to 2-1/2 years. Defense lawyer William M. Kunstler was sentenced to four years and 13 days in prison and his colleague, Leonard I Weinglass, was sentenced to 20 months and five days.

Kunstler and Weinglass, whose commitments were stayed by the judge until May 4, visited their clients in the federal tier of the Cook County-Chicago-Jail. Judge Hoffman denied motions to allow the seven men bond while appeals are pending.

The failure of the jury of 10 women and two men to reach a decision prompted speculation that a verdict, if one is reached, may be mixed and complicated.

Judge Hoffman told newsmen last week that he intended, if necessary, to charge the jury a second time in an effort to have it reach a verdict in the five month trial.

Each of the seven men is charged with violating the federal anti-riot law. In addition, each is charged in a substantive count of the indictment. Five defendants are charged with crossing state lines to promote convention week violence and two others are charged with teaching the use of an incendiary device.

If convicted on both counts, each man could be sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and fined $20,000

Kunstler expressed optimism to newsmen at the length of the jury's deliberations. He said: "The more they stay out, the better I will feel. It has not been significant that the jury has been out this long, but it will be significant if they don't reach a verdict today.

"I assume they are either bargaining or lobbying. We hope they don't bargain away the rights of some defendants. We hope all will be convicted or all will be acquitted or it's a hung jury."

In determining the length of the contempt sentences, Judge Hoffman set penalties ranging from one day to six months on each contempt court.

Besides Weiner the defendants and their sentences are:

David T. Dellinger, 54, sentenced to 29 months and 16 days on 32 counts.

Rennard C. Davis, 29, sentenced to 25 months and five days on 23 counts.

Jerry C Rubin, 31, sentenced to 25 months and 23 days on 15 counts.

Abbott Hoffman, 31, sentenced to eight months on 23 counts.

John R. Froines, 31, sentenced to six months and 15 days on 10 counts.

Thomas E. Hayden, 31, sentenced to 14 months and 14 days on 11 counts.

Russia Warns Israel to Stop, Hints On Aid Boost to Egypt

LONDON (AP) - Egypt criticized Britain on Monday for its "lukewarm reaction" to Israeli air strikes against Arab civilians, while Russia made its strongest threat so far to boost arms aid to the Arabs unless Israel stops the attacks. Egypt called on the British to rally the big powers to pose a threat of sanctions of Israeli air attacks on Arab civilians continue.

In a statement issued after Israel's attack on a Cairo facotry last Thursday, the British Foreign Ministry said: "We deeply deplore this tragic incident. Events of this kind make it all the more necessary for urgent action to reduce the scale of the fighting."

The official Soviet news agency Tass said in a statement issued in Moscow that the Soviet government will give the "necessary support" to Arab countries to enable them to "strengthen their capacity to defend their security" against Israeli attacks.

The warning was contained in a Kremlin condemnation of Israel's raid Thursday against an Egyptian plant just outside Cairo.

Egypt's blast against Britain was issued by its envoy to London, Ahmed Hassan el Feki.

"Everyone in Cairo had expected a straightforward, precise and unambiguous condemnation of that bombing action," El Faki said after a 30 minute meeting with Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart.

El Feki said he told Stewart his government was "extremely disappointed at the British reaction" and added that a mere expression of regret was not good enough.

The envoy stressed that Cairo feels Britain holds special responsibilities not only as a big power but also as author of the U. N. Security Council resolution of November, 1967, which set forth the basis of a possible Arab Israeli settlement.

"We expect from the United Kingdom, in cooperation with other big powers and in fulfillment of their responsibilities under the U. N. charter, a severe warning to Israel that it will meet witl sanctions if such a policy of attacking civilian centers is continued.

"I do not believe it is too late for the United Kingdom to attend to these responsibilities," said El Feki.

The Foreign Office declined comment on Stewart's meeting with El Feki beyond saying that the exchange covered general Middle Eastern problems.

Later, a delegation representing the board of deputies of British Jews went into a session with prime Minister Harold Wilson. That talk also focused on the Middle East.

El Feki had been in Cairo for about a month consulting with President Abdel Gamal Nasser and other Arab leaders.

His intervention was said by aides to have been on Nasser's orders. It is in line with Nasser's efforts to identify both the British and Americans with the Israelis - and the Russians AS SUPPORTERS OF THE Arab cause.

The envoy criticized the British for failing, to "give evidence of any effective effort" to implement the 1967 resolution.

The U. N. resolution of 1967 called for a negotiated settlement based on an Israeli withdrawal from war won Arab territory and Arab recognition of Israel's right to live in peace.

Pusey Resigns, Claims Harvard Faces Problems

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Nathan M. Pusey announced Monday he will retire in June, 1971 as the 24th president of Harvard University.

Pusey, who became Harvard's president in 1953, had been expected to remain until June, 1973 when he would be 65.

In a letter to the Harvard Corporation, released Monday night, Pusey suggested that "a formidable array of difficult problems facing Harvard" made it desirable to announce his departure now so that the university will have adequate time to look for a successor.

The Fellows of Harvard College, one of the two governing bodies at the university, announced they would welcome suggestions from interested persons as to a successor.

Pusey, who has been Harvard's president for 17 years, graduated from the University in 1928.

A notable phase of Pusey's leadership came in his early years at Cambridge when he confronted the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin, who claimed campuses were known refuges for Communists. Pusey told the senator off in sharp terms.

More recently, Pusey guided university policy toward a decision last week to insert clauses in construction contracts that would require private builders to employ minority group members in campus jobs.

One of his major accomplishments was a successful campaign to raise $82.5 million. The fund raising, begun three years after Pusey took office, has since been reflected in new buildings and facilities.

Conference on Undergrad Education And Role of Teacher Held Monday

Over 100 members of the University of Massachusetts faculty met yesterday at the Hotel Northampton for a conference on undergrduate education. The faculty, coming from every school and college within the University, represented viewpoints as diverse as their ages and ranks.

They were united by a sense of crisis in our educational system and a concern for the experience of an undergraduate in a University which is growing rapidly in both size and stature.

The tone of the meeting was set by three keynote speakers, Dr. Alan Kamil of the psychology dept. and Dr. Brian O'Conner of the zoology dept. expressed the uncertainty and the opportunity that comes with the teaching of very large introductory lecture courses.

Dr. Jules Chametzky of the English Dept. explored the growth of what he called "pedagogic doubt" in our time. He suggested that this doubt has developed in the face of a crisis in the disciplines which are taught and as a response to the challenge posed by the "counter-culture" of the students.

"In the face of this doubt," he continued, "we must not abdicate our role as teachers but redefine it so that it is more responsive to what the students need."

Following the opening addresses, the participants split into a number of small groups to examine problems in teaching and then reassembled for lunch. Following the luncheon panels on topics such as Group Processes in the Classroom, Teaching Evaluation, and Teaching as a Subversive Activity were offered.

Dr. Jay Savereid of the speech department served as moderator for the conference. The meeting was adjourned at 5:30 after a plenary session in which a call was made for continued faculty action to insure that undergraduate education receives proper support and attention from the University administration. The group will continue to meet to plan further steps.

4 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
1-1/2 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt

Mix well. Pour batter into waxed paper-lined 13 x 9 oblong pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 to 34 minutes. Cool and cut into squares.

(Two tablespoons of grass mixed well with any chocolate frosting makes a topping that is nothing short of phenomenal.) Serve with marijuana tea and burn incense.

At a meeting of the campus shuttle bus drivers, held in the Student Union this past Thursday evening, it was decided to continue the extension of the shuttle service to the School of Education. New schedules for both the Orchard Hill Route and the Southwest Route will be published later this week.

The new service will provide service to the School of Education every 20-25 minutes via the Southwest bus and every 30-35 minutes via the Orchard Hill bus as it comes down from the Hill. It is hoped that the new schedule will provide usable transportation services to more students without disrupting the service to the remainder of the campus.

William Perkins, manager of the shuttle service, expressed optimism that the service will be of greater value. When asked why the School of Ed. had not been included in the original routes he responded, "The traffic on N. Pleasant Street and the congested parking conditions at the School caused us to avoid the inevitable delays. We have a schedule which we try to keep and if we get hung-up down there, the schedule is shot."

The parking office and officials at the School have assured the shuttle service that parking restrictions on the South access to the buildings will be strictly enforced.

Richard M. Nixon Spiro T. Agnew

WASHINGTON (CPS) - "Mr. Nixon ran in 1968 as the President... he was just asking the people to confirm it for him . . . the election was just a formality."

This was the consensus of opinion expressed in a seminar by staff members of Robert-Lynn Associates Ltd., a Washington public relations firm which specializes in campaign management. Their audience was a group of foreign diplomats who were the guests of The American Council of Young Political Leaders, the gathering organization for super-Young Republicans and Young Democrats. The event was a day long seminar entitled "The College of Politics" which is a short-course in winning elections, prepared by Robert-Lynn.

If we assume that what the professionals at Robert-Lynn said about the Nixon campaign strategy is true, then some of the maneuvers of the Administration in its first year in office are put into an important new perspective.

Take for example, the "silent majority" speech delivered by the President just before the November Moratorium. No one was asked to produce evidence of such a group; the President told us it was (Vietnam War.

alive and well and living in America. That, and a few thousand telegrams, was enough to make the "silent majority" real for many people who had no frame of reference and no information, and hence no reason to doubt the President's words.

It's possible that the renovation of the draft system may have been the object of this same "de facto strategy". The Nixon Administration simply stated that the process was random. Millions watched the little containers being plucked out of the fishbowl. Not even reports from scientists, who have recently stated that the order in which the numbers were drawn indicates a high probability that the process was not random, is enough to change the minds of so many who heard their President and his agents repeatedly call the system "random".

The most recent evidence of the Administration's "de facto strategy" came this week from Vice President Spiro Agnew. The Vice-President was responsing to newsmen who were questioning him about some rather negative testimony at the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on the Trustees Name Dept. Head To V.O. Key Professorship

Dr. William C. Havard, Jr., professor and head of the University of Massachusetts government department, has been named V.O. Key Professor of Government at the University.

The newly-created professorship honors a leading political scientist of the mid-1960's who was president of the American Political Science Association and head of the department of government at Harvard University.

Dr. Havard was named to the post by the UMass Board of Trustees in recognition of his "outstanding service to the University." He will continue to head the government department as he has done since he joined the U-Mass faculty in 1964.

He came to UMass from Louisiana State University and had also served on faculties at Northwestern State College of Louisiana and the University of Florida. He holds a B.A. and M.A. from Louisiana State and a Ph. D. from the London School of Economics.

Dr. Havard is known as an effective administrator, a dedicated teacher and an outstanding scholar who has written extensively in his field. In addition to more than three dozen articles in American and European journals and several monographs, he is the author, co-author or editor of eight books.

Dr. Havard has been a Fellow of the Southern Fellowship Fund, a Fulbright Lecturer in Germany, a research assistant to the Louisiana Law Institute, a research associate to the Louisiana Legislative Council and director of the Public Administration Clearing Service at the University of Florida.

At the University he has served on the Special Commission on Student Publications, on the Advisory Council of the UMass Labor Relations and Research Center and was chairman of three groups that produced planning studies - the University College Committee, the Law School Committee and the Faculty Senate Ad Hoc Long Range Planning Committee.

Dr. Havard has been a visiting lecturer at Amherst and Mount Holyoke Colleges, has been a member of the Five-College Long Range Planning Committee and has been President of the New England Political Science Association.

Gruman Interview

Dr. Gerald Gruman, associate professor of history whose tenure case will be reviewed by the University Tenure and Grievance Committee beginning this week, will appear on WMUA this Wednesday evening at 10 p.m. Gruman will discuss academic freedom and tenure in relation to student involvement. Professor Gerard Braunthal, an international relations expert in the government department and former member of the Tenure and Grievance Committee, will also take part in the discussion. Ken Mosakowski and Hal Dash will host the program. Phone calls are invited.

C.E.Q. Committees Meet, Seek Working Members

The first meeting of committees for the Coalition For Environmental Quality will be held Wednesday evening in S.B.A. These committees are the result of a mass meeting held one week ago in which it was decided that the operation of the Coalition should be divided into three main areas: research, publicity, and direct action.

A tentative agenda for the evening calls for a gathering of the temporary acting chairmen (Temporary Steering Committee) at 6 p.m. At 7 p.m., there will be a meeting of the five research committees (Land ecology - Room 109, Air ecology - Room 110, Water ecology - Room 111, Wildlife ecology - Room 109, Human ecology and population - Room 112).

At 9 p.m. the Publicity committees will meet in room 102 with those interested in newspaper, television, radio, photography, etc. The Films and Speakers Committee will gather in room 109.

The Direct Action groups will meet as follows - LEGAL AND LEGISLATIVE ACTION COMMITTEE - Room 110. COMMUNITY ORGANIZATION ACTION COMMITTEE (including education, picketing, etc) room 111. ADMINISTRATIVE STAFF - (volunteers to help with phone answering, duplicating etc.) Room 112. Feel free to go back from one committee to another in order to find your area of preference. Everyone is invited to come and work to help create a more enjoyable environment. "Remember if you're not part of the solution, you're part of the pollution."

Solution Worth Trying

The announced rent hike proposal has caused a rightful amount of furor and reaction around the campus. And it has stirred useful dialogue about student power, an intangible made suddenly tangible with the rent hike the catalyst. But the trouble is that the rent hike still looms over UMass students, and all conversation has served to cloud an issue that couldn't be more relevant and vital.

Therefore it was a welcome relief to read President Lederle's statement of yesterday in which he formed a subcommittee, the majority of which and the chairman of which will be students, to investigate the rent crisis fully. The committee would serve as a resource body that could coordinate research being done through other channels. (i.e., the Student Senate independent audit.)

In addition, the committee would be in contact with the legislature and governor in a determined effort to relieve the burden of the increased rents.

The President also reiterated efforts being made to gain funds through the state and national governments.

The statement could be interpreted to be a deterrant from the Student Senate Whitmore protest Thursday. But the proposal for a student dominated committee that would have the old time stamp of administrative approval with new time flavor of fresh ideas seems a sincere attempt to mediate a serious problem.

We feel the committee should be given every opportunity possible by students and administrators alike to find a less costly solution to an expensive problem.

Set The Tone

The new editors are initiating, with this edition, a long rang' revival, and with a little student participation, this paper can more effectively put its finger on the pulse of UMass, 1970.

The improvements, in the beginning, may seem only visual, but the consistant reader will find that he can consistantly refer to news and editorial departments, and can distinguish between an expression of opinion and one of fact.

The campus has been changing rapidly and it is the function of the campus newspaper to inform the community of this change and to also evaluate it. Eventually this paper will develop more fully into a voice that emits not only reliable information, but also conscientious editorials. This can only happen if enough students take an interest in their university publication.

The Sports Department has been cited by some, as being the most consistant and reliable department in the paper. One of the obvious reasons for this is that students who work on sports coverage enjoy what they are doing. There is no reason why interest in factual, and "professional" news coverage cannot be generated. And there is no reason why students with constructive criticism and "non-rhetorical prose" cannot find a worthwhile outlet in this paper.

Ultimately the tone of the MDC depends on the tone of the campus it serves. And one of the ways a behind-the-times and apathetic campus conveys its tone is through the participation (or lack of it) on the campus newspaper.

Help to set the tone of your university.

If You Write Letters . . .

To the editor:

This is in response to two letters submitted by Judith Tripp and Ann Nichols concerning last Monday's King Council open meeting. I do wish you had paid more attention to the meeting if you were going to write letters about it. If you, as Council members, had been paying attention to the mode of reorganization you would have known that you are to have as much to do with the direction of the Council and who the leadership is to be as Ken, Gil, and myself. We stressed over and over again that the criteria is quality and quantity of work. We stressed that personality clashes and ego-involvements have no place in the Council.

Both Ken and I stated our dislike for once in a while workers. Every one else had a right to express their opinion also. Ken and I both used his poverty committee and draft committee as examples of efficient committees and models we believe should be followed. You seem to have interpreted Ken's use of these models as ego-tripping. Your immature confusion is apparent. Ken is no ego-tripper, he is a consistent and efficient worker. This is simply the way we feel an organization named after Dr. King should function. He gave his entire life for the people. We require the same or similar commitment from Council members.

If Ken and I frighten people away from the Council, there are some excellent reasons for it and I am pleased that these people are frightened away. Ken's day is an extremely busy one. He has no time to smile and chat nicely with the timid and insecure. If the charge that some are fightened away by my Blackness is true then those who it does frighten should never be members of a social action group. The timid, insecure, and those who have some very negative racial fears have no place in a social action group. The name implies action, not sensitizing. The hangups that these people have do the Council no good and can only serve to cease all positive action while trying to deal with these internal ills. These hangups can only be dealt with by the individual. Joining a social action group to handle them is detrimental to all concerned; particularly those that are the object of the activities of the group, Black people, Red people, and other oppressed minorities. This I cannot and will not allow.

To show you how little attention you paid to the proceedings, in your first letter you had me put down as saying that non-violence was not only "permissable but a necessary means to the aims of the Council." I said nearly the opposite. I stated that I did not consider Dr. King's principle of non-violence one of his major points of importance. I went on to say that tactics should be determined by the situation and the need and desirability of the goal.

You also seem to have a very poor knowledge of the social and political ills of the U.S. You questioned my "preoccupation" with white racism. Well, white racism is not only the major determinant of all that the U.S. does today but is also the very base and foundation of every political, social and economic institution in America. To refuse to see everything the Council is concerned with in these terms is to become as ineffective as congressional legislation.

I maintain my statement calling apathetic white students "white, plastic shells". And yes, every Black student is indeed fighting for "power to the people," because (in case you didn't know) most Black people in the world are engaged in a fight for survival. This is fighting for power to the people because we are the people without the power. That's fact.

I would suggest that the two of you spend some time improving your education in these areas because what knowledge you have is negligible. I also suggest that you spend a little time attempting to grow up. You are two confused little girls who had best return to the womb. It's a less complicated environment.

CARLETON E. BROWN

Vote of Confidence

To the editors:

This letter concerns Prof. Gerald Gruman, whose case for tenure is still under consideration by the Tenure and Grievance Committee. I am presently in Prof. Gruman's History 213 class, European Intellectual History of the 20th Century. Although I have known Prof. Gruman only a few weeks, I am already convinced he is the finest teacher I have had at UMass.

This statement may seem a little premature. However, the teaching ability of Prof. Gruman is unique. The class is organized on a student participation basis, with each student giving a report on a topic related to the course. The topic is of the Student's own choice, and Prof. Gruman assistshim in finding references and organizing material. Prof. Gruman's actual classroom role is as a mediator of questioning and discussion. Prof. Gruman serves as an insightful critic and stimulator of discussion. This situation, at least to my thinking, is one of the most important aspects of education; a workable student-teacher relationship.

In general, this course causes a student to become actively concerned with issues and to think, not as a lecturer interprets a subject, but as the student himself perceives it. It seems to me that this kind of education is the most valuable, and this is the type of education Prof. Gruman favors.

Because of this course, I have recently given much thought to a subject which is important to me, the role of religion in my life. I think I can say that, because of this course, I have developed some ideas on religion I never had before.

I would be a great loss to UMass if Prof. Gruman does not get tenure. Many times people say that issues are too great or complex for any effective action on their part. People might say that this matter is of no concern to them, but I ask: can this University afford to lose any dedicated, concerned faculty member? I think you'll agree the answer is no. This letter is merely my vote of confidence for Prof. Gruman. I hope others will add their voices in support of Prof. Gruman.

More Tokenism

To The Editor:

Last Thursday night the Psychology Dept. held a meeting for all psychology majors. The reason for the meeting was expressed in the advance publicity as "With so large a department, student organization and student participation in the department is necessary in order that each student has a voice and feels a part of their educational experience." Unfortunately, this was just part of the publicity and not a goal of the meeting.

Dr. Schumer, leader of the meeting, stopped any discussion on how this student participation should be formed. It seems that the faculty, along with five undergraduate students chosen by faculty members, decided the form last semester. The meeting was just to find a way to fill the committee spaces given to us by the faculty. For those who didn't attend the meeting, the student representation consists of 5 votes out of 50 (40 faculty) in faculty meetings, 1 vote out of 8 (6 faculty) on the executive committee, 5 votes out of 10 (5 faculty) on the undergraduate affairs committee, and no votes on the personnel committee. This allows for student input of opinions but little control or power as to what happens to them.

I reject and I call upon all psychology majors to reject this gift of the faculty as anything but a temporary arrangement. The students must decide, not the faculty, what representation and power they shall have in determining the future of their major. Let us have a University FOR THE STUDENTS, not with students. POWER TO THE PEOPLE.

Complaint

To The Editor:

We would like to express our dissatisfaction with the publicity of the Andre Kole lecture. The advertising fliers, played up the supernatural and did not mention as the illusionist, Andre Kole, himself did that his lecture was a magician's view of Christianity. We were misled concerning the content of his production, not being aware it would turn into a sermon upon the statement that Christ was our only hope. Andre Kole must have known of the misrepresentation of his lecture as we were given fifteen minutes to leave if we did not desire a "personal relationship with God."

We would like to know why such false advertising is permitted on campus.

CAMPUS COMMENT

Dynamically Against the Wall

To the editor:

Why did General Dynamics Corporation have to stop recruiting? I'm afraid that the assault on the recruiting of General Dynamics stands out much more conspicuously than the reasons why that corporation had to go. This was the fault of the people responsible for the demonstration (SDS and the Committee on Militarism); however, that omission is largely due to the fact that communications at this stage are still poor and the rulers of this society have effectively (although not definitive-16) isolated the militant efforts at reform from the rest of the people.

A recent cover story in Time magazine concerning the American Indians revealed the following: "Elsewhere some 115 commercial and industrial enterprises, among them General Dynamics and Fairchild Camera, have moved onto Indian reservations, enticed by the freedom from real estate taxes accorded reservation enterprises - and by cheap labor. They provide jobs and profits for individual Indians as well as their tribes." The racist content of this article, which describes the Indians as shattered, primitive, "hopelessly irrelevant" ("from the viewpoint of . . . modern civilization") alcoholics, the best of whose manhood has already been killed off, provides the ideology of racism which justifies the superexploitation of nonwhites for the purpose of making profits. Time magazine, by its racist articles, lays the superstructure required by General Dynamics (and EVERY other major corporation) to carry on its "business", without the whole country "throwing the bums out". The superexploitation of cheap labor on Indian reservations may make profits for a few "individual Indians" (read "misleaders"), but the addendum that it provides profits for "their tribes as well" is pure presumption by Time.

Time, Inc. has established that General Dynamics, Inc. is a fellow racist corporation that shares in the 22 billion dollars (at least) made in annual profits from the ideology of racism it has helped to develop (22 million non-white families earn on the average 1000 dollars less than white - that is, 22 billion extra for the rulers of these corporation, plus an uncalculated amount gained by such wage differentials which keep downward pressure on the wages of ALL workers).

General Dynamics prosecutes its drive for profits within this context of racism by being the third largest defense contractor in the U.S., providing the arms to carry out a racist war whose purpose is to gain access to the last expansive unclaimed source of raw materials and cheap labor in the world (S.E. Asia), for exploitation - exploitation not by America's workers or by its majority, but exploitation by a few who control America's largest corporations.

This kind of dictatorship over people, a dictatorship in which General Dynamics does not represent the needs or interests of the majority of people and yet has the backing of the police, the State, and the sources of information that we Americans have to live with daily, cannot be tolerated.

We must not be misled by the University deans and Administration that General Dynamics, as a legitimate institution in America, had to stop recruiting because it would not debate a few radicals. Such arguments only serve to isolate the Left from the majority of students and to create the illusions about the legitimacy of dictatorial power such as that held by General Dynamics. The REAL reason that General Dynamics left this campus is because the American workers and students are increasingly backing these guys against the wall.

Egg Shower!

To the editor:

Just for the record I would like to say something concerning the lame duck amendment and its relevance to the college community. Surely our sexy prexy in Fort Whitmore must secretly feel its weight pressing on his subconscious . . . and is pretty don't-really-know-whether-I'm-coming-or-going in the waning days and mouths of his occupation.

So let's have the femme fatale fan twirlers in our midst (and you know who you are) stand up and give the rascal a little moral support and may the Bird of Paradise team up with the Umie Peacock and shower his desk with speckled eggs of promise!

LARRY TRILLO

Perspective

To the editor:

While I am in agreement with the students who are protesting the room rent increase, I feel the need to add a touch of perspective. Those who have never had to hassle in the housing market probably never think about the expense of buying or renting a place to live in. Granted, no one looking for an apartment would ever think of paying the price the University asks for the cubicles it rents. Yet, those who are paying upwards of $150 a month for an apartment that leaks and has faulty plumbing look enviously at the dorm students who can appeal to deans and legislators when prices get too high.

There IS a sucker born every minute, and landlords know this when they determine rents. Tell a landlord you think he's charging too much and he'll tell you there is someone waiting for your apartment if you aren't willing to pay for it. Thus, students wishing to follow the natural inclination to live as couples must pay the price in green money. (Around Amherst money is even harder to come by than housing.)

I hope the dorm students win their case. But I hope they become sensitive to the inflated cost of housing everywhere. Perhaps if they can recognize the load the married students carry in private housing, they will show a little interest in a project Amherst needs; co-operative housing.

CHRIS HAGUE

To Much To Chew

To the editor:

Once again the food service crew have done a magnificent job in caring for the hungry mobs of bedraggled students who look forward to the evening meal with high expectations! These students consider the dining commons - with its cheerful staff - a haven after a long and harried day.

Why just tonight I stepped out of the cold into the cheery warmth of Hamden Commons with my mouth watering at the thought of enjoying another of those succulent meals. I grabbed a tray and rushed into line, not the least bit daunted by the fact that there was no silverware, for with the low, low price of a meal ticket one could hardly expect the conviences of a first class restaurant. The food is quite incredible and that's all that really matters!

As I approached the serving area, the aroma of this evening specialty (roast beast?) reached my senses and I was ecstatic in anticipation of ravenously attacking the what ever it was with my bare hands. I watched in delight as mounds of shriviled, grayish meat was served up. My heart leapt at the dull thud of potatoes added to the entre. And when I saw the array of delectable deserts I felt like a little kid in a candy story.

I rushed to the nearest empty seat and began to eat with relish (it took quite a bit of relish to hide the unique flavor of the meal.) After finishing my first helping I longed for more of that heavenly cuisine. Returning for seconds, I found the characteristic smiling face ready to greet me, her hand poised to fill my plate once again.

However at that very moment the clock struck 6:30 (kitchen time; my watch said 6:28). "No seconds after 6:30", she bellowed. Stung with grief (and still weak with hunger) I stumbled numbly back to my seat, got my coat and slipped out to face the cold cruel world once more.

Which One is the Paulist?

It's easy to tell a Paulist. Just talk with him.

The first thing you notice is that he's contemporary. He lives today, but plans tomorrow with the experience and knowledge of yesterday. That's a Paulist characteristic: the ability to move with the times and to meet the challenges of each era.

A Paulist is also the mediator of his age: he tries to bring together the extremes in today's world and the Church, the liberals and the moderates, the eternal and the temporal.

Next, he is very much an individual. It sets him apart immediately. He has his own particular talents and abilities — and he is given freedom to use them.

If you are interested in finding out more about the Paulist difference in the priesthood, ask for our brochure and a copy of our recent Renewal Chapter Guidelines.

Contact lenses are made of modern plastics which have entirely different characteristics than the tissues and fluids of the eye. Consequently your eye cannot handle this foreign object without help.

So, in order to correct for Mother Nature's lack of foresight, you have to use lens solutions to make your contacts and your eyes compatible.

There was a time when you needed two or more separate solutions to properly modify and care for your contacts, making them ready for your eyes. But now there's Lensine from the makers of Murine. Lensine, for contact comfort and convenience.

Lensine is the one solution for complete contact lens care. Just a drop or two of Lensine coats and lubricates your lens. This allows the lens to float more freely in the natural fluids of your eye. Why? Because Lensine is an "isotonic" solution, very much like your own tears. Lensine is compatible with the eye.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the build-up of foreign deposits on the lenses.

And soaking your contacts in Lensine between wearing periods assures you of proper lens hygiene. You get a free soaking-storage case with individual lens compartments on the bottom of every bottle of Lensine.

It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings permits the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and, in some cases, can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine because it's sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Let caring for your contacts be as convenient as wearing them. Get some Lensine . . . Mother's little helper.

Mother Nature never planned on contact lenses

The Weekend Started Off On A Good Note,

The "Drift Inn", set up in the S.U. Lobby was complete with pretty girls selling glassware with the Winter Carni emblem and tickets for the Head Ski raffle.

Winter Carni was officially kicked off on Thursday night, when the students played against faculty in an exciting hockey game. The students won, but everyone put in a lot of effort, as seen in the above picture.

Banjo Band Follows Theme Of "Those Were The Days"

Winter Carni Weekend was ushered in Friday night by the Red Garter Room in the Student Union Ballroom. The entertainment consisted of a Banjo Band, a girl singer, Miss Becky, dressed and singing in the style of a 1920's flapper, old movies, and a few plants in the audience to stir up audience participation. However, the eager UMass crowd needed no provocation to sing and dance along and to generally create an evening of enjoyment for those who brought their own and noisy confusion for those who didn't. For some, the fun of the evening was ruined by the antics of those few who could not hold their liquor. It would seem sad if these few who abused the liberal atmosphere cast any doubt upon the responsibility shown on the whole. Midst all of the dancing, clapping, running over the stage, and falling into tables, the four-piece band, two banjos, a trombone, and a tuba, could be heard playing sing-a-longs such as "When Irish Eyes are Smiling," "Heart of my Heart," "Hello Dolly," and the like, and telling corny jokes which elicited boos and hisses and were quite funny after all. The only real drawback to the evening, aside from over-exuberent segments of the audience, was the small size of the band in comparison to the fuller sound of "Your Father's Moustache" who have played here in the past. All considered, though, Friday night would have to be said a successful evening for the majority of the audience in a weekend that offered something for everybody.

And Ended with Some Better Ones

Bill Cosby is Still a Funny Fellow

The Bill Cosby Show was a low-key, easy-going, spontaneous presentation. The well-known entertainer walked out on stage, cigar in hand, at seven o'clock, with no introduction and proceeded to adlib on the infamous seating and listening conditions of the Cage. He carried on conversations with people in the audience, photographers, the police, the Winter Carni Queen, Diantha Wade, and her Court and was humourous in every instance. After dealing with this spur-of-the-moment humor, including a few allusions to Fat Albert, he then, with the smoothness of a true master, went right into his prepared dialogues. It seemed strange that he did not make use of any of his well-known recorded material, but the dialogues he presented, on such topics as an "urped" (pregnant) chicken and his young days in "Camp Happy" thoroughly satisfied the sell-out crowd and audience enthusiasm slowly built to a peak.

This first show then appeared somewhat disorganized as Mr. Cosby called three musicians to the stage one by one and made them the butt of a few jokes. At the same time, he was looking around and asking for Miss Carmen McCrae, the singer who accompanies him on tour and who had not yet arrived at the Cage. But finally she did come, "after a short performance at Amherst College." According to Miss McCrae, she had been given the wrong directions and had ended up at Amherst College but with her appearance the second segment of the show began. This singer displayed a strong, rich voice, but with limited range in rendering numbers such as "Alfie" and "For Once in My Life."

Cosby returned and the second half of his monologue was more organized, faster-moving, and even more humorous than the first and contained stories explaining the way in which he broke his foot just recently, a lecture on the preference of saying 'Rudy damn' rather than 'God damn', the problems of taking one's children anywhere ("Have you ever seen a father-daughter T.T. room?"), and various comments directed at his wife's Catholic Church. His last act, the funniest of the evening, involved a description of his wife's, Camille's, first pregnancy ('I'll get you for this") and the delivery of his daughter.

Bill Cosby, showing the mastery which has made him famous, kept the capacity crowd in the Cage in good spirits for almost two hours. In his second performance at UMass, Cosby proved that he's still a very funny fellow. In a press conference between shows, taped by WMUA, he spoke on serious issues such as prejudice, the Panthers, and the Vietnam war.

Three Dog Night; Ten Years After Give Standout Performances as Carni Closes

On Sunday night, the Winter Carni Committee presented a fantastic evening of entertainment. The evening performance began precisely at seven o'clock, although there was a delay in the afternoon, and Ten Years After stepped out on the stage. With a few seconds of "settling-down" music, they settled down themselves and began playing some of the best rock this campus has seen. The second number, "Good-Morning Little School-Girl," brought tremendous applause from the audience and allowed for some fine musicianship on the part of Alvin Lee, renowned lead guitarist and leader of the group, and Leo Lyons, bassist. After a few more numbers, equally as good and exciting, a drum solo, "Hobbitt," was given to Ric Lee, who did some intricate snare and tom combinations and some very interesting cymbal work. Again, in the next number, Alvin Lee was featured as he worked out on his guitar using pick, fingers, and microphone stand to build the music up to a deafening crescendo reminiscent of the technique that brought him fame and ovations at Newport last July. Needless to say, it was a tremendous experience to be able to see these performers work out. Their final number, "Going Home," brought applause before they even began and a standing ovation at the end.

After a short intermission, Three Dog Night came on and amazingly enough, this group played and sang with as much spirit and technique as the group before. The harmony and precision displayed by the three singers, Danny Hutton, Chuck Negron, and Cory Wells, were expert in songs such as "Celebrate," "Easy to be Hard," and "Eli's Coming." Not to be out-done, the musicians came through with some heavy take-offs. Drummer Floyd Sneed did a solo, "King Solomon's Mines," that went from drumsticks to using his hands and drove the audience to a standing ovation in the middle of his performance. Organist Jimmy Greenspoon, immediately following, did a spectacular rendition of a "Band" number, "Chest Fever," that again drew ovations from the audience. The final number of the evening was an old Otis Redding song, "Try a Little Tenderness," designed to accent every aspect of Three Dog Night's performing ability, singing, instrumental, and choreographic.

The crowd swarmed around the stage as Ten Years After finished its set on Sunday afternoon.

Student-Run Committee Seeks To Reorganize Economics Dept.

The Economic Laison Committee, formed two years ago, has been extremely active in an attempt to reorganize the economics Department - an attempt that has met with great success.

The committee, in an attempt to "student organize" the Economics department, has had a voice in the hiring of faculty and the creation of courses. It has also been responsible for several opinion polls conducted among the members of the student body in economics. Other major steps in the program have been the scheduling of guest lecturers, in an effort to bring outstanding members of the economic field to this community, a counseling service for economics students, and coffee hours for the students and faculty.

The polls conducted by the committee gathered opinions on faculty, interest in course material, relevance, instructors' grade and exam policies and ideas for future courses. A result of the polls has been the addition of new courses and in many cases a marked change has taken place in individual instructors' methods.

With a membership of fifteen, the liason committee has been able to make great strides in the department. This year's opinion poll has been borrowed by the students in the School of Business Administration wishing to create a similar committee.

When asked how one could become involved in the function of the committee, member Jeff Halpern stated, "We are very interested in new members as several seniors will be leaving in June." Halpern went on to say that anyone interested should attend a meeting Thursday night, Feb. 19 at 6:30 in Machmer 910.

N.E.S. Seeks New Tutors For Springfield Program

The Northern Education Service Coordinating Committee is seeking new blood. In fact, the N.E.S. program is seeking new black blood.

Charges of cultural genocide and general ineffectiveness have been leveled at the program in contrast to program goals of education and self awareness.

The N.E.S. program does bring students from the university face to face with black, brown and white people in economically deprived areas of Springfield. This confrontation and the structure of the program often sends these partially dedicated volunteers away.

A meeting of the N.E.S. Coordinating Committee on Feb. 18 will try to deal with the problems of N.E.S. tutoring and the potential that is there for community involvement by university students. The meeting will be held in the Berkshire Room of the Student Union at 7:30.

Since the present committee membership is small, new volunteers are needed. There will be work in all the areas that a tutorial program needs to be successful from tutor orientation and cultural enrichment to the coordination of transportation.

Although the tutoring aspect of N.E.S. depends upon the individual actions of tutor and tutee, N.E.S. Committee work will depend on a structured organization absolute responsibility to the program. If you are interested in being a part of social action attend this meeting.

There will be an important student-faculty meeting of the School of Home Economics on Wednesday, February 18, at 4:30 PM in Skinner Auditorium. Students will discuss problems in the school first and the faculty will arrive later. Important: please be prompt.

Wrestlers Win N.J. Quadrangular

The UMass wrestling team defeated all three opponents and collected all the trophies as they soundly defeated Monmouth College 31-6, Kings Point Merchant Marine 29-11, and Adelphi 41-5. Final team points which determined the trophy award were U-Mass 108; Kings Point 97; Monmouth 58; and Adelphi 32. Tom Young destroyed all Kings Point's hopes of an upset when he pinned John Barclay in the final round, and then Chris Hodson, wrestling on the varsity for the first time, iced the cake with a 14-8 triumph over the respected Kings Point heavyweight, Tim Lush.

Sheldon Goldberg pinned all three opponents and easily picked up the outstanding wrestler trophy. Goldberg, the only wrestler to pin all three opponents, although Doug Hanson from Kings Point had two pins and a forfeit. Wrestling in the 134 pound division, Goldberg pinned Cook of Monmouth in 4:09; Tarnecky of Kings Point in 7:30; and Casper of Adelphi in 6:48.

Nick DiDomenico had an impressive day in the 118 pound dividion collecting an 18-1 decision over Fineberg of Monmouth; pinning Cavaliere of Kings Point in 3:20; and pinning Lewis of Adelphi in 3:43. Nick received quite a few votes for the outstanding wrestler award.

Dave Reynolds, wrestling at 126, started the morning session with a 6-6 draw with Gramiccioni of Monmouth, then pinned Minicucci of Kings Point in 6:17, and in the evening picked up a fast .39 second pin over Hubner of Adelphi from the bottom position.

Clay Jester represented UMass in the 142 pound class and started the day with a 5:15 pin over Beardsley of Adelphi, then dropped a 4-3 decision to Romano of Monmouth. Jester, still not fully recovered from the flu, forfeited in the evening to Hanson of Kings Point.

At 150 pounds Jim Godkin opened with a tight 1-0 decision over Taylor of Monmouth, then lost another close 2-0 decision to Richards of Kings Point. In the evening Godkin received a forfeit to injured Locast of Adelphi.

Mike Brauner, back in the lineup at 158, dropped his morning match to Seidlecki of Kings Point 9-1, then came back strong to score pins over Tovorotto of Adelphi in 1:40, and Tiedemann of Monmouth in 3:20.

Tom Young wrestling at 167 pounds knew he was in a battle with Benson and needed a takedown in the last seconds of the match to take a 4-1 decision. Benson frequently wrestles at heavyweight. Young then polished off MCCauley of Monmouth with a 5:25 pin, and Barclay of Kings Point in a clutch 3:25 pin.

Bruce Buckbee dropped to the 177 pound class to fill in for sick Tom Andrewes. Buckbee continues to show hustle as he started with a 42 second pin over Helm of Monmouth, came back in the afternoon with a 5-2 win over Holdstein of Kings Point, and finished with a well earned 9-6 decision over Stritlman of Adelphi.

George Zguris, wrestling at 190 for the first time this year, ran into better than average opposition and started with a 9-7 victory over Roy Rogers of Kings Point. Zguris was then pinned by Morris of Adelphi in 2:55, and then lost to Reuveni 6-3 of Monmouth.

Chris Hodson, wrestling on the varsity for the first time, was more than a pleasant surprise in the unlimited division. Chris, who weighs in at 226, met Leffler of Adelphi in the first round and pressed his shoulders to the mat for a pin in 4:55. In the afternoon, Chris completely dominated Fleishman of Monmouth for a 9-1 decision. In the evening match Chris met Tim Lush in a showdown - as Lush had already pinned his opponents in the two previous matches. After two periods it was 4-4, and Chris once had to fight off his back. In the wild third period Chris outpointed Lush 6-4, and added two minutes riding time to come up with a great 14-8 win.

UConn Dumps Frosh, 73-64

The UMass freshman basketball team fell for the second time of the season to their counterparts from UConn Saturday night at Storrs, 73-64. The loss, coming after a victory over the Westfield JV's dropped the frosh's season mark to 5-6.

Although UMass outscored their opponents in the second half, they were not able to catch up due to the 35-24 lead with UConn built up in the first half. Stars of the game for the Little Redmen were Mike Polakoff, with 19 points, Chuck Olsen with 15, and Charlie Peters with 14. These three have been the mainstays of the team all season and have provided a few bright spots in an otherwise lack luster season.

High scorers for UConn were Bill Woolsley, who hit for 22, and Lee Barbach who canned 19. Barbach was the star in the last contest between the two clubs as he netted 12 of fifteen shots from the floor.

Little Redman Coach Peter Broaca was forced to shuffle his lineup due to the loss of Mike McSharry who did not make the trip. Joel Saperstein, who just recently returned to the lineup himself, filled in admirably and chipped in with five points.

Tonight, the frosh travel to Kingston to meet URI. It should be a very tough game for the Little Redmen who were soudly defeated by this same Little Ram quintet earlier in the season. Game time is 6:00.
